Iheya to challenge ¥146,360,000 judgment

Faced with the prospect of bankruptcy if it must pay a court-ordered judgment over a broken construction contract, Iheya Village officials say they must appeal the decision to a higher court.

Naha District Court has awarded a Tokyo waste treatment facility development vendor ¥146,360,000 in its claim Iheya Village wrongfully broke a contract for a new waste treatment plant. The Tokyo company was awarded the contract in 2003, but six months into the contract the village mayor terminated it.

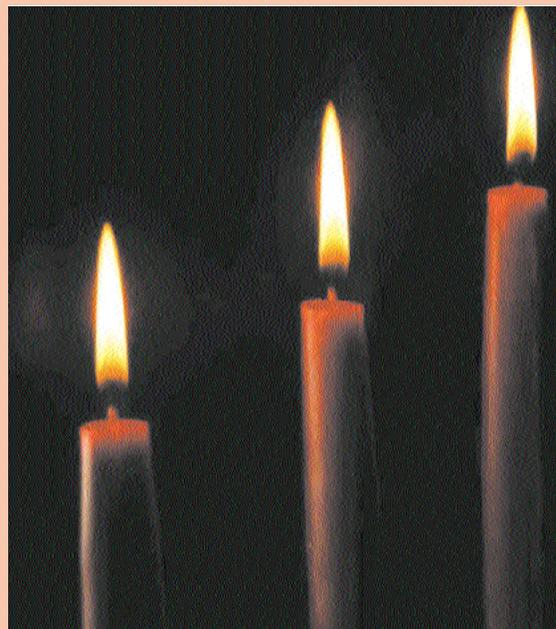

In court, Mayor Shinsuke Nishimine denied any wrongdoing, arguing the contract was never formally issued. The court disagreed, noting the "even the official seal of the village was in the contract paper. The contract was legal." The

Fantastic Okinawa

Group promotes Candle Light Solstice

Residents are urged to switch to candlelight for two hours during Summer Solstice on June 22.

By Bill Charles

The appeal circulating across Japan is for everyone to turn out the lights June 22nd, and light candles.

The occasion is the Candle Night Summer Solstice 2007, a pitch for energy conservation tied to the summer solstice, the point at which the sun is at its farthest point north of the equator. The campaign began in Japan four years ago, with a million people flicking off the light switches and lighting candles as a symbolic gesture against global warming. Last year, more than five million people participated in the evening lights-out crusade.

"It's easy to save energy," says Isamu Jahana, one of the organizers. "Spend time differently from other days, reading a book to children, enjoying a romantic dinner, or even playing card games or listening to music." He says "you can do a lot of things, even without using electricity."

The Japan goal is to engage 10 million people in the Candle Night Summer Solstice, which encourages citizens around the world to power down the electricity from 8 p.m. to 10 p.m. Yayoi Matayoshi, another Okinawa project coordinator, says "if can work if even one person gets involved. We want to expand this project to areas all over the world."

Curbing carbon dioxide emissions is an integral part of reducing global warming possibilities, and it focuses on little things. "If every Japanese household switched to energy saving light bulbs," says Jahana, "it would save as much in fuel costs as it does to

'Elephant Cage' demolition under way

A former U.S. military communications intercept facility in Yomitan is being dismantled.

Heavy construction equipment is tearing down the Elephant Cage, which served as a vital listening post for the American Army for decades, monitoring communications between ships and aircraft in the region. The last of 30 antennas, some 28-40m tall, fell a week ago, and Naha Defense Facilities Administration Bureau officials say they hope to complete the demolition project by late this month. It first tore down the towers ringing the 200-meter diameter Sobe Communications Site, then hauled the antennas into the middle of the 53-hectare site.

Peace activist and land owner Shoichi Chibana, who has lobbied for more than 20 years to get his land back, condemned the government for "shamelessly depriving individ-

Okinawans protest against textbook changes

The Japanese government insistence that school textbooks be modified to alter Battle of Okinawa descriptions continues to draw flack from Okinawans.

More than 1,000 citizens staged an Okinawa rally over the weekend, demanding the Ministry of Education, Culture, Sports, Science and Technology retract its instructions to textbook publishers "correcting" references to suicides during the Battle of Okinawa in Spring 1945. The Ministry in March issued guidance to the publishers, telling them to change the historical references about Okinawans committing suicide, deleting sentences linking Japanese soldiers' involvement.

Members of Okinawa teachers unions participated in the rally, shouting "Don't distort Battle of Okinawa realities", demanding the textbooks keep the current references to the three-month battle. Survivors of the Battle of Okinawa say Japanese soldiers told them to kill themselves rather than allow American soldiers to capture them. Japanese military officials have denied their troops ever told Okinawans to commit suicide.

"I can't tolerate the textbook changes," says Yoko Zamami. "What about people committing suicide using hand grenades given to them by the Japanese soldiers?" she asks. The Education Ministry wants the textbooks rewritten to remove any references to Imperial Army involvement in pressuring Okinawans to commit suicide. The Ministry wants the new textbooks in place before the start of next year's classes in April.

Nearly half of Okinawa's towns and cities have passed resolutions demanding the ministry back off, while Okinawa Prefecture members affiliated with the ruling Liberal Democratic Party are trying to skirt the issue. The Assembly position, said one lawmaker, is that "It's difficult to reach total consensus on historical viewpoints of the Battle of Okinawa."

mayor insists there were only planning documents, but no contract. Nishimine says the seal must have been placed on the contract by a village employee, without his knowledge, "on his own decision without asking me."

The court says "We can't believe this. The staff works under the village mayor. How could an employee stamp papers without asking the mayor or senior village officials. No, it can't".

Iheya Village is appealing to the high court, but says "if we lose to the upper court, the village shouldn't pay. The village mayor should pay the ¥146,360,000 by himself." Village Assembly members and its chairman are also probing the question "Why did the village mayor make contracts with two construction companies in the first place?" They now say the mayor agreed to a contract with the Tokyo Construction Company for ¥800,000,000, but six months later changed to another company whose contract price was ¥1,200,000,000, more than 50% higher than the original contract.

Mayor Nishimine has told the Assembly members he made the company switch because the second company "would build a better quality facility for burning trash." He assured the Assembly he will "take care of this. I'll tell the first construction company and explain it to them." Village residents are joining the Assembly in saying "If he loses in court, we'll recall him."

Many Haarii Dragon Boat races slated for Monday

It's dragon boat racing season, as Okinawa honors the kaijin-sai (unjami) traditions that give thanks to the sea gods.

The kaijin-sai goes beyond that, as participants not only say thanks for past blessings, but seek prosperity and safety in future endeavors. Haarii dragon boat races are a core element of the tradition, and virtually every coastal city, town and village has one sometime during the late Spring or Summer season. Many are on schedule Monday, an auspicious date on the lunar calendar.

Itoman's races begin at 9:15 a.m. Monday at Itoman Fishermen's Pier in the Nishizaki area of Itoman City. Haarii races in Ishigaki City, about 275 miles south of Okinawa's main island, begin at 8:30 a.m. There's also a Haarii dragon boat race series in nearby Miyako.

Other races include the Aharen races beginning at 10 a.m. at Aharen Beach in Tokashiki Village, about 20 miles west of Naha City. Oijima Kaijin-sai takes place on the small Oijima island 7.5 miles southeast of Naha City beginning at 11 a.m., while a 1 p.m. start time is set for Ie Island's Upuguchi Beach, about six miles from Motobu.

Additional races take place at Minatogawa in Yaese and Tonaki.

Yonaguni sets terms for two American warships

Yonaguni Town has extended a welcome to a pair of American Navy ships, with a set of behavior stipulations attached.

The U.S. Navy's USS Patriot and USS Guardian are scheduled to visit the southernmost area of Okinawa June 24th ~ 26th, and Yonaguni's mayor has spelled out the terms for the port call. Morikichi Hokama says the American sailors are welcome, so long as they "take care of residents' feelings. For me, the citizens' minds are very important."

The U.S. Navy, in requesting the liberty call through the Ishigaki City Coast Guard Office and the Prefecture government, said "it's a friendship exchange. We would like to have crew members take a little rest, and for this short rest time we think Yonaguni Town is a great location."

Mayor Hokama agreed, and reminded the Navy it "must be safety first. Everyone must be comfortable." If the conditions aren't accepted, he told the Navy, then the two ships cannot come to his town. The American Consulate in Naha says everything will work well. "They just want to have a few days break, have fun, and make friends with local towns people." The captains of the two ships have asked to have visits with the mayor, and have a party with the local residents.

The U.S. Navy says it also plans to host a dinner with residents aboard the two vessels. There are also plans for a barbecue that would involve all Yonaguni residents, including the children.

The one glitch unresolved centers around immigration inspections. "Even Taiwan ships couldn't come to our harbor because of the Immigration Bureau problem," says the mayor. "We don't have enough service. We don't have any inspections. How can we accept American ships and not Taiwan ships?"

Prosecutors step away from charging American

Japanese police arrested an American man after his stepson was found dead in Uruma City in April, but prosecutors have decided not to charge him.

Robert Deleon was apprehended in the aftermath of his eight-year-old stepson's death. Medical authorities had ruled the boy died of injuries sustained in probable beatings, but Deleon steadfastly denied any wrongdoing.

The Naha District Prosecutor's Office, in releasing Deleon after 20 days detention, said "Robert is denying the charge, and says 'I didn't beat him'." The Prosecutor's Office says it will continue its investigation, and make a decision in the near future about what it will do with him. For the moment, prosecutors say they don't have any evidence, partly because the man's wife and 10-year-old daughter went to the United States after her son's death. The boy's mother is in the U.S. Air Force, and prosecutors say it was difficult for them to investigate without talking to her.

Police, however, say they talked to the woman, and while noting "Yes, my husband was giving very strict education to the boy," he didn't beat him. The daughter also told police "I never saw my stepfather beating my brother."

The case drew island-wide attention after an Uruma City woman stepped forward following the death, telling police she had seen the young boy a few months earlier, barefoot in the winter weather. He told her he was running away from home because "my stepfather beat me. He doesn't like me." The woman, who lived in the neighborhood, took the boy to a department store to buy some warm clothes for him, but the boy refused, telling her "No, no. I can't wear the clothes. My stepfather will beat me again, so I'm alright without clothes."

At the department store, Japanese police were called, but they said they could not be involved. Instead, they called U.S. Military Police, who asked the boy "Did your stepfather beat you?" When the boy told them "no, no. I just fell down," police took him home and did nothing further.

Lil Rob's Chicano Pride Ready to Rock

It is being billed as the Lil Rob 098 Concert in Okinawa, bringing San Diego native Lil Rob to the island on June 29th.

Lil Rob's a Chicano rapper who debuted with an album, 'Crazy Life', in the late 1990's that made him a household rapper name. He popped to the national spotlight in 2005 with his single 'Summer Nights', then moved forward with an album 'Twelve Eighteen Part I'. The sequel is due out soon.

The concert, sponsored by Hip-Hop Paradise, which organizes a variety of hip-hop events, will feature DJ Mannysan. The 9 p.m. concert takes place at Namura Hall in Naha City. DJ 244 and DJ SHO will be playing music, while MC Loco-T, West Sidaz and other MCs will entertain.

Advance tickets for this hip-hop event featuring West Coast and Chicano rap, are on sale for $40/¥4,000 at Hip-Hop Paradise, Dazlaz, Spin City, Wing King and Body Tap. Tickets at the door are $50/¥5,000.

Concert information is available in English at 090-9781-5383, or in Japanese at 926-5078.

Satto specializes in fresh Ishigaki fish

Satto is located on Ginowan bypass.

The interior replicates an Okinawan home.

'Fresh' applies to everything at Restaurant Satto. From local island fish to the tofu, this Ginowan City restaurant prides itself on having everything just perfect. The fish served at Restaurant Satto come from ocean waters off Ishigaki, making it from the water to the restaurant in only hours. It's so fresh, even local fishermen make it a point to dine at Satto.

The atmosphere's definitely Okinawan, from the traditional style entrance that hides the interior from outside, to an interior replica of an old style home. The traditional Okinawan minyo folk music provides ambience, while the bright and polite "Irasshaimase" greeting by waiters and waitresses makes everyone feel right at home.

The colorful selection of fish may be ordered ala carte, or as part of a Gajumaru sashimi set with five different fish, all your choice. The tofu is fresh, made right on the restaurant premises. It's available as a tofu salad with lettuce and pine seeds with sesame dressing, or as soft tofu served with absolutely fresh, crispy vegetables.

Soki soba, an Okinawan soba with pork ribs at ¥680 leads the lunch menu, together with Donburi with topping of choice and soup, drink and appetizer for ¥800. There's also a tofu soup set for ¥750.

Rafute, an Okinawa style simmered pork at ¥600, headlines the dinner menu, along with a loin steak or spare ribs for ¥980, California rolls for ¥650, and Yakitori at ¥280.

Restaurant Satto is near Camp Foster. Take Route 58, passing Kitamae Gate on Camp Foster, then turn right at the first traffic light after the Kitamae Gate. Travel toward Tropical Beach, and turn left at the first traffic light then immediately right on a parallel road. Satto will be on your left. More info at online www.japanupdate.com/restaurants uals of their land", but said he was happy now. The Sobe site was focus of a national debate in 1995 when Okinawa's governor, Masa-hide Ota, refused to approve a central government order to keep it operational. For more than a year, until April 2006, the U.S. facility was operated without legal status.

Once demolition is complete, and debris hauled away, the government will return the property to the landowners. At that point, the 53 hectares of land becomes taxable, just like any other privately owned property.

Bodybuilders called to demonstrate their stuff

The MCCS is looking for a few well defined, good men and women. Entrants are being accepted for the 12th Annual Far East Bodybuilding Competition, coming up in July at Camp Foster. The event is open to soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines from across the Pacific. Civilians and dependents can take a shot at the titles up for grabs in six men's divisions and three women's categories.

Bodybuilders will be judged on presentation, muscular development and symmetry, according to MCCS officials at Gunner's Fitness Center, where the competition will take place.

Registration must be completed by June 29th, and submitted along with a $15 entry fee. Competitors must select a weight class when registering, but may change divisions at the time of weigh in on July 15th. Details are available online, at www.mccsokinawa.com, or from the Gunners Fitness Center, DSN 645-3484.

On Okinawa, NGO Make The Heaven team headed by Rep. Hiromitsu Kibo and Wind Firm Rep. Ryuuichi Nakamura are touting the affect individuals can have. Jahana says Okinawa's "Yes Is Love" group is targeting housewives and students to become involved. Jahana's crusaders point out the a failure to take steps against global warming will result in temperatures rising 6.4 degrees within the coming century. "If we make paper from banana trees, we don't need to cut nature's trees," he says, keeping the carbon dioxide levels lower.

In Tokyo, a coffee shop chain began having a candle light night once a month, encouraging patrons to think about the environment. Now, the candle light nights have expanded to nightly, with Eco-Nights bringing increased sales.

The organizers are looking for volunteers. Jahana

60、父の日 Father's Day

Kitty: Cologne, will you have something for Father's Day on this weekend?
 (コロン、今週末の父の日は何か予定してるの?)
Cologne: Yes! Of course! All of my family come to my house and celebrate Father's Day.
 (もちろん! 家族みんな集まって父の日のお祝いするんだ~!)
Kitty: That's good. By the way, what is your father like?
 (いいわね~! ところでお父さんでどういう人?)
Cologne: Mh, My father is kind of cool. but when he drinks beer or awamori, he talks a lot. He loves drinking.
 (ん~、そうだね~。けっこう冷静なんだけど、お酒が入るとよく喋るんだよね~。すごく酒好きなんだ~。)
Kitty: I see. My father loves drinking also. But not strong alcohol. I will give him "Ukon" as a present for this year's Father's Day.
 (分かるわ~。ワタシのお父さんも大のお酒好きなの。でもあまり強くないから今年の父の日はウコンをプレゼントするの♪)
Cologne: That's a good Idea! My father drinks Ukon with Awamori everyday. It's good for his health.
 (そりゃ~いいわね~! うちのお父さんも毎晩泡盛と一緒にウコンを飲んでいるよ。健康にもいいらしいね。)
Kitty: Right, drinking is fun maybe, but too much is bad for health.
 (そうみたいよね~。お酒は楽しいものかもしれないけど飲み過ぎは良くないものね。)

今週はドーナツを作りました!!
 ドーナツは世界どこにでもある
 おいしいおやつです。
 さあ、始めましょう!

<材料> 15個分

|---------------------|--------------------|
| 1. 薄力粉.....450g | 8. 強力粉.....コップ1 |
| 2. ベーキングパウダー...大さじ1 | 9. 白糖.....適宜 |
| 3. たまご.....3個 | (最後のふりかけに使う) |
| 4. グラニュー糖.....80g | 10. シナモンパウダー...適宜 |
| 5. 牛乳.....大さじ3 | (最後のふりかけに使う) |
| 6. バニラエッセンス...1~2滴 | 11. 油 (出きればオリブオイル) |
| 7. バター.....50g | ...1リットル |

<作り方>

1. 薄力粉とバターは合せておきます
2. バターは前もって室温に出し、やわらかくしておく
3. ボウルに1とバター、グラニュー糖を入れまぜる
4. 別のボウルにたまごを入れ、牛乳、バニラエッセンスを入れ混ぜる
5. 上の3と4を混ぜる。その時に3の材料は5回ぐらいいに分けて4に加えていく。木ペラを使うといい。
6. 上の5の生地をラップに包んで冷蔵庫に40分ねかす。
7. 次に、まな板に強力粉を軽くふって、6の生地を40分後取り出し、ラップをはずして、まな板の上で、手で軽くつぶし平らにし、麺棒で厚さ1cm位にまな板いっぱいにはずす
8. ドーナツ型を利用して型抜きしますが、この型にも小麦粉をつけないと生地がくっつきまますので充分つけること。
9. フライパンに油を入れ160°~165°であげます。ドーナツは焼き上がると浮き上がってきますので、それをひっくり返します。全体がきつね色になったら焼き上がりです。
10. あげたてのドーナツに、白糖とシナモンをまぶしますがその際、白糖とシナモンを紙袋に入れてまぜる。そして袋の口を絞って軽く全体にまぶす。
