Geographical Names Policy

Geographical names in Iran are written in Perso-Arabic script (a modified version of Arabic script containing four additional letters⁴). Names should be taken from official sources⁵ in Persian script and romanized using the BGN/PCGN Persian Romanization System⁶.

Languages

Nearly 100% of Iran's population speak Persian (also known as Farsi, Western Farsi, or Western Persian)⁷, with around 60% of the population speaking Persian or one of its dialects as a first language. The Constitution of the Islamic Republic of Iran states that "the official language and script of Iran, the ¹ The name Iran derives from Ayryanem, meaning land of the Aryans in Old Persian. Prior to 1935 Persia was the official name of the country used in the western world. Iranians themselves have called their country Iran for the last thousand years and in 1935 the then ruler of Iran, Reza Shah, asked the rest of the world to do the same.

² This has been the state title since the Islamic Revolution in 1979 and is the only form used within the United Nations.

³ This is how Tehran is spelled in Farsi. In Arabic it is spelled with a different type of T (طهران)

⁴ These are p (پ), ch (چ), g (گ) & zh (ژ).

⁵ These are widely available in the form of paper maps, atlases and online. Official sources include the National Cartographic Centre (<http://www.ncc.org.ir>) and the National Geographical Organisation (<http://www.ngo-iran.ir/ngo.htm>). Commercial mapping is available from Gitashenasi Geographical and Cartographic Institute (<http://www.gitashenasi.com>).

lingua franca of its people, is Persian. Official documents, correspondence, and texts, as well as textbooks, must be in this language and script. However, the use of regional and tribal languages in the press and mass media, as well as for teaching of their literature in schools, is allowed in addition to Persian.”

Persian is one of the Indo-Iranian languages, a sub-group of Indo-European languages and as such its grammar shares many features with contemporary European languages. The history of the Persian language can be divided into three distinct periods, which are usually referred to as Old, Middle, and New (Modern) Persian. In the past several different alphabets have been used to write Persian but the Islamic conquest of Persia, which began in 633 AD, marked the beginning of the modern period in the history of Persian language and literature, when Persian began to adopt many words from Arabic and began to be written using a modified version of the Arabic alphabet⁸. Article 16 of the Iranian Constitution addresses the subject of the Arabic language, which is the language of Islam, the official state religion of Iran. It states that “Since the language of the Quran and Islamic texts and teachings is Arabic, and since Persian literature is thoroughly permeated by this language, it must be taught after elementary level, in all classes of secondary school and in all areas of study.” Arabic is also one of the seven recognised regional languages in Iran.

Territorial and Toponymic Disputes

1. Gulf Islands

Iran administers three islands in the Persian Gulf which are claimed by the United Arab Emirates (UAE). PCGN recommends using the Conventional names for these islands on UK products and mapping.

Conventional Name	Arabic Language Name	Persian Language Name	Location
Abu Musa	Jazīrat Abū Mūsá	Jazīreh-ye Abū Mūsá	25° 52' 30" N 055° 01' 48" E
Greater Tunb	Jazīrat Ṭunb al Kubrá	Jazīreh-ye Tonb-e Bozorg	26° 15' 50" N 055° 18' 18" E
Lesser Tunb	Jazīrat Ṭunb aṣ Ṣuḡhrá	Jazīreh-ye Tonb-e Kūchak	26° 14' 31" N 055° 08' 50" E

¹² See www.unicode.org

2. Shatt al Arab

The river formed by the confluence of the Euphrates and the Tigris is known in Arabic as Shaṭṭ al ‘Arab (شط العرب) and in Persian as Arvand Rūd (اروند رود). The southern end of the river, which flows into the Persian Gulf constitutes the border between Iraq and Iran. Control of the waterway and its use as a border have long been a source of contention between the Iranian and Iraqi states and their predecessors. PCGN recommends using the conventional English language spelling Shatt al Arab for most general purposes, although on larger-scale cartographic products the name can be shown in its appropriate local form on each side of the river.

3. Persian Gulf

PCGN recommends using the name Persian Gulf on UK products, as this has long been considered the English language conventional name for this body of water, which is a high seas feature, extending beyond the territorial limits of any recognized sovereignty. The Arabian Gulf is an English language version of the name applied by Arabs to this body of water and should not be used.¹³ In UK English this feature is often referred to as The Gulf and this more neutral name can be used when it is clear that it refers to this body of water.¹⁴

Administrative structure¹⁵

Iran is divided into 31 provinces (ostān). These are sub-divided into counties (shahrestān), which are further sub-divided into districts (bakhsh). Each province has an administrative centre (markaz) and is administered by a Governor-General (ostāndār), whose area of responsibility is known as an ostāndārī. Similarly, each shahrestān has a governor, or farmāndār, whose area of responsibility is known as a farmāndārī. A bakhsh is administered by a bakhshdār.

As Iran’s population increases new provinces have been created. In 2004 Khorāsān was divided into 3 new provinces (Khorāsān-e Razavī, Khorāsān-e Jonūbī & Khorāsān-e Shomālī). More recently in June 2010 Alborz province was created from 3 counties (Karaj, Sāvōjbolāgh & Naẓarābād), which were part of Tehrān province.

¹³ The Arabic language name for this body of water is Al Khalīj al ‘Arabī (الخليج العربي) and the Persian language name is Khalīj-e Fārs (خلیج فارس).

¹⁴ In North America the term “The Gulf” is used to refer to the Gulf of Mexico.
