In Your Own Backyard

Mark Winters

How special will it be to begin the new year with an opportunity to play five first class tournaments in your own backyard?

For local senior competitors, the "Desert Circuit" is unrivaled. Not only are the January tournaments played in resort-like luxury, they attract the game's best players from across the country and around the world. Adding to that uniqueness, every event has its own ambiance; its own special feel. Foremost is the organizer's focus on satisfying the needs of participants. This can be seen in the effort to make match scheduling and playing conditions on a par with those on the professional level, along with the player gifts and parties offered.

Play starts with the 16th Monterey to seeing past champions, along with many new participants. Once again, we will have a Men's 40 division. It promises to be a great tournament. Be sure to sign up early. If you have questions, feel free to call me at (760) 346-0679."

Kurt and Ana Haggstrom like what they do and it is obvious in the way they manage tournaments. The 12th Plaza Racquet Club Senior Invitational Tournament, scheduled for January 11-16, means it's show time for Team Haggstrom. "The club's on fire," Kurt said of the facility they have devotedly refurbished over the past few years. "Membership has jumped to more than 300 and I think the tournament will show a similar increase. In January, the weather is great, so all systems will be go. Last year, we gave out gift bags, which we had never done before. They were so well received, we are doing them again. There will also be a Players Party and Ana is planning to make lasagna. Everyone should be ready for a great dinner and a great event."

Haggstrom added, "we are going to hold a Men's 90 singles for the first time, and because so many of the participants travel with their wives or girl friends, we are also having a Combined Mixed 100 and 125."

Washington Mutual, John Henry's Restaurant and Spa Hotel & Resort Casino provide support for the tournament. The Courtyard Marriott is offering a great tournament rate of $99 a night. Call (760) 322-6100 for reservations. The Haggstroms can be reached at (760) 323-8997.

As always is the case, Glenn Erickson and Pam Leong will team up to make the 23rd Palm Springs Tennis Club Senior Championships, January 18-23, a solid affair. Harold Matzner will again play a role in the presentation. Erickson, drawing on his experience as a top ranked player, will make the tournament, "an event everyone looks forward to playing. It's my favorite week of the whole year." Prize money will be offered. For tournament information, call (760) 318-1716.

The Campbell's Mission Hills Senior Championships is the highlight of the "Desert Circuit". Not only is the January 23-30 tournament a USTA Category II contest, it gains elite status because it is organized for the 18th year by Steve and Abby Solomon. It is safe to say there is not another couple in the country who know more about running a senior event. "This year, Ed Trost and Jane Roberson have become an important part of the tournament team," said Steve Solomon, who is vice chair of Marketing for the USTA Adult/Senior Competition Committee. "Their involvement will make the event even better."

With new sponsors, Life Time Fitness and Diadora, joining an impressive group that includes Campbell's, Hawaiian Airlines and BMW, the Solomons earn kudos for the support they garner. They also earn praise for the gifts players receive and the fact they are always looking to do a little more. Said Solomon, "we will have a drawing and Country Club Senior Tournament, January 5-9. Having moved, a few years back, from the final "Desert Circuit" competition, to the kick-off activity, Carl Schroeder is the proud host of a fabulous event. "Since we changed our date, the draws have been larger and the level of play has become very exciting," he said. "We are looking forward

Each year nineteen different Veterans World Team Championships are conducted by the International Tennis Federation at various sites around the world. Due to their popularity and high entry numbers, the Cup competitions are divided into two groups. This year's Super Senior events were held at five different clubs in the Philadelphia area, mostly on grass courts, immediately following the US Open in September 2004.

Almost 750 players, from 33 different nations, participated, making it the largest competition ever held. Size alone created significant operational challenges for the World Championships Organizing Committee (WCOC). At the end of the two weeks of play, US seniors claimed five of the eleven Cup titles and nine out of twelve individual World singles championships. Californians figured prominently in the results.

Results in team events:

We Won

Jim Nelson

Men's 65 Britannia Cup team – Gene Scott, Bob Helton,
Jim Nelson (captain) and Rudy Hernando

In the final round of the Men's 65 Britannia Cup, the US faced Australia on the grass courts at the Merion Cricket Club. I captained the team that included Bob Helton, Rudy Hernando and Gene Scott. Peter Froelich, Bob Howes, Doug Napier and Bruce Rehn represented the Aussies.

In Cup competition, the No. 2 singles match is played first, and Hernando defeated Froelich 6-4, 6-2. He broke early and held serve throughout the first set. In the second, his blistering serve returns and solid groundstrokes overwhelmed Froelich, who was formerly No. 1 in the world.

Scott and Howes faced off in the No. 1 singles. In the first set, all Scott's strokes, particularly his serve and volley, put Howes under continual pressure, leading to a 6-4 win. Howes broke at 2-1 and won the remaining games in the second set. Scott dominated early in the third set and won it 6-2 to give the US the Cup.

The doubles wasn't played because of rain.

In the semifinals against Germany, Hernando lost the first set to Klaus Haas, then won eleven games in a row to score a 4-6, 6-0, 6-2 victory. Scott showed his competitive ability and understanding of grass court play, defeating Bodo Nitsche 6-3, 6-0.

I can't say enough about the play of the entire team. Hernando was outstanding, and Scott, the editor and publisher of Tennis Week Magazine, who has had both hips replaced, was even better. For me it was a thrill to captain the team. I have played on the last five, and the US has now won three in a row.

Challenge Cup

Bob Isenberg

The 19th North-South Super Senior Challenge Cup competition, involving the top Southern and Northern California players in the Men's 65-85 divisions, was played at the Bakersfield Racquet Club. The South scored a 31-23 victory.

Each team in the 65 – 80 age groups consists of eight participants who played four singles and two doubles matches. Both of the 85 teams had three players.

At the end of the first day, the South led 17-10. There were seven three-set matches contested, and the South won all seven, which provided the lead. The second day's matches were even closer. Six three-set matches were played and each side earned three victories. The South escaped with a 14-13 victory for the day.

The Challenge Cup is a yearly highlight for Super Senior players from both sections. All the participants look forward to the competition and the opportunity to spend time with their friends and fellow competitors. Since the event alternates between Southern and Northern California, the 2005 will be held in NorCal at a location to be determined.

Jim Bisch, who leads the Senior Tennis Council, with Betty and Bob Isenberg.

Love The Battle

Judy Louie

If you are a senior tennis player over the age of thirty-five, who has experienced tournament competition and keep coming back, you must love the battle. Depending on the circumstances of your life, you may take lessons, practice two or more times a week, work out in a gym, practice yoga or other disciplines; whatever it may take to become a serious competitor. It all sounds like hard work, but if you are truly passionate about the game, all this preparation can be fun.

As we age, battle scars appear. It seems that almost everyone over fifty has some ache or pain, or has had some kind of surgery and/or wears some supportive or protective brace. Even though it is an enjoyable sport, it can take a toll on the body. That aside, it is important to keep focused on the end goal.

On the east coast, many play on clay or grass courts. In California, it is difficult to find these soft courts. During the first week in September, the United States was privileged to host the International Tennis Federation World Team Championships on the beautifully manicured grass courts in Philadelphia. The second week of September, the Individual World Championships were held on the same courts. The Philadelphia Cricket Club, the Merion Cricket Club and the Germantown Cricket Club were the main venues. Unlike other facilities in the US, the three clubs have a large number of grass courts. (See William J. Kellogg's story on pages 4.)

There were 136 teams from all over the world competing in men's and women's 55 to 85 divisions. The US teams, comprised of the top players in an age group, played very well. The same can be said for those competing in the Individual World Championships. It was inspiring to watch legendary players such as Gardnar Mulloy, who is 91; Dodo Cheney, the 87-year-old who was inducted into the International Tennis Hall of Fame this summer; and King Van Nostrand, 70, who just had a knee replaced. They were amazing. These super seniors, as well as scores of others, sporting all manner of braces and supports, came from all over the world to play the game that they love.

Can't Say Good-Bye

Mark Winters

During last year's Senior Women's Classic, Linda Stude, the event's co-founder with Rhea Savin, who, in truth, is its heart and soul, called it a day "Burn-out", was the reason she no longer wanted to be the event's organizer and tournament director. Having started the Women's Classic in 1994, for the purpose of providing women with a first class competitive opportunity, she watched it become a USTA Category II Championships in 2000. Each year the tournament became larger, while the volunteer support staff dwindled. It became clear to Stude that one person could no longer be responsible for its operation.

Having a full-time job, as Administrator of the Los Angeles County Bar Foundation added to her "it's time to go" mindset. So did the seemingly never ending telephone calls attempting to coax senior women to participate in the tournament. Simply stated, the process was getting her down.

When word got out about the Senior Women's Classic/Stude predicament, tournament supporters pleaded with her to keep it alive. Fortunately, The Paseo Club, a new facility in Valencia, understood the dire circumstances and stepped up. Brad Sceney, the head tennis pro, became the tournament director, allowing Stude to focus on what she does best—organize the event's fund-raiser which benefits the YWCA of Glendale's EncorePlus. The program provides free breast and cervical cancer screening for women 40 or over who cannot afford the tests. In the past six years, the Senior Women's Classic has raised a total of $60,000 for those purposes.

Anne Kellogg

Dina McBride

Sceney's direction, along with the "what do you need us to do?" help offered by The Paseo Club members made this year's tournament, the 11th Senior Women's Classic, a memorable success in its new location. Though rain was the story in the days prior to its start, only one match was canceled because of bad weather. Beautiful blue skies and moderate temperatures prevailed while 155 competitors from Arizona, California, Texas and Washington battled for, as Stude said, "the coveted USTA gold and silver bag tags, prize money (in draws of 8 or more) and various merchandise awards. Every player who entered the event received a goody bag filled with numerous useful items donated by sponsors or provided by The Paseo Club. On the last day of the event, the finals were watched by spectators seated around the Premier America Credit Union sponsored stadium court and several other adjacent courts."

Stude continued, "throughout the four day event, when players were not competing, they shopped for clothing, sporting goods and jewelry at on-site vendor booths, and at the tournament's charity rummage sale. A silent auction was organized to benefit the EncorePlus Program. The final accounting from all these activities is expected to top $9,000."

Laura Ritchey

Marion Tyrell

As a member of The Paseo Club, Stude, was full of praise for those who helped with the tournament. "The volunteers were organized by Nicole Anderson, a club member," she said. "Everyday, they showed up at their appointed times and worked tirelessly throughout their shifts. It was great to see such enthusiasm and dedication." She added, "it was also impressive to see Brad Sceney's cool, calm and collected demeanor as he executed his tournament director duties. I also can't say enough about the club's management, along with members', willingness to welcome the participants with open arms. This was a transition year and many things could have gone wrong. Instead, everything worked out. If The Paseo Club agrees to run the tournament again in 2005, I feel confident that it will be the best Senior Women's Classic ever - an event not to be missed. I challenge every senior woman tennis player to come out next year and prove that great senior women's events are not a thing of the past."

Winter Workouts

Tina Karwasky

With Daylight Savings Time a spring away, many players are now forced to practice after work. It gets dark at 4:30 p.m., if not earlier, which makes it difficult to maintain a good routine. For those unable to get out on their lunch hour, twice a week as I try to do, there are ways to maximize your winter workouts.

Here are suggestions.

- To optimize drill time, fill a large bucket with balls so that you can hit a lot of them in a short period. It is much more practical to reproduce strokes rather than make a few shots then have to pick up balls because you are only using three.

- Set up drills to simulate match play. Working on the volley, always hit the ball to the open court. (How many times in a match have you hit right back to your opponent and gotten passed?) With approach shots, practice hitting down the line. Also, try to approach whenever a short ball is hit. Practice serving at targets. With my women's team at California State University Los Angeles, I put candy inside hoola hoops as a bonus incentive. You would not believe how serves improved when candy was on the line. Run for every ball. This can be difficult, particularly if you've had a hard day at work.

I remember Billie Jean King telling me that when she coached the Fed Cup team, she never let players stand and rally with each other. That's not what happens in a match, but that's what many tend to do – rally and not move. It doesn't serve a purpose to work out this way.

- Make drills competitive, but fun. A drill I do with my team involves having two players at the net trying to keep two players at the baseline from scoring three consecutive points. A point can be won by getting the ball past or over those at the net. Players hitting volleys have to get their shots past the service line.

- Stay focused. There is nothing more aggravating when training than to have a cell phone ring. To keep a partner from going ballistic (and destroying his/her karma) turn the phone off when you're on the court.

- Plan workouts. Talk with friends about things to work on. Set up a schedule as you would business appointments. Write it down so there is no double booking. Have a goal every time you go on the court.

These tips should help during the winter months. I can't guarantee a win at every tournament, but you will be a winner when it comes to enjoying time on the court.

Previously, Jansson was the director of Sports at the Lost Creek Country Club in Austin, Texas.

"With a lot of early entries from around the country, along with those from Belgium and France, we expect the 2005 tournament will be our best ever." For information about a one-of-a-kind tournament, call (760) 325-8084.

Intersectional Play

Mark Winters

The Men's Intersectional Championships were held at the River Hills Tennis Club in Jackson, Mississippi. The Women's 35, 45 and 75 squads scored a trifecta by finishing third in their divisions at Lake Conroe, Texas. The 55 team, captained by Judy Louie, featuring Kathy Bennett-Doss, Yuriko Knoblich, Suella Steel and Dee Williams-Horne gained revenge defeating Southern who stopped Southern California in the final a year ago. Roz King led the 65 competitors, which included Pat Fraser, Georgia Turner, Norma Veal and Penny Winkler, to the championship. This was the section's third consecutive division win.
