In 1973, the International Federation of the Blind (IFB) and the International Association for the Prevention of Blindness (IAPB) began a joint project to provide income-generating activities for persons who were blind or severely visually impaired and who needed cataract extraction. Because the project was developed as a study of outcomes, the people who participated could not be included in the evaluation. In the first phase of the project (1974-1987), 150 patients were operated upon and were followed for at least 2 years postoperatively. Three problems with the study design are discussed: (1) the use of doctors' reports instead of "independent" judgments, (
