The Jacksonville Civil Rights Movement Timeline (JCRMT) is a narrative chronology of organized civil rights efforts led by Blacks and Whites in Jacksonville to significantly end racism, racial discrimination based on skin color, and gain equal rights under the law for Jacksonville’s Black citizens. Although the reactions to these efforts were both tumultuous and violent, the JCRMT was nonviolent and resulted in noteworthy accomplishments. The JCRMT also includes significant racial milestones. The narrative begins in the 1830s and continues to this day.

The struggle for civil rights include 1) a reckoning of endurance under and resistance against those crimes against and infringements upon Black people’s civil rights; 2) efforts to fight racism; 3) efforts to end racial discrimination; 4) the fight for equal rights; 5) beyond the legal struggle, a battle for cultural fairness; and 6) the struggle against white supremacism and racism expressed culturally, either implicit or explicit.

It was the decision of the Civil Rights History Inventory Subcommittee not to include every instance of racial violence and overt racism that did not include a particular response in the progress of Black people’s civil rights. Such instances as lynchings and Klan rallies, in and of themselves, without corresponding civil rights advances, were deemed “injustices too many to name.”

Throughout the timeline, asterisks have been provided for locations where a physical marker might be placed.
1838  Bethel Baptist Institutional Church founded.

1865  Mother Midway Church in East Jacksonville is established as the first African Methodist Episcopal Church in Florida.

1971  In June of 1971, a police officer shot and killed a Black teenager, Donnie Ray Hall, on suspicion of being part of a group that had stolen an automobile. 300 black demonstrators under the local NAACP chapter picketed the Duval County Court House. After the demonstrators dispersed, small groups started looting and burning buildings along Florida Avenue that continued for several days and escalated to other parts of the city. The Community Urban Development Council under Dr. Girardeau began documenting cases of police brutality and harassment and provided this information to Governor Reuben Askew. After a police officer was shot and killed with another one wounded, a grand jury investigated the recent incidents concluding that the actions by the Sheriff’s Office demonstrated proper restraint, but recommended better communication between the police and the black communities.

1971  Jacksonville Urban League Director Clanzel Brown and Jacksonville Black Community Coalition Coordinator Dr. Arnett E. Girardeau brought together more than 50 Black and White Community leaders to form the biracial Council of Leadership for Community Advancement (COLCA). COLCA forms five task forces addressing education, employment, housing, media and law enforcement. The recommendations of COLCA task forces are never significantly implemented. (Note additional references in 1977)

1971  Eddie Mae Steward, on behalf of her daughter, Alta Oveta Mims, successfully sues the Duval County School Board over continued segregation. Mims v. Duval County School Board alleges the county maintains 113 totally segregated schools—89 white and 24 Black—and that the white schools are staffed by white personnel and Black schools are staffed by Black personnel. Steward becomes president of the Jacksonville NAACP in 1972.
