PRIOR TO PARTICIPATING IN COLLEGE ATHLETICS AS A FRESHMAN]

THE PROCESS

- The college recruiting process is a rare industry where both parties are the consumer and the product.
 - College programs are a consumer, as they are searching for the right student-athlete for their program.
 - College programs are also a product. They need to attract student-athletes to their program.
 - Prospective student-athletes are a product. You need to be marketed. As a product, you will be researched by the consumer!
 - You are also a consumer, as you are looking to select a product that meets your needs.

Recruiting – Things to Ask

Athletics

- What positions will I play on your team?
- Describe the other players competing at the same position.
- Can I “redshirt” my first year in college?
- What are the physical requirements each year?
- How would you best describe your coaching style?
- When does the head coach’s contract end?
- Describe the preferred, invited, and uninvited walk-on situation. How many make it, compete, and earn a scholarship, etc.?

Recruiting – Things to Ask

Academics

- How good is the department in my major?
- What percentage of players on scholarship graduate in 4 years? 5 years?
- Are my grades good enough to pursue a specific major?
- How available are counselors and tutors?
- What resources are available to assist me with my studies?
- How often does your team miss class due to road contests?
- How does your team travel to road contests?

Recruiting – Things to Ask

College Life

- How do your student-athletes get acclimated with the rest of the student body?
- Describe the typical class size.
- Describe the typical day for a student-athlete, in-season and out-of-season?
- What are the residence halls like and where will I live as a Freshman?
- Will I be required to live on-campus during all 4-5 years?
- Do your student-athletes attend summer school?
- Where do students go to “hang out”?

Recruiting – Things to Ask

Financial Aid

- How long is the duration of my athletics scholarship?
- What items can't the school cover even if I will be on a "Full Scholarship"?
- What athletics aid is available for summer school?
- What happens if I become injured and cannot play anymore?
- Can I work during the school year? During the summer?

Financial Aid

- Athletics scholarships are awarded in a variety of amounts, ranging from full scholarships (i.e., tuition/fees, room/board, books and cost of attendance stipend) to very small scholarships (e.g., books only).
 - Head Count Sports – Football, M/W Basketball, Gymnastics, W Tennis, and Volleyball
 - Equivalency Sports – All other programs
- Athletics scholarships are generally awarded on a year-to-year basis
- Athletics scholarship awards may be renewed annually for a maximum of five years within a six-year period of continuous college attendance.
- The total amount of financial aid a student-athlete may receive and the total amount of athletics aid a team may receive can be limited. These limits can affect whether a student-athlete may accept additional financial aid from other sources. Ask financial aid officials at the college or university about any other financial aid your son or daughter might be eligible to receive, and how this aid impacts his or her athletics aid limit.

Financial Aid

Besides an Athletics Scholarship, there are other possible sources of financial assistance, including:

- University Academic Scholarships & Grants
 - Contact the University's Admissions and/or Financial Aid office for additional information
- Federal Grants & Loans
 - Complete a FAFSA Application (visit www.fafsa.ed.org to apply)
- Local Community Awards & Scholarship Programs
 - Check with your HS Guidance Counselor for additional information
