We know that disaster recovery can place unexpected demands on an organization's capacity and we are interested in learning more about the challenges and demands your organization may have experienced. Please describe briefly any specific demands your organization has dealt with as the result of your tornado recovery work? In future disasters, how best can the CFMT further support the work of organizations serving disaster victims beyond grantmaking?

The demands placed on our organization's capacity were primarily volunteer based and administrative in nature. Assignments were spread among our existing organizational leadership. Some of the specific demands dealt with becoming familiar with the process of demolition which also includes utility line termination, material sampling and asbestos removal. Another challenge was storage and disbursal of food and clothing resources as well as makeshift housing.

A major challenge has been in the process of demolition and rebuilding. We were not initially aware that the damaged building contained asbestos and required special testing and handling prior to demolition. After demolition we encountered difficulty with the newly formed CDC leadership and had to go through an almost complete restructuring of the board in order to arrive at the current stage of recently hiring the Don Hardin Group, LLC as our Project management company for a 2.5 year investment of work. With this expertise, we are confident our objectives can and will be realized.
