Cold Creek

In the rush of rapids the gray heron lands, his method long crafted on the rock where he stands.
It seems everlasting, his cold eye is casting over shadow and sand.

There is a gray man of similar guile
And the big bass swim for many a mile, to make a run past his rock - to run on or be caught.
And it seems everlasting, his cold eye is casting
Over shadow and sand.

Run cold creek run, south to the sea --
the light of the water is shining through me, Carry me home,
old Tobesofkee.
