A Farmer's Creed

Man's greatest possession is his dignity, no calling bestows this more abundantly than farming. Hard work and honest sweat are the building blocks of a person's character.

Despite its hardships and disappointments, farming is the most honorable way a man can spend his days on this earth. Farming nurtures the close family ties that make life rich in ways money cannot buy.

Farming provided education for life, and that no other occupation teaches so much about birth, growth and maturity, in such a variety of ways.

Many of the best things in life are indeed free, the splendor of a sunrise, the rapture of wide-open spaces, the exhilarating sight of your land greening each spring.

True happiness comes from watching your crops ripen in the field, your children grow tall in the sun, your whole family feel the pride that springs from their shared experience.

By my toil I am giving more to the world, than I am taking from it, an honor that does not come to all men.

My life will be measured ultimately by what I have done for my fellow man, and by his standard I fear nothing.

When a man grows old and sums up his days, he should be able to stand tall and feel pride in a life he's lived. I believe in farming because it makes all this possible.
