

*Farwell words too often part
And cleave with sorrow to aching hearts.
With final wave, all disappears
Beneath the hush of silent tears.
Why can't sorrow be so kind,
As to hide away and stay confined?
And leave us only thoughts of bliss,
Of joyful things to reminisce.
So focus not on sorrows, born
Where happy times are now forlorn,
But instead on joy and merriment
And delight all felt without relent.
And with all the love to fill our hearts,
Sorrow and pain then soon depart.
And although goodbyes are bittersweet,
We can no longer feel incomplete.*
