

In Loving Memory

*Your mom was angel to many here on earth,
She incarnated in body at her birth.
Her wings may have been covered by mortal skin,
But that never dimmed her light within.
She never allowed separation or fear to temp her into
Letting go of what she held most dear.
She loved her children more than you could ever know.
The light that each of you carry sustained her glow.
The thing about angels is they never die
They just spread their wings and continue to fly
So when nothing in life will suffice
except your mother's presence.
Just think of her and you will feel her essence.
When you call her name she will be standing right next to you,
Helping you though whatever it is you need her to do.
Her body may be gone now this is true,
But her love will forever shine through you.*
