

PERFECTLY IMPECCABLE

With a smile so bright you would light up a room,
Your clothes neatly pressed and your swagger well groomed.
The life of the party indeed I must say, when Purnell entered the room he did not come to play.

But eternity called, and the heavens could not wait for your beautiful spirit to reach the pearly gates.

I can see it now you, standing before God, with your head slightly bowed thanking him for his love.

I know you would have chosen to stay here with us on earth, and God knows we'll surely miss you and our hearts will surely hurt.

This to is temporary and the pain it shall not last, we will see you in our dreams and even hear your distinctive laugh.

You were one of a kind who made everyone feel welcome.
Every soul you come across you left an impression thereafter.

To be an impeccable man would truly define just who you were, I could not think of a better person to have written this poem for.

As you are laid to rest today, I know we'll meet again, at heavens gate with open arms you'll be there to welcome us in.

P.S. Because of my mom we met you
Because of your charisma we will never forget you.
You made my daughter's delicious pancakes
And you taught my son to stand up and never be fake!
