IMPERFECT DAD

You were not the tallest dad. You were not the fastest dad. You were not the richest dad. You were the dad that called when you missed us. You were the dad that was not afraid to let your adult daughters know that you were still dad. You were the dad that knew how to fix anything. You were the dad that was filled with knowledge and wisdom. You were the dad that liked to remind us how cool you were in your younger days and that you didn't skip a beat. You were the dad that sung off beat to the radio on car rides. You were the dad that still wore kangaroo hats. You were the dad that had a million corny jokes and would laugh the hardest at them. You were the dad that could not sit still without finding something to fix. You were the dad with an infectious laugh. You were the dad that had the coolest walk and had what you thought were the smoothest pickup lines. You were the most imperfect dad that GOD created perfectly. You were the dad that belonged to us.

Thank you for being our dad!

Love, Daddy's Girls
