Friends and Family

Kenny Sims was a loving and caring man. He was always there when you needed him and helped out anyone when he could. He loved his family and would do anything for them especially his grandchildren. He new how valuable life is and wanted to make a change for the better. There were times that anyone would go to him with their problems and he would tell them the truth like it or not. He would tell you in a minute that "he is far from perfect, but better days are coming." We all knew that he would tell us today, "Don't cry tears of sorrow, I am in a better place now. I have no pain, no worries, and I am free now. Remember all the good times we had and do not dwell on the bad." He was loved and will never be forgotten. — Written by Demetrius Chappell
