

*I watched as death's shadow descended toward me and I thought in amazement, "How can this be?"
For throughout my childhood my heart had felt fear when talk of death's blackness came anywhere near.
Yet as I am engulfed, there's no feeling of dread,
I see it's a window to slip through instead.
Looking through into the mists I can see the friends and the loved ones who preceded me.
All of them waiting to welcome me home,
now suddenly, here I feel almost alone.
I ache to be with them yet something says NO!
Your loved ones on earth do not want you to go.
If only they knew the things I can now see,
They'd not be so sad - they'd be happy for me.
I've cherished each moment of life we have known,
Yet though I will miss you, I've got to go home!*
