The day started out gloomy and wet with rain forecast for much of the day.

However we had a good turnout. Light rain through most of the first start (abandoned race). The weather then cleared off and it was a good day on the water. The both races had a closely packed starts. Though Rob Mayer was not the first to the windward mark he quickly took the lead in both races. The C Scows appeared to have the good positions in both races for the light winds of the day. This allowed them to build leads that held up for the corrected times to place them in the top of the fleet for the event. We had an interesting lesson on course changes during the first race as the race committee changed course but an error resulted in a non display of the course change flag. Also it became obvious that the fleet was not well read up on the change of course rules. Many making the rounding change at the leeward mark when the change should be at the mark that was in the new position (windward). Though the winds were light the racing was good with the team of Rob Mayer and Ed Seacord taking top team honors for the event.
