Human Resources – (Currently (3-1-04) the functions delineated below are performed or monitored by the City's Human Relations Department. There is no Human Relations Commission now, however a Human Rights Commission (HRC) has the task of responding to all issues of bias although it has no enforcement power.) (Consensus 1966)

4. Consideration should be given to methods for strengthening the policy making leadership role of the mayor.

Support of the following City Charter Changes: (Consensus 1972)

1. A considerable increase in the number of signatures required to declare intent to cause referendum petitions to be circulated.

The notification procedure might include prominently posting a sign at the property, easily recognizable from a distance, at least two weeks before the first hearing.

2. Procedures: The League would like to see the format of the Proposed Budget and the Financial Report coordinated to facilitate citizen comparison and comprehension as well as meeting accounting and city finance principles. The League would also like to have significant changes in the budget from the preceding year noted and fully described in the proposed budget.
3. Revenue: The League supports a reduction of the utility tax. When taxes are justified to the public, based on an emergency and earmarked for a specific use, the League supports a sunset clause tied to their adoption. The League supports bond issues for needed capital improvements.

The League supports those measures, which reduce to a minimum the disruption of existing communities and ecological balance. The League also favors the use of existing facilities and rights of way where possible.

NATURAL RESOURCES - WATER

Support of a comprehensive water policy, one that includes the public trust doctrine

STATEMENT OF POSITION – adopted April 2014

The League of Women Voters Kansas City/Jackson/Clay/Platte believes:

Metropolitan area governments should have the responsibility for developing a comprehensive water policy for our communities. Such a policy should include the public trust doctrine* in all decisions, recognizing the state's responsibility to hold water in trust for the benefit of the citizens of the area.

The policy should also:

- Recognize the interrelatedness of ground and surface water.
- Recognize the in-stream value of water.
- Recognize the benefits of water conservation.
- Specify that private rights shall be balanced with the public interest and that the public interest should take precedence in case of conflicts.
- Consider other states' water needs when planning on a watershed or basin basis.

The goals of the metropolitan water policy should be to:

- Assure availability of water for domestic use while maintaining minimum in-stream flow.
- Protect public health and minimize contamination of ground and surface water through appropriate waste (including waste water) management and through appropriate land use policies.
- Manage excess water and reduce pollution through strategies that include flood plain management, soil conservation techniques and control of urban runoff.

Metropolitan water policy should consider agricultural development and industrial development but these should not be fostered at the expense of other interests.

Implementation of metropolitan water policies requires:

- Data sufficient to identify problems and to make and document decisions needed to meet water needs.
- Comprehensive water plan within which alternatives may be weighed and decisions made.
- Coordination and communication among community, state and local agencies and other concerned interests, including the public.
- Delegation of specific tasks and activities, with clear lines of responsibility and authority.
- An administrative mechanism for resolving disputes among competing interests.
- Funding adequate to assure responsible development and implementation of metropolitan water policies.

*The public trust doctrine concerns certain property deemed to be held in trust by the state for public use, including the beds of navigable watercourses. Under the public trust doctrine, such streams "shall forever remain public highways" except for the overriding right of Congress to regulate commerce.

The responsibility of the state as trustee of such property is the heart of the doctrine.

TIF POSITION STATEMENT- Consensus 2020 (Approved- BOD Jan. 9, 2020 Pending Adoption)

The League of Women of Voters of Kansas City/Jackson/Platte/Clay Counties recommends the following actions and considerations as part of the approval process for public financing (i.e., TIF or other similar funding mechanisms):

Administration and Oversight

1. All corporations, companies, partnerships, LLCs, or other entities be thoroughly vetted for financial ability to complete the project both with and without public financing; when necessary tracing a subsidiary back to the parent company or LLC to the owners.
2. The officers, management and if applicable, subcontractors be vetted with a background check, generally matching the city's hiring practices.
3. Term of public financing mirror the ascendancy of a building's value and stop at generally no longer than 10 years. This would allow the city to continue collecting tax revenue for a portion of the building's more valuable lifespan.
4. The term "blight" as a condition for public financing be applied and used narrowly (poverty, life expectancy and high crime areas).
5. Provide routine, transparent, easy-to-understand reporting mechanisms, such as quarterly, semiannual or annual reports to determine if a project is meeting its goals and objectives. Include clawback provisions to be implemented if projections aren't met.
6. The overall well-being of residents, including social service agencies that provide services be considered a vital component of any public financing project. When a developer benefits, so should the community at large.

Social and economic justice

7. Place high value on quality of life indicators, such as access to different modes of transportation, environmentally sustainable construction, low- and moderate-income housing, workforce preparedness, second chance programs, hiring veterans, MBE/WBE.
8. Require a creative Community Benefits Agreement (CBA), typically a contractual part of any public financial incentive agreement, such as TIF, that spells out specific benefits to accrue to the neighborhoods or community at large. A CBA project must allow voter registration and citizen initiative petition drives. A CBA also could include a significant (or annual) contribution to the City Housing Fund. (Lucas, 2019)
9. Property tax recipients are encouraged to work together and develop a joint community benefits agreement (template) to show how they can be a part of the upside of area development.
10. Those seeking public financing, including their representatives, declare city and council campaign contributions and gifts for the prior ten years.
