Breckenridge opened Peak 6 on Christmas Day 2013, representing one of the largest and most notable ski area terrain expansions in North America in the past decade. The opening was one of the most important landmark events in Breck history, as the resort added over 540 acres to its famous landscape via the Peak 6 expansion. Peak 6 includes 400 acres of lift-served terrain and 143 acres of hike-to terrain, representing a 23% increase in the resort's skiable acreage. This expansion features high-alpine, intermediate bowl skiing – a rare find in North America.

Keystone Resort is one of those resorts where you can't see much of the mountain from the front side. Once you get up there you realize there are three huge mountains with endless stashes of powder, an extensive network of high-speed lifts, including two gondolas, very few traverses, and even hike-to bowl skiing. On the front side, Keystone Mountain has long cruisers and steep tree-covered skiing; the North Peak has long bump runs, steep blue groomers and fresh powder days after a storm in the trees off Bullet. The Outback is simply a Mecca for tree, bowl and bump skiers. With a five out of six day ski pass, enjoy the diverse terrain of Keystone right in your backyard or take advantage of the other resorts and the transportation included with the Vail Resort Pass (Vail, Beaver Creek, Arapahoe Basin, Breckenridge and of course Keystone).

Arapahoe Basin is the 67-year-old legend offering some of the highest skiable terrain in North America. Half of the mountain is above timberline with open bowl skiing and snowboarding through spring and into early summer. One of its signature runs, Pallavicini, is one of Colorado's longest and steepest trails. Arapahoe Basin opened Montezuma Bowl in the 07/08 season. This 400-acre expansion was done with minimal impact and increased the ski area's terrain by 80 percent. A quad fixed grip lift was built in the summer of 2007 which transports skiers to the summit.

At The Inn at Keystone you're within minutes of an unforgettable ski experience. Ideally located, The Inn at Keystone is close to some of the most enticing slopes in the Colorado Rockies and within walking distance of the Mountain House Base Area, where you'll find ski lifts and skier services such as day care and ski instruction. This is the place to stay if you enjoy picturesque views and rooftop hot tubbing! After a day in the snow, come inside our cozy lobby and warm your fingers by the fire. Enjoy dinner with a view at the Black Bear Grill.
