Families in Transition

Families in Transition is a Parent Education program using the Assisting Children through Transition (ACT) curriculum. The program is designed to help parents separating from their spouse or partner or going through a divorce understand the impact their actions have on their children.

- Parents may attend independently or via court order or referral.
- Designed to reduce conflicts so they may effectively parent apart without negative effects on children.
- Parent handbooks and informative handouts are included in the program.
- Experienced and trained facilitators present the material in evening or Saturday sessions equaling 4.5 to 5 hours. Sessions will include a legal presentation examining the legal aspects of divorce and custody.
- Court ordered or referred parents must attend both sessions.
- Parents will not be enrolled together in the same class.
- Classes will be held in various locations. All locations are secure as safety precautions are considered.

A Child's Rights:

Children have rights to peace.....

Children have the right not to be caught in the middle of their parents' conflict nor to be asked to choose between parents.

Children have rights to role models....

Children should not have to hear the "bad things" about the other parent nor to be questioned after visitation.

Children have rights to be heard.....

Children have the right to choose whether to express their feelings or not.

Children have rights to love....

Children have the right not to have to feel guilt for loving both parents.
