Voting While Hungry: Food Insecurity and Democracy

by Annie Lessem and Denice Walker

In the current political climate, thoughts of how to safeguard American democracy tend to focus on how to ensure that the right to vote is upheld for all citizens, removing big money in politics, addressing gerrymandering and redistricting policies and, perhaps most significantly, discussions of how to prevent voter suppression. The focus can also include conversations about improving Americans' understanding of civics and how the basic processes of democracy work in our country, and encouraging a wider diversity of Americans to run for office. But what is lost, or overlooked, in this emphasis on access and process?

In keeping with the League of Women Voters' history of expanding our understanding of how to make democracy more receptive and responsive to the needs of all Americans—of “making democracy work for all”—the LWVBC’s Social Policy Team is working to insert the issue of food security into this conversation. Specifically, we seek to broaden our thinking about voter suppression to include issues like food security, that could “suppress” voter participation.

What is “food security” and how does it relate to making democracy work for all? Food security, as defined by the United States Department of Agriculture, means access by all people, at all times, to enough food for an active, healthy life and includes at a minimum: (a) the ready availability of nutritionally adequate and safe foods and (b) the assured ability to acquire acceptable food in socially acceptable ways. ## President's Letter: Local Action on Global-Level Issues

This has been a busy election season for the League and its members. We facilitated 5 candidate forums, which were very successful and well-attended. We also conducted our last voter registration drives and ballot issue presentations in October. A big thank you goes out to all of the volunteers who helped with these election activities!

October has been an interesting month to be President of the League of Women Voters of Boulder County. In addition to preparing for the November 7 election and tracking campaign finance issues in local races, I've had the privilege to represent LWVBC on important international issues related to women and democracy.

For example, on October 24th, I spoke (along with LWVBC member and intern Rossanna Longo Better) on behalf of LWVBC to the Boulder City Council in favor of a resolution to support the United Nations Convention on the Elimination of all forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW). CEDAW is basically a bill of rights for women around the world, and LWVUS has long supported it. The original resolution was passed by the United Nations General Assembly in 1979, and ratified by all but 6 countries (the U.S. is one of the 6 countries that has not ratified). The resolution passed, thanks to major efforts by the "Cities for CEDAW" campaign. Our LWVBC Board voted to support "Cities for CEDAW" in 2016, and the cities of Louisville and Lafayette have recently passed similar resolutions.

It was also my privilege to represent LWVBC with young people from Ukraine, who were visiting the area thanks to the Longmont Rotary and the Open World program. They were interested in learning about how nonprofits in the U.S. engage with youth in their communities to help promote civic education. It was a very interesting experience, dealing with a translator and making the mistake of mentioning the Electoral College...which brought about a lot of questions about this confusing process!

I thank you all for the opportunity to represent such a fine organization, and look forward to seeing you at LWVBC events lined up for November.

Immigration: League Partnerships on Policy Advocacy

LWVBC has formed and fostered partnerships with many organizations and networks over the years, on a wide range of issues, to build more power for advocacy on policies that align with our positions, and to support the capacity of other groups who share our vision for a strong democracy. One recent example of this partnership, is t LWVBC’s new membership in the Colorado Immigrant Rights Coalition (CIRC). Participation in CIRC enables League members to take action for immigrant rights policies alongside people most directly affected by these policies, in Boulder County and across the state.

On October 13-15 CIRC held its annual Assembly, to which our intern Rossanna Longo Better was a LWVBC representative. Rossanna was able to attend workshops, interview CIRC leaders and members as part of her joint internship with LWVBC and KGNU; and, with input from our LWVBC President and Social Policy Team leaders, vote on what issues should be CIRC priorities in the coming year. “I was proud to represent LWVBC at this Assembly,” said Rossanna. “CIRC is a perfect ally for League on immigration issues.”

Youth leaders and participants at the CIRC Assembly

Two key priorities that arose from the Assembly, are 1) advocating for proper funding and implementation of SB251, for a more efficient process for immigrants to obtain drivers’ licenses or other legal identification, which is key to their productive engagement in communities; and 2) promoting the Values Act, a bill that passed in California to prevent state and local funds for deportations that would separate families, or otherwise divide state residents on the basis of race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, religion, and the like. Both of these options, says LWVBC President Peggy Leech, are aligned with our LWV national position on immigration. LWVBC also supports the Dream Act, which we will continue to track at the federal level.

If you are interested in getting involved in LWVBC’s Social Policy Team to help share information about immigration with our members and enable us to take action at the state and federal level with CIRC and other partner groups, contact Social Policy Team Leader Annie Lessem at quixotic.meow@gmail.com or by phone at 720-263-2201.

Voter Services: Election Season Wrap-Up

by Susan Saunders

Voter Service activities for the LWVBC in 2017 have been numerous and varied. Following the great framework for voter registration drives (VRDs), created by Jeanine Pow, we conducted VRDs in high schools, farmers' markets, community colleges, festivals and senior residences. Over 30 volunteers took the training, signed up for the events and took care of the registration needs of many citizens. Adding to our service as registrars, the events were transformed into opportunities to educate the public about LWVBC positions and advocacy.

Our candidate forum expertise carried us through events for the Boulder Valley School District, the cities of Boulder, Lafayette, Longmont and Broomfield, which came seeking our help with their first forum. Kudos to Liz Nick for steering so many events to successful conclusions, including two on the same night. Very special thanks to our Perspectiva Forum partners Rebecca Chavez, Laura Zavala, Jennifer Diaz-Leon, Victor Hernandez, Louie Lopez, Manuela Sifuentes and Mardi Moore. Appreciation was expressed at each forum for the League's ability to manage the large numbers of candidates and to keep things civil; "the best forum we've been in this fall," said more than one candidate.

For their work as ballot issue writers and presenters, my hat's off to Anne Norwood for steadfastly covering Boulder and this year's 6 ballot measures and to our writers, Holly Monkman, Brian Long, Carolyn Elliott, and Grace Peng who each covered several ballot issues. Peggy Leech and Diana Haskell joined the writers as they also stepped up to make presentations to groups in each city and some senior residences, and Diana ably managed the vote411 website.

Thanks to ALL our fabulous volunteers (with sincere apologies to anyone we've forgotten)!

Money in Politics: Local Campaign Finance Concerns

Think dark money and campaign finance issues are only important on the national level? Think again! This past month, community residents and groups have raised concerns about campaign finance activities including organizations' contributions and reporting processes, that may be violating the law, or the spirit of the financing law in the City of Boulder; questionable ties between oil and gas companies and Broomfield candidates; and the benefits of public transparency on spending in Longmont.

The League of Women Voters of Boulder County (LWVBC) is grateful to the local press for focusing on the appearance of big money in local politics, including in Boulder, Longmont and Broomfield. The LWVBC takes particular interest in campaign finance regulations, in part because the League participated in the initial effort to publicly finance City of Boulder elections. The League believes that sound, enforceable election laws make for a vital and effective democracy.

Transparency in campaign financing and spending, is important for fair elections. And, information on campaign funding and spending by candidates in Colorado is at your fingertips! Visit the Colorado Secretary of State's TRACER website, and each city government website for election information including filing and reports, violations and complaints. And visit the LWVBC's Campaign Finance Reform site for a wide array of non-partisan information, analysis, and action opportunities.

Piya Mahtaney, author on food and globalization, poses this question on the relationship between food security and democracy: “Ask yourself a simple question: can those who remain hungry and undernourished be described as free?” To reframe this questions, consider how (and why) it is that we expect a single mom with a child and a minimum-wage job to find the time and energy to be a regular participant in the voting process, when she is struggling day-to-day to make her paycheck cover her and her child's basic needs – including good, nutritious food. How is a father working two jobs in order to keep a roof over his family's head and food on the table, going to find the time and energy to vote? How would any of us in the same situation find the time, the energy or even the desire to exercise our democratic rights? How can we expect anyone to vote on an empty stomach?

Our focus on this issue, then is to address the reality of food security in Boulder County and to investigate the range of policies that impact the availability of affordable and nutritionally appropriate food for our fellow community members. What are the systemic issues that block access by members of our community to healthy, nutritious and affordable food?

Join us for two meetings to take on this issue. We will be showing the movie A Place at the Table at 2:30 on Saturday, November 11 at St. Andrews Presbyterian Church, 3700 Baseline Rd., Boulder. One week later, on Saturday, November 18th we will be holding a Community Conversation at 2:30, also at St. Andrews. This event will include a panel of experts on food security issues and policies in Boulder, in Colorado and in the United States, and will address questions that arose from the movie. ****
