

Galloway Law Group PLLC is Growing

Bruce C. Galloway has served the legal needs of the Lake Stevens community and neighboring areas since 1986. He has served as a life-long teacher and mentor and has trained non-lawyer apprentices to become lawyers for nearly 20 years. His practice naturally grew as a result and he formed the Galloway Law Group, PLLC in 2009. Another decade later, the Galloway Law Group was composed of Bruce C. Galloway and his partner Peter C. Rudolf, their current Rule 9 legal intern Sarah Propst, office manager Caiti Huffman, and legal secretary Carmen LaClaire.

Galloway Law Group, PLLC provides legal services in most civil law matters relating to real estate and business law. Practice areas include (but are certainly not limited to) land use, subdivisions, and development; neighbor and boundary disputes; water, utility, easements, and other property rights; construction contracts, defects, and litigation; Home and Condo Owners Association organization, amendments, and management; business creation, development, administration, and formalities; bespoke contracts, purchase and sale transactions, and unique escrow services. From those practices naturally flow estate planning services, POAs and Trusts, probates and probate alternatives, and other wealth management advice. More recently, attorneys joining the group now also practice family law, custody, and other domestic matters; employment law, consumer protection, unfair and deceptive practices; and experience in pre-litigation conflict resolution methods.

Galloway Law Group (GLG) expansion continues, growing the practice to assist its neighbors and community by providing sound legal advice and advocacy. In 2020, GLG welcomed two additional attorneys, bringing richer base of experience to the community. Please welcome Ryan S. Mathisen and Adam T. Strand.

Ryan Mathisen, his wife, two children, and dog recently relocated to Lake Stevens. Before joining the Galloway Law Group, Ryan clerked for Justice Charles Johnson of the Washington State Supreme Court. Ryan also worked as a Judicial Operations Assistant at Snohomish County Superior Court before attending law school. Ryan graduated summa cum laude, and in the top 4% of his class, from Seattle University School of Law. There, Ryan acted as lead article editor for the Seattle University Law Review. He interned at the Fred T. Korematsu Center for Equal Justice and summered as a law clerk at an employment law firm. Ryan's experience spans a wide variety of industries: building materials, construction, corrections, retail, and real estate. Ryan also trained and volunteered as a mediator for the Volunteers of America Western Washington Dispute Resolution Center. Ryan's broad base of experience allows him to better understand his clients and help them reach their goals.

Adam Strand and his wife reside in Lynnwood. Adam graduated from Seattle University School of Law and was admitted to the state bar in 2014. After law school, Adam served as a judicial law clerk in Snohomish County Superior Court for two years, during which time he became integrally familiar with issues surrounding both civil and criminal litigation. Adam entered private practice in 2016 and focused primarily on family dissolution, child custody, and support matters. Adam's busy practice required hundreds of courtroom appearances in Snohomish, Skagit, and Island Counties, as well as local Tribal Courts, where he advocates for clients in both contentious and peaceable matters. Adam is a highly effective counsel, presenting contested motions, and litigating numerous multi-day trials and arbitrations each year. His clients consistently commend his ability to process a complex dilemma, quickly craft a detailed plan of action that accounts for a variety of contingencies, and most importantly, execute that plan in a way that controls variables and maximizes a potential positive outcome for the client. Adam thrives in fact-rich, fast-moving scenarios, and prepares his clients well for many outcomes. Adam believes that taking time to develop and maintain a close relationship with his client is of the utmost importance and critical to his success in court. His practice now evolves with the Galloway Law Group, where he is excited to apply his wealth of litigation and alternate dispute resolution experience to this community's general civil litigation needs.
