Holiday Message

Happy holiday season to everyone. I know how busy everyone is at this most joyous time of the year. I hope everyone has had the opportunity to spend quality time with their friends and loved ones. This has been a very hectic year for everyone in our industry, especially the early autumn months. I want everyone to know just how proud I am to be a member of this brotherhood of utility workers. The hardships that we faced this year as members of a utility company or in our own private lives has shown what kind of people our communities can count on during a time of hardship or natural disaster. We are often called the unsung heroes. People often don't think of what we do unless there is no water, or the sewers don't work. I think that changed after Hurricane Irma devastated our communities this year. I have never been thanked as much as I was those few days following the landfall. I ate many meals beside my fellow employees at our community churches. We were very fortunate that our community made sure we were taken care of while we put things back together. So, this holiday season I would like to thank the towns and cities across Florida for taking care of us as much as we have taken care of them. Have a wonderful holiday season and a great new year.

Scott T. Edson
