The Navigator

A neighborhood-based organization of paid staff, volunteers, and vendors supporting Southwest Waterfront and Navy Yard residents who wish to age in place.

Issue 3

March 2017

Board of Directors Corner: Wes Ven Johnson

Neighbors:I am the newest member of the Waterfront Village Board of Directors, completing the term of my neighbor Renee Feder as she leaves us for sunny California. I am honored and thrilled to be serving on the Board, surrounded by talented and passionate board members who are committed to keeping the Southwest Waterfront and Navy Yard neighborhoods as the best places to live in D.C.

Volunteer Profile: Ranada Davis

Fellow Villagers:

I was part of the first volunteer orientation class and initially started with helping a blind member read his mail each week. Since then, I've helped several other neighbors with a variety of tasks such as filling out financial and legal paperwork, consulting on home modification projects and even simple things like changing a lightbulb. With a background in construction, the home modification consultations seem to be my specialty.

I was born in northern Wisconsin (Go Pack Go!) and grew up outside Chicago. After college, I moved to the DC area and started working in the commercial construction industry.

Construction management has been my career for over 13 years.

After living and working in the suburbs for eight years, I decided that I wanted to move to the city. I had been to the DCRA office on Fourth Street, S.W., for building permits before, and liked what I saw of the Southwest neighborhood. I rented a condo at Waterfront Tower (Third & M Streets) and moved to Southwest in 2011.

After a little over a year at Waterfront Tower, my future husband and I decided it was time to look for a larger place to move into together. We looked all over the city and eventually ended up moving right across the street to a townhouse in the Carrollsburg community, which is where we still live today.

Over the years, I've thought about volunteering, but never found a good fit. I've also seen my family members struggle with aging in place and how tasks that were once simple had become much more challenging. When the first meeting to discuss the idea of the village took place, I was really excited about the prospect of having this in the neighborhood and knew it would be the perfect volunteer opportunity for me. As soon as I heard that the village was launching, I emailed Executive Director Bob Craycraft and asked if he needed volunteers.

As I'd anticipated, it was a great fit for me. Volunteering has been fun and rewarding and the flexibility makes it easy for me to be involved. Another benefit of being a volunteer is that I've met a lot of neighbors who have lived in Southwest for quite a long time and as the neighborhood grows and changes in the next few years, it's nice to be strengthening the sense of community that has made Southwest so special to me.
