ISM Central OH, APICS, and CO-OPP presents:

The Future of Supply Chain IT: How Multi-Enterprise Business Networks, Blockchain and Artificial Intelligence (AI) are being Leveraged across the Supply Chain

Presented by Shari Diaz

The pace of business has never been faster, and the strategic importance of an efficient supply chain has never been greater than it is today. There is no such thing as a back-office-only function. Every employee in your organization, and in the organizations that you partner with, must be operating in lock step with one another, must be data-driven, and must be singularly focused on delighting the customer.

At this meeting, we'll cover 5 trends that IBM sees shaping the future of supply chain. We will address how the supply chain IT landscape is evolving with the emergence of Multi-Enterprise Business Network (MEBN) solutions, and how Blockchain and AI are being leveraged across the space to drive collaboration, informed, efficient decision-making and automation.

Shari has 19 years of professional experience, 16 of which with IBM spanning Sales, Customer Fulfillment, Procurement, Global Business Transformation, and most recently Watson Supply Chain Offering Management. She is a global program director, and has deep expertise in supply chain program/project/operations management, eCommerce/B2B trends and technology, and strategic sourcing/negotiating. She has extensive experience in Retail, Utility, Industrial and Airline/Travel industries. With degrees/experience in both business and engineering, her passion is problem solving and process improvement, using data-driven decisions and continuous improvement methods. Her current focus is building out the IBM Supply Chain AI, Blockchain and IoT strategy.
