What is Dressage?

Think of dressage as horse dancing – it's all about harmony, precision, and correct training so that any well-prepared horse can shine. Riders follow a set "test" at each level, performing specific movements that judges score for accuracy, suppleness, and partnership.

In New Zealand, there are ten progressive levels, from beginner to advanced, with special classes like Musical Freestyle (dressage to music), young horse tests (ages 4–7), and even Prix Caprilli (dressage with small jumps!). At the top are the FEI international tests, used all over the world.

Events take place in standard-size arenas (40m x 20m or 60m x 20m), with clear rules on dress, tack, and equipment – all overseen by ESNZ Dressage.

What is Show Jumping?

Show jumping is like an equestrian obstacle course – fast, exciting, and precise. Riders must guide their horse over a set of colourful jumps in the right order and inside a set time.

Knocking a rail, refusing a jump, or going too slow earns penalties. The winner? The one with the least faults and the fastest time (or the most points in certain formats).

It's a brilliant showcase of a horse's power, agility, and carefulness – and the rider's skill in balancing speed with control.

What is Show Hunter?

Show Hunter is the art of jumping – smooth, stylish, and consistent. The aim isn't just to leave the rails up, but to show beautiful technique, an even rhythm, and accurate riding.

Riders work to meet a set number of strides between fences, keeping the round looking effortless. It's fantastic training for building a soft, balanced partnership and has launched many future champions.

It's a sport for all ages – from kids to riders in their 70s – and runs in 20 regions across New Zealand, making it a true grassroots discipline with a warm, welcoming vibe.

What is Eventing?

Eventing is the ultimate equestrian triathlon, testing versatility, endurance, and partnership. It combines dressage, cross-country, and show jumping – all counting towards one final score.

- Day 1 – Dressage: Show off balance, rhythm, and harmony in a set pattern.
- Day 2 – Cross Country: Gallop over solid, natural obstacles within the optimum time – an adrenaline-packed test of bravery and stamina.
- Day 3 – Show Jumping: Finish with a round in the arena, aiming for precision and control after the rigours of the cross country.

Shorter CCN-S (One Day Events) pack all three phases into a single day, while the top-level CCI-L (Three Day Events) are the ultimate challenge for horse and rider.
