The whole Bible is about Jesus.

It takes tents, sleeping bags, and a lot of food for Peter Station* to get out in the remote areas of his East Asian country—the places where the herdsmen live. He throws all his gear in the back of an SUV, drives several days into the wilderness, and camps beside them so he can share the gospel with them. Sometimes they'll choose to follow Jesus, and Peter will make plans to come back and start teaching them more about Jesus. And then when he drives out there again, there's nothing but grass. They're gone.

That's one of the hardest things about reaching the herdsmen, a people who live off the land and move often with their herds of cattle. But Peter won't stop—he knows he can't until there are followers of Jesus all over the land where they wander. And over time, Peter gets to see Jesus change people. "We've been able to see herdsmen come to know Christ, to accept Him," he said. "We're able to see baptisms in the middle of the wilderness and people being discipled."

Most of the people in this part of East Asia do not know about Jesus. But more and more people are hearing about Jesus and more people are choosing to believe! They are even starting churches. Sometimes they pack up their churches and move, just like they move their houses!

Let's pray and thank God for sending missionaries to tell the people in these pictures about Jesus.
