

Botswana was the first country in Africa where David Livingstone served and explored. He drew maps of many rivers that ran through Botswana.

David Livingstone spent a lot of time exploring the Zambezi River, which runs along six countries in Africa.

Victoria Falls is a waterfall along the Zambezi River in Zimbabwe. David Livingstone was the first explorer to find the falls. He named the falls after Queen Victoria.

David Livingstone believed that God called him to explore so that he could tell people about Jesus and work to end slavery in Africa.

David Livingstone

As David Livingstone explored Africa, he hated that people owned slaves and forced them to work. Everywhere he traveled, he saw slaves working and many were mistreated.

David believed that God created all people in His image and loved all people equally. He taught people that slavery went against the Bible and was sin. He wrote letters, journals, and books to convince people to stop slavery.

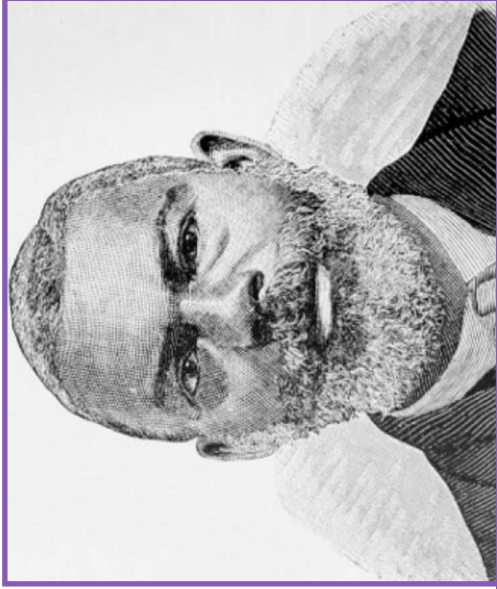

Many people remember him for the work he did to stop the slave trade in Africa. After he died, a statue was made in his honor. The David Livingstone Memorial is at Victoria Falls in Zimbabwe. David Livingstone discovered the waterfalls and named them after Queen Victoria of England.

This is the story of George Liele (LIGH-uhl). George was born a slave in Georgia. George grew up hearing about Jesus from his family and church. He accepted Jesus as his Savior and Lord when he was 23 and was baptized by his pastor. After he became a Christian, his owner gave him his freedom so that he could become a preacher.

George became the first ordained African American preacher in America, and he started the first African American church. He preached in plantations in Georgia and South Carolina, before a friend helped him move to Jamaica.

In Jamaica, he became a missionary to the slaves and led hundreds of people to the Lord. He told people that once they knew Jesus, they needed to tell others and he encouraged people to become missionaries to other countries. He also worked to end slavery in Jamaica. He taught all people how to be free in Christ.
