

1 I live deep in the jungles of Brazil. The people from my tribe do not go to the city very often. One day, my father told me that we would go to town to find some tools that we need in our village. I was very excited to go on this adventure.

2 My father and I carried our canoe to the river. The river would take us close to the city. We had to be very careful of snakes and crocodiles. On our trip, we ate dried meat and fruit.

3 After we stopped the canoe, we walked several miles into the city. I had never seen so many buildings, people, and cars. There were also many lights. The only lights at night in my village come from the moon, stars, and fires that we keep lit for cooking.

4 My dad traded some crops from our village for tools that he needed. A kind woman and her husband smiled at me and offered me some candy. They gave me a book to bring back to my village. Maybe they will come visit me and tell me what the book says.
