Vander Veer Park Historic District

Description:

The Vander Veer Park historic district is located 22 blocks due north of the Mississippi River at the head of the Harrison-Main-Brady stem which rises out of Davenport's central business district. The focal point of the district is Vander Veer Park, a trapezoid of some 33 acres bounded by Harrison, Central Park Ave., Brady and Lombard streets. This attractive and scrupulously maintained park includes a large greenhouse, duck pond, fountain, botanical gardens, walking paths and a small playground, along with large expanses of grass and towering shade trees.

Facing the park on all four sides are middle- and upper- middle-class houses dating almost exclusively from the 1895-1915 period. Although varying in style from the late Queen Anne to Tudor Revival, they exhibit remarkable consistency of size, spacing and setback, and thus create an attractive frame for the park itself. The architectural theme thus established is carried south along two blocks of Main Street, which intersects Lombard at the south end of the park. Southeast of the park, the theme is extended along the short block of Temple Lane, which is not oriented toward the Park, but rather toward the park-like grounds of the Davenport Outing Club.

Along four-lane Harrison Street, houses are uniformly set back on flat, terraced lots some 5-6 feet above street level. Here, the hipped-roof "foursquare" predominates in frame houses covered with stucco, facebrick or clapboard, particularly below Rusholme. North of Rusholme are several large Craftsman-inspired dwellings, two Tudor style houses, a late Georgian Revival house, and, at the northwest corner of the Park (at Central Park Ave.) an extremely large apartment building in a medieval/Tudor style.

The north side of Vander Veer Park is bounded by Central Park Avenue (this being the park's original name). The houses here range from large bungalows to late Queen Anne and Prairie-inspired versions of the foursquare. This variety continues along Brady, which as U.S. Highway 61 is the city's principal north-south route connecting the central business district with Interstate 80 some 5 miles to the north. Lombard Street, which runs along the south side of the park, is dominated by the multi-structure complex of St. Paul Lutheran church, constructed in 1950-52 to conform to the Georgian Revival style of the E.C. Mueller House (2136 Brady), which is incorporated into the complex as administrative offices.

The pastoral atmosphere of Vander Veer Park and the attractive solidity of its architectural frame are marred only by the density and complexity of traffic patterns. A large amount of traffic, including heavy trucks, is routed in and out of the city on Brady Street, with southbound traffic moving via Harrison into the CBD. The primary response of homeowners has been to erect heavy plantings of thick shrubbery and evergreens, which although pleasant to observe in many cases wholly obscure the houses behind them. The traffic pattern of U.S. 61 has been altered in 1984, with north-south traffic is split on alternating sides of the park.

Significance:

1. Along Brady Street, which is Davenport's most important and heavily-traveled north-south route, the district functions as the northbound traveller's last, and southbound traveller's first, strong impression of place. North of the district, Brady Street quickly becomes a modern commercial strip almost 5 miles long, indistinguishable from thousands of similar strips that form the introduction to many American towns and cities. As one drives into the city from the north, the first real intimation that one is in Davenport, rather than someplace else, comes at the encounter with Vander Veer Park and the large houses, each slightly advanced beyond the next, along the east side of Brady Street. This transition from modern commercial to turn-of-the-century residential is quite abrupt, and has no counterpart along any of the other major vehicular paths to the city center. Interestingly, the major urban "theme" announced by Vander Veer Park and its architectural frame is that of many large shade trees, which are one of the "old" city's most notable features. Apart from the CBD and industrial areas, nearly all Davenport's 19th and early 20th century neighborhoods are to a greater or lesser extent shaded, from the "central city" area of lower Le Claire's reserve to the wealthy neighborhood of McClellan Heights. The Vander Veer Park district also suggests another prominent theme, that of irregular and often rugged topography which is characteristic of much of the city from 4th street north to about 12th street.

2. Within the district, Vander Veer Park itself is significant as perhaps the city's most important example of landscape planning, and representative of parks and civic improvements that were prominent features of the city's late 19th and early 20th century municipal development. Originally site of the Scott County Fairgrounds, the area between Harrison and Brady north of Lombard was acquired by the city in 1885. Renamed Central Park in 1890, the area further reflected the inspiration of its New York namesake in its "naturalistic" landscaping and multiple uses, which included not only a "glasshouse" and floral gardens, but a large pond (ideal for skating in winter), picnic pavilion, picturesque bridge (the latter two no longer extant) and "winding macadam driveways" which found favor, by 1905, with "pleasure-seeking automobilists." Vander Veer Park was the first major park established by the City of Davenport. With the organization of the Board of Parks Commissioners in 1890, additional acquisitions followed: Riverview Terrace and Prospect parks in 1894, and the 33-acre Fejervary Park, on the city's west side, in 1902. This program preceded several other major projects in city beautification, most notably inauguration of a large-scale riverfront improvement that included the Petersen Memorial Music Pavilion, Dillon Fountain, and Union Station between 1911 and 1931. During the 1930's, the Civil Works Administration crews altered the plan of Vander Veer Park by removing corner entrances at Brady and Lombard, and at Harrison and Lombard. The early street lights and iron fountain were replaced with modern light standards and a stone-and-concrete, electrically-operated fountain.

3. Establishment of Central Park (renamed Vander Veer Park in 1911 in honor of an early Parks Commissioner), inevitably increased the desirability and cost of adjacent land for residential development. The Central Park and Central Park Second additions (on the east side of Brady) were platted in 1891 and 1896, respectively, followed by the Outing Club and Temple Lane additions on the south, and two Norwood Park additions west of Harrison after 1900. Development of the area, as well as neighborhoods further east, was considerably enhanced by electrification of Davenport's streetcar system (1888) and its expansion into residential districts beyond the old city core. The Brady Street line, from 2nd Street to Central Park, was in fact one of the city's first streetcar routes, having been established in 1870 as a horsecar line when Central Park was still the county fairgrounds. By the late 19th century, the line offered an easy commute to a growing central business district for businessmen and middle-class office workers.

The relative affluence of the district's inhabitants was reflected, in part, by the number of residences designed by prominent local architects, three of whom lived near the park. Rudolph Clausen, heir to a family architectural practice begun in 1870, lived in a relatively modest Tudor-style house at 2330 Harrison. His firm (Clausen & Burrows) designed the nearby H.G. Pape house (2326 Harrison). The firm of Temple and Burrows is represented in the Georgian Revival Mueller House (2136 Brady) across Brady from the Outing Club (another of the firm's designs). Another architect, Edward S. Hammatt, best known for his institutional designs for Trinity Episcopal Parish in the 1880's, built a residence in the district as well (2313 Brady). The third architect was Gustav Hanssen (124 Rusholme), who also contributed a pair of unusual neoclassical-inspired houses on Brady (2317 and 2319 Brady). Hanssen worked in partnership with

Dietrich Harfst. Unlike Hanssen, who appears to have favored neoclassical forms, Harfst seems to have preferred the Craftsman idiom, as exemplified in the Henry Deutsch (2101 Main) and C.E. Hanssen (2322 Harrison) houses. A third house attributed to the firm is the Henry Heubotter house (2116 Main), a rambling version of the American foursquare.

These houses are among the most significant in the Vander Veer Park district, illustrating the eclecticism that characterized much of Davenport's domestic architecture at the turn of the century; and also the ways in which local architects adapted national trends to their own, and their clients' tastes. Other important houses, the architects of which are not yet known, include the excellent Tudor style Harvey Jones House (2221 Brady) and an outstanding Prairie house (2207 Brady). The three houses on Temple Lane, facing the Outing Club, are also noteworthy, combining a common hipped-roof, rectangular form with Mission, Prairie and neo-Georgian influences, respectively. The E.P. Adler (2104 Main) and William Weise (2110 Brady) houses, located about a block apart, also have this rectilinear character. Remarkably similar in their exterior treatment, they combine Prairie and neo-Georgian features and were likely the work of the same architect.

Reviewer's comments:

Due to the fact that visual continuity has been used as a criterion for establishing contributory status in the district in this survey, it will be necessary to review the inventory sheets and reclassify any less than 50 year old properties as non-contributory or provide a statement of exceptional importance to justify their inclusion. Unfortunately, this must be done because it cannot be verified whether properties classified as B are at least 50 years old, since dates of construction were not recorded for a number of contributory properties. See MRA cover form comments.

Vander Veer Park Historic District

Description: *

The Vander Veer Park historic district is located 22 blocks due north of the Mississippi River at the head of the Harrison-Main-Brady stem which rises out of Davenport's central business district. The focal point of the district is Vander Veer Park, a trapezoid of some 33 acres bounded by Harrison, Central Park Ave., Brady and Lombard streets. This attractive and scrupulously maintained park includes a large greenhouse, duck pond, fountain, botanical gardens, walking paths and a small playground, along with large expanses of grass and towering shade trees.

Facing the park on all four sides are middle- and upper- middle-class houses dating almost exclusively from the 1895-1925 period. Although varying in style from the late Queen Anne to Tudor Revival, they exhibit remarkable consistency of size, spacing and setback, and thus create an attractive frame for the park itself. The architectural theme thus established is carried south along two blocks of Main Street, which intersects Lombard at the south end of the park. Southeast of the park, the theme is extended along the short block of Temple Lane, which is not oriented toward the Park, but rather toward the park-like grounds of the Davenport Outing Club.

Along four-lane Harrison Street, houses are uniformly set back on flat, terraced lots some 5-6 feet above street level. Here, the hipped-roof "foursquare" predominates in frame houses covered with stucco, facebrick or clapboard, particularly below Rusholme. North of Rusholme are several large Craftsman-inspired dwellings, two Tudor style houses, a late Georgian Revival house, and, at the northwest corner of the Park (at Central Park Ave.) an extremely large apartment building in a medieval/Tudor style.

The north side of Vander Veer Park is bounded by Central Park Avenue (this being the park's original name). The houses here range from large bungalows to late Queen Anne and Prairie-inspired versions of the foursquare. This variety continues along Brady, which as U.S. Highway 61 is the city's principal north-south route connecting the central business district with Interstate 80 some 5 miles to the north. Lombard Street, which runs along the south side of the park, is dominated by the multi-structure complex of St. Paul Lutheran church, constructed in 1950-52 to conform to the Georgian Revival style of the E.C. Mueller House (2136 Brady), which is incorporated into the complex as administrative offices.

The pastoral atmosphere of Vander Veer Park and the attractive solidity of its architectural frame are marred only by the density and complexity of traffic patterns. A large amount of traffic, including heavy trucks, is routed in and out of the city on Brady Street, with southbound traffic moving via Harrison into the CBD. The primary response of homeowners has been to erect heavy plantings of thick shrubbery and evergreens, which although pleasant to observe in many cases wholly obscure the houses behind them. The traffic pattern of U.S. 61 has been altered in 1984, with north-south traffic is split on alternating sides of the park.

Significance:

1. Along Brady Street, which is Davenport's most important and heavily-traveled north-south route, the district functions as the northbound traveller's last, and southbound traveller's first, strong impression of place. North of the district, Brady Street quickly becomes a modern commercial strip almost 5 miles long, indistinguishable from thousands of similar strips that form the introduction to many American towns and cities. As one drives into the city from the north, the first real intimation that one is in Davenport, rather than someplace else, comes at the encounter with Vander Veer Park and the large houses, each slightly advanced beyond the next, along the east side of Brady Street. This transition from modern commercial to turn-of-the-century residential is quite abrupt, and has no counterpart along any of the other major vehicular paths to the city center. Interestingly, the major urban "theme" announced by Vander Veer Park and its architectural frame is that of many large shade trees, which are one of the "old" city's most notable features. Apart from the CBD and industrial areas, nearly all Davenport's 19th and early 20th century neighborhoods are to a greater or lesser extent shaded, from the "central city" area of lower Le Claire's reserve to the wealthy neighborhood of McClellan Heights. The Vander Veer Park district also suggests another prominent theme, that of irregular and often rugged topography which is characteristic of much of the city from 4th street north to about 12th street.

2. Within the district, Vander Veer Park itself is significant as perhaps the city's most important example of landscape planning, and representative of parks and civic improvements that were prominent features of the city's late 19th and early 20th century municipal development. Originally site of the Scott County Fairgrounds, the area between Harrison and Brady north of Lombard was acquired by the city in 1885. Renamed Central Park in 1890, the area further reflected the inspiration of its New York namesake in its "naturalistic" landscaping and multiple uses, which included not only a "glasshouse" and floral gardens, but a large pond (ideal for skating in winter), picnic pavilion, picturesque bridge (the latter two no longer extant) and "winding macadam driveways" which found favor, by 1905, with "pleasure-seeking automobilists." Vander Veer Park was the first major park established by the City of Davenport. With the organization of the Board of Parks Commissioners in 1890, additional acquisitions followed: Riverview Terrace and Prospect parks in 1894, and the 33-acre Fejervary Park, on the city's west side, in 1902. This program preceded several other major projects in city beautification, most notably inauguration of a large-scale riverfront improvement that included the Petersen Memorial Music Pavilion, Dillon Fountain, and Union Station between 1911 and 1931. During the 1930's, the Civil Works Administration crews altered the plan of Vander Veer Park by removing corner entrances at Brady and Lombard, and at Harrison and Lombard. The early street lights and iron fountain were replaced with modern light standards and a stone-and-concrete, electrically-operated fountain.

3. Establishment of Central Park (renamed Vander Veer Park in 1911 in honor of an early Parks Commissioner), inevitably increased the desirability and cost of adjacent land for residential development. The Central Park and Central Park Second additions (on the east side of Brady) were platted in 1891 and 1896, respectively, followed by the Outing Club and Temple Lane additions on the south, and two Norwood Park additions west of Harrison after 1900. Development of the area, as well as neighborhoods further east, was considerably enhanced by electrification of Davenport's streetcar system (1888) and its expansion into residential districts beyond the old city core. The Brady Street line, from 2nd Street to Central Park, was in fact one of the city's first streetcar routes, having been established in 1870 as a horsecar line when Central Park was still the county fairgrounds. By the late 19th century, the line offered an easy commute to a growing central business district for businessmen and middle-class office workers.

The relative affluence of the district's inhabitants was reflected, in part, by the number of residences designed by prominent local architects, three of whom lived near the park. Rudolph Clausen, heir to a family architectural practice begun in 1870, lived in a relatively modest Tudor-style house at 2330 Harrison. His firm (Clausen & Burrows) designed the nearby H.G. Pape house (2326 Harrison). The firm of Temple and Burrows is represented in the Georgian Revival Mueller House (2136 Brady) across Brady from the Outing Club (another of the firm's designs). Another architect, Edward S. Hammatt, best known for his institutional designs for Trinity Episcopal Parish in the 1880's, built a residence in the district as well (2313 Brady). The third architect was Gustav Hanssen (124 Rusholme), who also contributed a pair of unusual neoclassical-inspired houses on Brady (2317 and 2319 Brady). Hanssen worked in partnership with

Dietrich Harfst. Unlike Hanssen, who appears to have favored neoclassical forms, Harfst seems to have preferred the Craftsman idiom, as exemplified in the Henry Deutsch (2101 Main) and C.E. Hanssen (2322 Harrison) houses. A third house attributed to the firm is the Henry Heubotter house (2116 Main), a rambling version of the American foursquare.

These houses are among the most significant in the Vander Veer Park district, illustrating the eclecticism that characterized much of Davenport's domestic architecture at the turn of the century; and also the ways in which local architects adapted national trends to their own, and their clients' tastes. Other important houses, the architects of which are not yet known, include the excellent Tudor style Harvey Jones House (2221 Brady) and an outstanding Prairie house (2207 Brady). The three houses on Temple Lane, facing the Outing Club, are also noteworthy, combining a common hipped-roof, rectangular form with Mission, Prairie and neo-Georgian influences, respectively. The E.P. Adler (2104 Main) and William Weise (2110 Brady) houses, located about a block apart, also have this rectilinear character. Remarkably similar in their exterior treatment, they combine Prairie and neo-Georgian features and were likely the work of the same architect.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE This house is one of two very similar dwellings located near one another in the Vander Veer Park district, which combine Prairie and Georgian Revival influences in a distinctive manner. A horizontal profile, broad eaves, and "high-waisted" effect produced by the brick-faced first story and stuccoed second story speak to the former, while the five-bay frontal symmetry and shallow, columned porch, derive primarily from the latter. This house differs from BR2110 in only a few respects: addition of dormers, an L plan, larger sunroom wing, and windows as individual units, rather than in groups.

HISTORICAL DATA

Emanuel P. Adler began his association with the Davenport Times in 1901, when the paper was purchased by the Ottumwa based Lee Newspaper Syndicate. Adler served as publisher for the Republican-oriented paper for six years. In 1906, Adler was made president of Lee, Inc., succeeding A.W. Lee. Adler executed a merger with the Davenport Democrat in 1915, and also purchase of several other midwestern papers. He was also instrumental in the 1933 reorganization of the American Commercial Savings Bank as the Davenport Savings Bank & Trust.

HISTORICAL SIGNIFICANCE

This property is associated with E.P. Adler, a prominent early 20th century newspaper publisher.

SITE	corner lot, facing Vander Veer Park

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE This house is chiefly significant as the home of Rudolph J. Clausen, one of Davenport's most prominent early 20th century architects. He was the son of Frederick J. Clausen, who had dominated Davenport's architectural profession during the late 19th century, and who handed his practice on to his son Rudolph beginning with a father-son partnership in 1904. Like his father, Rudolph Clausen worked in a variety of styles and building types. His major works in Davenport include the Outing Club, Davenport Central High School, the Democrat building, Masonic Temple, and Scott Co. Savings Bank. This house, if it is indeed an example of Clausen's own work, is less noteworthy architecturally, being a relatively representative example of the English Tudor Revival style that was popular in Davenport during the first decades of the 20th century.

HISTORICAL DATA

This house was built in 1908-09 for Davenport architect Rudolph J. Clausen. Clausen was a partner with his father in the firm Clausen and Clausen. Rudolph later became active in civic causes, including the Davenport Levee Improvement Commission. Rudolph remained a central figure in the German-American community's elite.

MATERIALS frame construction, covered with stucco; brick chimney toward west end; wood trim; colors: gray stucco, white trim, black shutters FENESTRATION wooden casements, in plain surrounds; some shutters; windows on first floor very tall, w/transom panels; placement mostly regular, but not symmetrical FEATURES north elevation: pedimented entry porch with unfluted Doric columns and full entablature; asymmetrical window placement includes those opening onto stairwell; wall between main block and east wing is projected out to form an angle into which the woodpile is set, hidden from public view.
South side: 7-bay arrangement, not quite symmetrical; semicircular entrance vestibule features French doors opening onto patio
ALTERATIONS
SITE landscaped lot with large rear yard opening onto grounds of Outing Club; garage at NW corner of lot is of stuccoed tile

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The George Decker house is one of three along Temple Lane built with long rectangular plans, low hipped roofs with broad eaves, stuccoed walls and wood-strip belt coursing. In the Decker house, these Prairie elements are combined with a low-key neo-Georgian influence seen in the near-symmetry of its main facades and the shallow, pedimented north entry with its Tuscan columns and full entablature. This formalized Prairie style figures also in other houses in the Vander Veer Park district, most notably at 2104 Main and 2110 Brady.

HISTORICAL DATA

This property was originally site of a commercial greenhouse establishment operated by John T. Temple, a florist from whom the later residential subdivision and short street received their name. The original owner of the present house was Dr. George E. Decker, a physician at the time he and his wife, Elsie, moved to Temple Lane. Later, he became involved in a variety of insurance and financial activities, including positions as president of Register Life Insurance Co., director of the American Commercial and Savings Bank, and vice-president of the Federal Surety Co. and the Standard Federal Fire Co.

ARCHITECTURAL STYLE Craftsman

DATE 1906

FORM 2-1/2 stories, T-plan side-gable with flared eaves; central entry pavilion; veranda around southwest corner; polygonal window bay south side; small rear entry in northeast reentrant angle with railing around roof edge

MATERIALS frame construction; tapestry facebrick (green, tan, black) at first story, stuccoed above; concrete block foundation

FENESTRATION 1/1 and 6/1 d.h.s., no surrounds; articulated with flat wood strips on second story

FEATURES broad eaves articulated as panels with molding strips; molded wood beltcourse between stories; entry flanked by long sidelights; veranda has brick piers and geometric wood "bracket" detail as caps; gable ends marked by protruding blocks of wood expressing purlins; broad, flat vergeboards; in north wall, group of leaded glass windows with stylized plant or chevron pattern

ALTERATIONS

SITE corner lot; rest of block occupied by church and parking lot

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The Henry Deutsch house is an excellent example of the work of local architect Dietrich J. Harfst. "Signature" features, found on several of Harfst's known works in Davenport, include use of the Craftsman idiom and a recurring utilization of a central entrance pavilion that rises above the main roof as a dormer. Appropriately for the style, the Deutsch house is characterized by straightforward use of a variety of quality materials that provide polychrome embellishment to a fairly simple design. The innate frontal symmetry of the house is nicely altered by the off-center placement of the veranda, which extends around the southwest corner. Elements of the Prairie style are seen in the wide, flat eaves, applied molding strips, and curious block-like "brackets" that top the porch piers.

HISTORICAL DATA

This house was built for Henry and Matilda Deutsch. Deutsch was a partner with Joseph Deutsch in a clothing firm known as the "Bee Hive". This is at least the second house on the site.

HISTORICAL DATA

This residence was built 1895-96 for E.S. Hammatt, probably from his own designs. Hammatt was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology whose early architectural experience was with Ware and Van Brunt (Boston) and with several firms in New York. He came to Davenport in 1883, and quickly obtained several important commissions from Trinity Episcopal Parish, for buildings at Kemper Hall School for Boys and St. Katherine's Hall School for Girls, which remain his more noteworthy structures in the city.

ARCHITECTURAL STYLE Neoclassical Revival

DATE 1897-98

FORM 2-1/2 stories, square plan, high hipped roof with dormers;

tripartite symmetrical front; oriel rises to dormer on north side

MATERIALS frame on stone foundation; narrow clapboard

FENESTRATION 1/1 d.h.s.

FEATURES pedimented wall dormers rised from curved bays, flanking a central roof dormer; decorative panels between levels of the bays and over the three-part central window above the entrance. Modified Ionic order columns on porch and (engaged) between elements of the center window.

ALTERATIONS

SITE narrow, shaded lot, moderate setback

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The Bernard Hanssen house is a locally-significant example of the work of Davenport architect Gustav Hanssen (see also BR-2319). Like its neighbor, the Hanssen house displays a modified neoclassical style, here adhering more strictly to a frontal symmetry altered only slightly by enclosure of part of the long veranda as a sunroom. The two houses are particularly interesting as a pair, because they were built about the same time from designs by the same architect. Their neoclassicism is stronger than is the case with many of the Vander Veer Park houses, and in basic form are typical of much middle class domestic architecture built in the city at the turn of the century. The subtle ways in which details are used and arranged, however, clearly distinguish them from most examples of the style in Davenport.

HISTORICAL DATA

This house was built for Bernard Hanssen in 1897-98. Hanssen graduated from bookkeeper to vice-president of his father's retail-wholesale hardware firm while the house was under construction. The firm, Louis Hanssen's Sons, was the largest of its kind in the city at the time.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The C.E. Hanssen house is significant primarily as an example of the work of Davenport architects Gustav Hanssen and Dietrich Harfst. The three-part front, with projecting entrance pavilion rising through the porch roof and ending in a gable is a theme employed in several other houses designed by Harfst in the city. As is common to other Harfst works, the Craftsman influence predominates, expressed in the broad eaves, porch pier treatment, and straightforward use of materials.

HISTORICAL DATA

This house was built for C.E. Hanssen in 1908. Hanssen at the time was Secretary of Louis Hanssen's Sons, a major Davenport hardware store doing both wholesale and retail business.

HISTORICAL DATA

According to Oszuscik (1979), this was the residence of Gustav Hanssen, a notable Davenport architect who opened an office in the city around 1890. Among the limited number of structures so far attributed to Hanssen are the William Wiese house (BN-709), the Schricker house (CV-1446), and a now much-altered Queen Anne house at 1407 Brady. Hanssen practiced in partnership with Dietrich J. Harfst during the early 20th century. This house was built in 1894, some four years after Hanssen began to practice in the city. He lived here until around 1910.

SITE large corner lot at northwest corner of Vander Veer Park

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE Harrison Manor is a locally-significant example of large-scale apartment block construction in Davenport. It is the only one of its kind in the survey employing the U-shaped plan, which permits optimum lighting for all units. This plan is similar to apartments of this period found in Evanston, Illinois, and perhaps may have been inspired by those examples. The style of Harrison Manor, vaguely medieval/Tudor, is very similar to that of the apartment district centered on Columbia Ave., only one block to the north. Both feature extensive use of glazed terra cotta detail, a tendency to use the depressed Tudor arch at entries, and bits of colored glass set at random in various windows. Harrison Manor is the overwhelmingly dominant feature of the west side of the Vander Veer Park district. Its decidedly urban character contrasts interestingly with the single-family "suburban" character of the district's architecture, and also with the rural atmosphere offered by Vander Veer Park itself.

HISTORICAL DATA

Harrison Manor, the largest apartment building in the Vander Veer Park area, was built 1925-26, and originally contained 46 units. Architects for the building were Louis Keith & Greiser, of Chicago.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE According to Oszuscik (1979), the Huebotter house was designed by Davenport architect Dietrich J. Harfst. It is a locally-significant example of his work, somewhat transitional between the Queen Anne and "Foursquare" styles. The rectilinear main elevation, capped with the usual hipped roof, displays the regularity and neatness typical of the Foursquare type. The sides and rear, however, revert to earlier Victorian tradition in a rambling plan and full-height, gabled polygonal window bays. On the north side is a projecting semicircular bay, somewhat awkwardly placed beside one of the polygonal bays, which contains a circular staircase -- a rather curious exterior expression of an interior function.

HISTORICAL DATA

Henry L. Huebotter and his wife, Kate, had this house built c. 1905-06. Huebotter was president of the Iowa Furniture and Carpet Company at the time. He later served as vice-president of the Citizens Trust and Savings Bank.

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The Harvey Jones house is a significant local example of the early 20th century Tudor Revival style. Dominant features include wide half-timbered gables and exterior brick chimney with its geometric design element in concrete. The interpenetration of exterior and interior space is achieved through an attractive "sunroom" at the northwest corner, which is chamfered to permit additional window area; and in the screened porch occupying the lower floor of the rear wing. Quality materials are used simply, their textures and colors sufficing for decorative effect.

The architect of this house is not presently known. However, a house similar to the Jones house was published by The American Architect in 1911. It was built in Minneapolis, and designed by architect Harry W. Jones. Like the Harvey Jones house in Davenport, the Minneapolis house featured double front gables, an enclosed entry vestibule, and chamfered corner developed as a polygonal window bay. It might be interesting to know whether the two houses

ALTERATIONS none

SITE slightly elevated lot at corner of Brady and Temple Lane

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The Louis Marks house is a locally-significant example of ways in which the Mission style was adapted to domestic design in early 20th century Davenport. Major features include low-pitched tile roofs with broad eaves and projecting rafter ends; and open porches and porte-cochere displaying wide round arches, the piers in several instances hidded behind thick, freestanding concrete columns. The flat-roofed garage, which continues the arch motif in the main entrance, displays one of the few solely decorative elements -- a geometric figure cut into each side wall. The house takes full advantage of its corner location to function as an important transitional element between the immediate area of Vander Veer Park and the Temple Lane development.

HISTORICAL DATA

The Marks house was built on the site of the Crispa Cone Works, an ice cream cone manufacturing venture run by Walter H. Wheeler in the early 1900's. It was part of a development of three similar houses built along Temple Lane around 1912, the area having been formerly associated with the J.T. Temple greenhouse and florist business. Louis Marks was an executive for several commercial concerns while living at this address with his wife, Georgia. Among them were treasurer of the Morton L. Marks wholesale grocery firm, and treasurer of the Security Fire Insurance Co. Herman Zeuch, president of the Marks Co., lived next door at 2 Temple Lane.

ARCHITECTURAL STYLE Georgian Colonial Revival FORM 2-1/2 stories, rectangular plan w/large rear wing and south-side sunroom; 5-bay symmetrical front; large central roof dormer
MATERIALS tan facebrick, Flemish bond; wood, concrete and wrought iron trim
FENESTRATION narrow 6/1 or wide 15/1 d.h.s.
FEATURES portico with giant Corinthian order columns; wrought-iron balcony supported above doorway on overscaled pairs of wrought-iron brackets; windows in main elevation grouped in threes, separated by fluted, engaged colonnettes ALTERATIONS eaves and frieze redone, and covered with aluminum siding; balustrade on portico roof removed SITE corner lot, at intersection of Brady and Lombard; faces Outing Club on east side of Brady Street

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The E.C. Mueller house is a representative example of the Georgian Colonial Revival in Davenport. Typically, it is rather overscaled, but thus holds its own against the even larger Outing Club, in the same style and by the same architects, across Brady Street. The Mueller house has experienced alteration to the cornice, but retains nonetheless much of its original character. Prominent features include the elaborate entrance and giant portico (a favorite element in Davenport for this style), and, more unusual, the ornate iron brackets supporting the balcony over the doorway. The Mueller house is an important feature of the south "entrance" to the Vander Veer Park district, and was designed by the local architectural firm of Temple & Burrows.

HISTORICAL DATA

This house was designed by the Davenport architectural firm of Temple and Burrows for Edward C. Mueller. Mueller, one of three sons of pioneer lumber baron Christian Mueller, was president and treasurer of Mueller Land and Timber Co., and held offices in other family concerns at the time this house was built. Mueller lumber companies were extensively involved in the northwestern U.S. in milling as well as retail/wholesale sales.

ARCHITECTURAL STYLE Georgian Colonial Revival DATE 1916-1917 FORM 2 stories, hipped roof, rectangular main block with 2-story rear wing; 5-bay, symmetrical front; columned patio at SE corner; hipped-roof dormers, front
MATERIALS textured, dark red facebrick, Flemish bond; frame construction
FENESTRATION 12/1 d.h.s.; molded lintels 1st floor front; multi-light

FEATURES main entrance set back within aedicular frame with Tuscan columns in antis, flanking pilasters; door framed w/sidelights and transom panel; large semicircular window bay on south side, looking into walled garden; tall exterior brick chimneys
ALTERATIONS
SITE corner lot, flat, with large shade trees

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The William Mueller house is a representative (though somewhat late) example of Davenport's Georgian Revival architecture. A noteworthy feature is the contrast between the formality of the front view, with its carefully-balanced exterior chimneys and symmetrical arrangement of openings and dormers; and the informality of the "garden front" on the south, with the columned patio, expansive bay window, and second-story rear sunroom.
The brick-walled garden, which features brick walks and a shallow, tiled pool for fish, is a particularly attractive element of the property, and with more care could be quite distinctive.

HISTORICAL DATA

William L. Mueller had this house built in 1916. Mueller was a member of the German-American lumber dynasty established by Christian Mueller before the Civil War. William was Vice-President of the Mueller Lumber Co., and the Christian Mueller Land & Timber Co., during his residence at this address.

DATE 1897-98

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE The Charles Pasche house is a locally significant example of the work of architect Gustav Hanssen, who practiced in Davenport in partnership with Dietrich Harfst around the turn of the century. The Pasche house is in basic form a "Foursquare", to which has been added neoclassical detail and a somewhat irregular, but functional, arrangement of exterior features. This asymmetry is not immediately obvious, due to the central location of the entry and porch pediment; but above, the three second story windows, which at first appear evenly arranged, on closer inspection prove not only of different sizes but irregularly placed. This play on balance gives the house a distinction that is rather subtle, but not without interest, particularly when it is compared with 2317 Brady, a symmetrically-designed house by the same architect.

HISTORICAL DATA

This house was built for Charles Pasche in 1897-98. Pasche was cashier for the Iowa National Bank, and also served as secretary-treasurer for Flick & Johnson Construction Co.

ARCHITECTURAL STYLE Prairie/Georgian DATE c. 1916
FORM 2 stories, hipped roof main block w/gable roofed rear wing (L-plan); one story sunporch south side; five-bay symmetrical front
MATERIALS red-brown facebrick, stucco, wood trim FENESTRATION 6/1 in threes flanking main entrance, in surrounds formed by slightly advanced headers; second story: 6/1 occurring individually FEATURES shallow, projecting entrance vestibule, with round-arched doorway, Tuscan order columns and full entablature; boxed rafter ends and wide, paneled eave soffits; central triangular roof dormer at front
ALTERATIONS
SITE narrow lot, slightly raised, with low bushes; terrace across front of house

ARCHITECTURAL SIGNIFICANCE This house presents an interesting combination of Georgian Revival and Prairie style influences, thereby illustrating the eclecticism that characterized much of Davenport's early 20th century architecture. The basic form (rectangular, hipped roof main block with 5-part symmetrical front) derives from the Georgian Revival. From the Prairie style come the wide eaves, with second story windows set close beneath them, and the articulation of each floor through use of different exterior coverings and the grouping of lower floor front windows in bands. The neoGeorgian theme, however, is brought into prominence by the treatment of the entrance, with its columned stoop and graceful fanlight above the door. See also MA-2104.

HISTORICAL DATA

William H. and Louise Weiss were probably the first residents of this house. Weiss was a clerk for the fur company "T. Richter & Sons." This was not the first building on this site.

IOWA STATE HISTORICAL DEPARTMENT OFFICE OF HISTORIC PRESERVATION

16 December 1985

ADRIAN D. ANDERSON, Executive Director
STATE HISTORIC PRESERVATION OFFICER

Office of the Keeper of the National Register of Historic Places
National Park Service
Department of the Interior
Washington, D. C. 20240

Dear Keeper;

I am pleased to submit for your consideration the following National Register Nominations. The status of each is addressed separately below.

✓ Cherokee Public Library: Cherokee, Cherokee County, Iowa. This is a resubmittal of a returned part of the Public Libraries In Iowa Thematic.

fill ✓ W. C. Ball House, Fairfield, Jefferson County, Iowa. This is a regular nomination, delayed in submission due to photo printing delays.

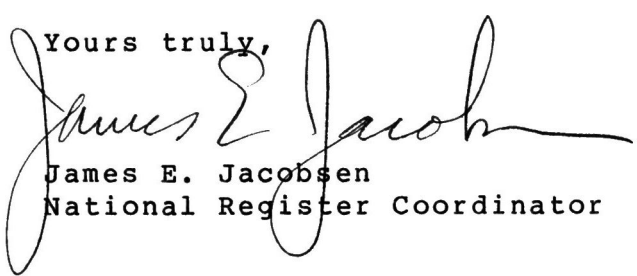

Vanderveer Park Historic District: This district is returned. It was returned by NPS last fall by error. It was first submitted last May 1984 and was first returned because NPS thought that there were structures of less than fifty years of age within its boundaries. This was not the case and the district was resubmitted without change. It was again returned for the same reason. I would request that its double return not be counted against Iowa HPO since we had assumed that nothing need be done to correct technical errors. With this resubmission I have appended a foot note which states that there are indeed no structures of less than fifty years of age. This district is part of the Davenport MRA.

✓ Joseph S. McHarg House, 5905 Chapel Hill Road, Davenport, Scott County, part of Davenport MRA. Resubmitted following technical correction.

✓ John Schricker House, 5418 Chapel Hill Road, Davenport, Scott County, part of Davenport MRA. Resubmitted following technical correction.

I enclose cover letters from our SHPO, Adrian D. Anderson, certifying that the above submissions are components of the noted MRA or Thematic nominations.

Yours truly,

James E. Jacobsen
National Register Coordinator
