DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Annexed by Indianapolis in 1962, this Victorian enclave long existed as an incorporated town entirely surrounded by the city whose center is only 2 1/2 miles away. Its 77 acres were platted as a "residence park" in 1872 with the condition that lots be 80 by 170 feet and houses, it is said, cost $20,000 or more. Three generous north and south streets were constructed each centered by a wide, landscaped, esplanade. The esplanades retain fountains, great, ornated flower urns and various pieces of cast iron statuary which the founder hoped resembled figures in the gardens of Versailles. One east and west street bisects the area. The great variety of native trees and shrubs and of cultivated plants affords an informal arboratum for the large high school located on comparable adjoining acreage, the school itself of historic interest, some of its Civil War Arsenal buildings having been recorded in the Historic American Buildings Survey 1970. Art classes from the school often use the esplanades for sketching and painting sessions. The three large and elaborate fountains at the intersections of the east and west drive and the six smaller fountains in the esplanades are in process of restoration as are the 74 vintage light standards with fluted metal columns and cross arms bearing five white twelve inch globes. Wholly residential, save for a community building, the district has 243 dwellings, chiefly of frame construction. Approximately 65% date to the late 1890's or very early 1900's, and are neo-Jacobean or East Lake in style, usually three storeys in height, the third storey meant as a ballroom often with dais or balcony for orchestra. Rooms are large, high ceilinged, with huge windows, many with beveled plate glass and diamond shaped insets. Hall and stair windows are often of colored patterned glass "Tiffany glass." The many fire places are operable and fine hardwood abounds. Brass door knobs are highly embossed. Entrance doors have copper kickplates. Some of the original carriage houses remain in liveable state. The district is bounded on the north by a stone appearing wall designed after that shown in an 1873-74 color lithograph of Woodruff Place, on the south by an ornamental iron fence with common fencing on the east and west. Layout, planting, urns, figures and fountains look now much as they do in the contemporary print. The objects are the pieces originally installed. Some are described and called by name in Booth Tarkington's 1919 Pulitzer Prize novel "The Magnificent Ambersons." The author reported that Woodruff Place served as a model for his Amberson Addition in the story.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Architecture

The district preserves a late Victorian style of architecture not frequently found in present landmarks and memorials and is in an area where such preservation seems most appropriate. Indiana was one of the most heavily forested of the American states and the houses are of native timber and were built on a virgin acreage known as "the dark woods". Great trees remain along the streets and in the esplanades. Interior hardwood used for doors, casements, moldings, stairs and railings, mantels and floors is of fine quality and of local origin. Craftsmanship involved is excellent. Laid out as a "residence park" Woodruff Place is still wholly residential and while there is a certain unity of period, a pleasing and interesting variety in detail exists as shown in accompanying photographs. Some individual structures depart from the general pattern. Period hardware and much fine glass is in evidence, the glass often part of a bay window, that superior predecessor of the ubiquitous picture window. The good state of preservation is a recommendation. The residences bear an air of permanence and fitness.

Landscape Architecture

The layout of the streets and esplanades, well proportioned and distinctive, presents an unusual example of urban design antedating the "garden city" idea.

The planting represents many varieties of trees and shrubs, replenished with some frequency, but carrying out a century-old idea of decoration.

The flower urns are ornate; the large fountains bear cherubs, swans, scrolls and turtles; in the esplanades are classic female figures; all the designs showing the European influence of the 1870's, an era rarely so extensively illustrated or so well preserved.

Association with Area, Events and Persons

Woodruff Place is the model for the "Amberson Addition" described in such detail in Newton Booth Tarkington's Pulitzer Prize winning novel "The Magnificent Ambersons". Tarkington thought the Addition resembled the Gardens of Versailles.

Woodruff Place adjoins and forms an appropriate approach to the state's largest high school located on the site of a former U.S. Arsenal several of whose vintage buildings are a part of the Historic American Buildings Survey, among them a moated powder magazine, an officers' residence, a guard house and an arsenal with a clock tower. The school's students are afforded outdoor classrooms in botany, in art and architectural detail and may feel close to American literature using Tarkington as an example. American history, business, folklore, adventure may be illustrated by the lives of Woodruff Place founders and residents, i.e., James O. Woodruff, a founder, lost his fortune in the 1873 Panic and later established a floating university, probably the first; a longtime citizen was one of the but six survivors of the Greely farthest north expedition in 1884; another resident was granted a medal by the Emperor of China; the founder of the Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra lived here; the farm home of the Hiatts is known as "the house of the blue lights" a story recently investigated by Indiana University.

Relation to City Government

In 1972 the Indianapolis Park and Recreation Department is restoring the fountains, the figures, the urns and is planting or replacing trees and shrubs. The city Transportation Department has made an appropriation to replace the charming old light standards using the original fluted molds. As the houses become available they are being purchased by young professional men, bringing back into the central city a helpful group.

Dear Mr. Worth:

Thank you for your letter of November 4 concerning the nomination of Woodruff Place for the National Register. The two enclosures will explain how properties may be nominated for the Register.

State nominations, such as Woodruff Place would be, must be made through the office of the State Liaison Officer. Since the death of Mr. Perley Provost, the Acting State Liaison Officer for Indiana is Mr. Joseph A. Blatt, State Park Director, State of Indiana, Indianapolis 42604. We suggest that you contact Mr. Blatt's office for nomination forms as well as instructions on how to properly complete them. After nomination forms have been completed, they must be reviewed by the State Review Board and signed by the State Liaison Officer before being sent to this office.

You may also wish to contact Mr. N. Roll McLaughlin, an Indianapolis architect who also is familiar with National Register nomination procedures. His address is James Associates Architects & Engineers, 2828 East Forty-fifth Street, Indianapolis, Indiana 46205.

We appreciate your interest and wish you well. Please do not hesitate to contact us if we can be of further assistance.

Sincerely yours,

William J. Murtagh (Sgd.)

Dear Dr. Murtagh:

This letter accompanies a second set of nomination forms supporting a request that Woodruff Place, a Victorian enclave in Indianapolis, Indiana, be added to the National Register of Historic Places. The first set was returned to officers of the Woodruff Place Civic League with the comment that the description and the statement of significance were inadequate, that more photographs should have been submitted, and that the topographic map showing location should not have been an electrostatic copy. An effort has been made to rectify these matters.

Very truly,

(Miss) Nellie M. Coats

Dear Bill:

I have been meaning to contact your office for some time concerning a plaque program for the National Register Properties. Yesterday my office was contacted by Mrs. Betsy Toy Hall concerning the donation of an appropriately inscribed plaque for Woodruff Place, here in Indianapolis.

Woodruff Place is a unique sequence of buildings, historic homes, parks, statuary and fountains on the near-east side of Indianapolis. It was platted in 1872 and its 77 acres have remained residential, with no commercial encroachments. There is great pride in the neighborhood as to the National Register Listing.

Mrs. Hall asked me to investigate the erection of a plaque in the center of this area noting Woodruff Place's National Register Listing and giving a brief description of the area. I would also like your advice as to the appropriateness of a memorial reference, since Mrs. Hall wishes to donate the plaque in the memory of her mother, a long time resident and advocate of Woodruff Place.

This same request has been made by the Centerville, Indiana group concerning a National Register Plaque for their area and I promised them I would inquire for them as well.

We would be happy to work through the Historic Preservation Officer's office, but I would like to hear your thoughts on the above, as soon as you can respond.

I hope to see you in Portland for the National Trust meeting in October.

Sincerely,

J. Reid Williamson, Jr.
Executive Director

Dear Mr. Williamson:

On behalf of Dr. Murtagh who is presently on vacation, thank you for your letter concerning the erection of plaques on National Register properties.

Although a number of State and local preservation organizations have indicated interest in presenting plaques to properties listed on the National Register, we do not have such a program of our own.

Before proceeding with plans for a plaque for Woodruff Place and Centerville, I do suggest you get in touch with Mr. Joseph D. Cloud to see if his office has any ideas for a statewide plaque program. It would be a good idea for Historic Landmarks Foundation of Indiana to work with his office on the content and design of such a plaque. A design that could be used throughout the State would not only be simpler in the long run but would have the added advantage of effectively unifying Indiana properties that are on the National Register. In designing such a plaque, I am sure that an effort will be made to have it as unobtrusive as possible, without sacrificing legibility. A short, concise statement of significance, perhaps directly taken from a National Register nomination, might be appropriate to include on the plaque.

As to the appropriateness of a memorial reference on the plaque itself, I would leave the final decision to the State Historic Preservation Officer, although such a reference might leave the impression that the district is primarily commemorative in nature.

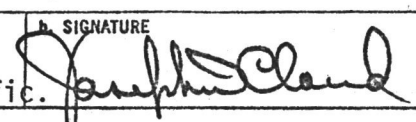

I hope that this information is useful to you, and if you have any further questions or comments do not hesitate to let us know.

Sincerely yours,

Charles A. Herrington (Sgd.)
