Architecture.

38. Stylistically pretentious churches in Warren County outside of Bowling Green are rare. This architecturally significant church in the small town of Smiths Grove is, with the exception of the idiosyncratic raking corbel table in the gable front, typical of end-of-the-century Gothic Revival. The corner entry tower serves as a local landmark, the building is essentially intact and there is a sympathetic rear addition.

This is still very sloppily presented, with a lot of problems: vague, arbitrary, HISTORIAN or no acreage - VSD; skimpy info; ~~weak~~ statements of significance; inadequate historical contexts; ~~ambiguity~~ ambiguity about exact resources w/ nominated acreage; Groves and confusing and/or disorganized presentation of districts - to name a few.

Because of agreements reached during a meeting w/ KY ARCHITECTURAL HISTORIAN staff members this summer, however, we probably have to accept it - at least in part. But we should see if we can get some of the more severe problems corrected.

See Oct - Dec notes and phone sheets.

KY promised to specify acreage for Bowling Green properties.
