DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Medical Hall is located northeast of Bel Air, Maryland on the east side of Md. Route 154 one mile north of Schucks Corner. The property consists of a Federal style dwelling, six out-buildings, and at least three archaeological sites.

The house, Medical Hall (HA-3) was constructed of stuccoed stone between 1825 and 1840, in a retarditaire interpretation of the Georgian-Federal period vernacular. Typically the structure is five bays long, two bays wide, and two and one half stories high. The windows have shutters and six over six sashes. Three dormers, one at each end bay with the third in the center, project from the "A" roof. A chimney is located in each gable end. The structure stands above a lighted basement. The principal (west) facade has a centrally placed door with sidelights and a rectangular transom subdivided in a radiating pattern usually associated with elliptical fan lights.

The interior follows the norm with a central hall opening on to two rooms on either side. The woodwork consists of block trim and wide mouldings. The hall now contains four panels French griselle scenic wall paper depicting scenes of the French Revolution. The two south parlors contain paneling which predates Medical Hall. It came from Belvidere, an early Harford County house located in what is now Aberdeen Proving Grounds and destroyed in 1942.

Immediately south of Medical Hall is a stone springhouse (HA-843) which 20th century owners have converted into a pump-house.

East of Medical Hall is a stone cottage (HA-982) believed to be a 19th century tenant house. The three bay structure is two stories high. The first floor windows have six over six lights while there on the second floor are three over three. The gable end second floor window in contrast has six over six sashes. All windows and doors have rectangular lintels of stone or brick. The "A" roof has deep eaves and a central chimney, a modern replacement of a central flue for stoves.

Three structures are located south of Medical Hall: a smoke-house (HA-252), spring house (HA-254), and a dwelling (HA-253). The substantial character of their fabric and the 18th century style appearance lend currency to the belief these structures consisted of the nucleus of the original farm complex. The spring house was constructed of stone and sits low to the ground under its "A" roof. The smoke house is similarly a stone building but is a full story and a half. A square window is located in the gable end with a door on the adjoining side. The dwelling is an interesting three part, "L" shaped vernacular structure. The base of the "L" is a two story stone structure two bays wide and two bays long. The windows have six over six sashes and flat arched lintels.

Description

A one and one half story stone structure adjoins one gable end at a right angle forming the "L". This section has a more steeply pitched A roof than its neighbor and a much larger chimney stack emerging from the gable end. A shed roof porch begins at the center of the one and one half story stone section and extends across the third frame section. It shares the same roof as well as the shed porch with the one and one half story stone section.

In addition to the 19th and possibly late 18th century structures, Medical Hall contains the important archaeological sites. Of primary significance is the site of Dr. John Archer's office and medical school (HA-844). An 1860 landscape painting of the house has substantiated the assertion that ruins south of Medical Hall are the office. The dimensions of the ruins match those given for Dr. Archer's office in an 1814 federal tax assessment for Harford County.

To the north of Medical Hall on a rise of ground is the probable site of Dr. Archer's first house (HA-981) which he abandoned in 1777 because of reoccurring nightmares. Immediately adjacent to the present Medical Hall is the site of Archer's second house.

#8 Significance

Five of John Archer's six sons followed their father into medicine. The sixth, Stevenson Archer, became a lawyer. In 1817 James Madison appointed him judge of the Mississippi Territory. He returned to Maryland and continued his political career as a Congressman, judge of the circuit court, and Chief Justice of Maryland (1844-1848) The association of Stevenson Archer with Medical Hall gives the structure historic significance.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The importance of the Medical Hall complex centers around its historical association with John Archer (1741-1810), the first man to receive a degree in medicine in America. Archer was first in the first class to receive degrees in medicine from the Philadelphia College, the earliest chartered medical school.¹ Prior to that time he had been one of an estimated 3500 practitioners without a degree.

Archer treated countless patients from his office (HA-844), taught medicine to fifty students, and initiated inoculation for whooping cough. He devoted much of his time to the needs of the poor. Archer founded the Harford County Medical Society and was a charter member of the Medical and Chirurgical Faculty of Maryland.

Archer's public service extended to a direct participation in the American Revolution.

As a member of the HA Co. Committee of Safety he signed the Bush Resolution (1774) and the Bush Declaration (1775), two documents which supported independence. He represented Harford County in the convention which wrote the states first constitution. Archer served as captain in the county militia. In 1782 he was judge of the orphans court. He terminated his political career with two terms in Congress (1801-1805).

John Archer had inherited his HA Co. home from his father, Thomas Archer who had come to Maryland to supervise a British iron foundry on nearby Deer Creek.

Re: Medical Hall, Harford County, Md.
Anne I. Hall

Dear Miss Shull:

Miss Hall owned Medical Hall, and she died October 10, 1981. I am co-personal representative of her estate.

The Maryland Historical Trust has advised that Medical Hall Historic District, Harford County, was listed on the National Register of Historic Places on August 29, 1973.

A tax question arises. Our law gives favorable inheritance tax treatment to national register property, the statute reading in part:

"(2) Real property that qualifies as national register property through its listing in the National Register of Historic Places, whether as a separate property or as part of a listed district, shall be valued on the basis of its actual use at the time of the death of the decedent." Article 81, Section 154 of Anno. Code of Maryland.

Medical Hall, in popular view at least, consists of 200+ acres. Thus the question: How much acreage "qualifies as national register property through its listing in the National Register of Historic Places"?

Any information you have on this question would be greatly appreciated.

Also, other information that you think personal representatives should know about.

Very truly yours,

J. Harry Cross
