DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Mendota lies on the south bank of the Minnesota River just at the point where the Mississippi and the Minnesota Rivers unite. The area is approximately 50 acres of hilly lightly wooded land north of Sibley Highway and west of "D" street in Mendota and encompasses 7 historic structures. The border of the nominated property runs south on the east line of Government lot #2, sec. 28, T. 28 N, R 23 W, Dakota County to interstate highway 55; thence southwest on said highway to intersection with Sibley Highway; thence northeast on said highway to intersection with "D" Street; thence northwest on "D" Street to C & NW railroad. Follow a line straight north to the Dakota Ramsey county line; thence southwest on said line to boundary of government lot #2 extended north.

The Church of St. Peter's stands on approximately 18 acres of land owned by the Catholic Church. The first church built on the present site was a log cabin which was replaced in 1853 by the present structure. The church is small (35x75) and was constructed of native limestone. The present stained glass windows were added in 1904 and the original spire has been replaced twice. The cross which originally topped the spire now hangs over the door. The interior of the church has been altered and is of the poorer parish variety. St. Peter's is the oldest church in continuous use in Minnesota. From the front step of St. Peter's, one can see the walls of Fort Snelling Restoration across the Minnesota River.

About 640 ft. northeast of St. Peter's and down the hill are the Sibley and Faribault Houses. The 3-storey limestone structures built between 1835 and 1840, are similar in both appearance and repair, Sibley's being the larger of the two. Both had hand hewn timbers and hand split shingles, the limestone having been secured with mud which has since been replaced with mortar. The rooms of the Sibley House have all been furnished after the style of the period with many of Sibley's own furnishings and possessions throughout. In one room a section of the wall has been exposed to show its unique construction.

The Faribault House is used as a meeting place for the D.A.R. and as a library. The kitchen and the dining room in the basement have been restored and the second floor is used as a museum for Indian artifacts.

Located on the grounds surrounding these houses are General Sibley's ice-house, smokehouse and washhouse, also in good repair. The washhouse has been rebuilt as a home for the caretaker.

Up the hill and about 320 ft. southeast of the Sibley and Faribault Houses is the 2-story red brick house built in 1854 by Hipolite DePuis, Sibley's secretary. This house has also been restored and is in good repair. Its appearance has been changed somewhat by the addition of an awning over the entrance and a frame addition at the rear, as the building presently houses a tea-room restaurant.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The area of land at the meeting of the Minnesota and Mississippi Rivers was first explored by white men such as Pierre LeSueur in 1690, Jonathan Carver in 1767 and Lieutenant Zebulon Pike in 1805. Since it was such an ideal trade center, the American Fur Company established a post at Mendota, then called St. Peter's, in the early 1800's. Because of the rapid growth of trade and contact with the Sioux in the area, President Monroe name Lawrence Taliaferro as Indian agent to St. Peter's in 1819. Taliaferro was the first Indian agent in the territory. That same year Colonel Henry Leavenworth was commissioned to build an army post in the area. He first chose Mendota as the site, (Cantonment New Hope) but several months later moved across the river, upstream from the present site of Fort Snelling (Camp Coldwater). These fort sites are within the Fort Snelling Historic District.

The fur trade flourished and with the re-organization of the American Fur Company in 1835 a new agent, Henry H. Sibley, came to Mendota. From his installation at Mendota until his death in 1891, Sibley was one of the most important figures in Minnesota's history. The 27 years he spent in Mendota before he moved to St. Paul are the years of Sibley's rise in politics and account for the bulk of Mendota's historical significance.

When Sibley arrived at the small settlement in eastern Minnesota he found only "a small group of log huts". He built the first stone house in the territory there in 1836. This house was used as a fur post as well as a residence and Indians slept on the third floor. The second stone house was built in 1839 by an old fur trader, Jean Baptiste Faribault.

In 1843 Sibley married the daughter of Franklin Steele, settler at Fort Snelling. Sibley hosted and visited a long succession of army officers at the Fort, among them Josiah Snelling and Zachary Taylor. Many of these frontier friendships, born around a log fire in the Mendota trading post, were continued through the decades to the halls of the U.S. Congress, White House, governor's mansion, and state house. In 1848 Alexander Ramsey, first governor of the Minnesota Territory, issued his first proclamation from Sibley's House.

Sibley's popularity grew and in 1849 he was named as the Minnesota Territories first representative to Congress. The same year the village of Mendota was formally organized. Because of his admiration for Sibley, Stephen Douglas nominated Mendota to be Minnesota's state capital ~~site~~. The site, however, was changed to St. Paul at Sibley's request.

From 1854 to 1857 Mendota served as the county seat for Dakota County. Sibley was serving as a member of the State Constitutional Convention at the time and with the adoption of the constitution came the election of Sibley as first governor of the State. Mendota served as the governor's home until 1862 when Sibley moved to St. Paul.

Despite its fame as a trade center and home of one of the political leaders of the state, Mendota's growth as a town was slow and much surpassed by the city across the river, St. Paul. Yet historically the village provided the seat for Minnesota's first civil government and the first home for the leading men in Minnesota's settlement and growth.
