DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This rectangular one-story frame nave plan country church with deep channelled siding has a high pitch roof and bell tower. Its interior is veneered with tongue and grooved unpainted board and features an elaborate altar and baptismal font and pipe organ. Notable are the building's bracket tracery and stained glass windows. Photographs of the church in 1884 and 1888 are extant. An addition to the Parish House was made in 1929 and the addition to the church which completed the link between the buildings was completed in 1960.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Christ Episcopal Church and Parish House were built 1882-84 and 1888, respectively. The conceptual design by Bishop Charles Todd Quintard was interpreted and executed by local craftsmen to create a notable example of Victorian Gothic country church architecture reflective of the home country of many of its parishioners. These Englishmen along with Northern capitalists founded this rural industrial community.

Christ Church illustrates the tastes and social and religious orientations uncommon to this area before the industrial exploitation of this mountainous region in the post-reconstruction years.

The Church is notable for its entirely wooden construction and decor, its hand carved altar and baptismal font, and its stained glass windows from the studios of leading American and English designers.

If a description are inadequate. I don't understand how the connecting wing could date from 1960. Nice building, but needs to be justified on architectural grounds. - not significant for religion.
