ABOUT

The Women's Suffrage Centennial Commission (WSCC) was formed by Congress to commemorate the 100th anniversary of women's right to vote and the 19th Amendment.

Throughout 2020, the United States is celebrating the centennial of the ratification of the 19th Amendment, which secured women's constitutional right to vote. Today, more than 68 million American women vote in elections because of the courageous suffragists who never gave up the fight for equality. This centennial is an unparalleled opportunity to elevate women's history and to commemorate a milestone of American democracy.

Use this toolkit as your guide to commemorating the centennial in your state and community.

THE WOMEN'S SUFFRAGE MOVEMENT

Suffragists began their organized fight for women's equality in 1848 when they demanded the right to vote during the first women's rights convention in Seneca Falls, New York. For the next 72 years, women leaders lobbied, marched, picketed, and protested for the right to the ballot. The U.S. House of Representatives finally approved the "Susan B. Anthony Amendment," which guaranteed women the right to vote, on May 21, 1919. The U.S. Senate followed two weeks later and voted to approve the 19th Amendment on June 4, 1919. The 19th Amendment then went to the states, where it had to be ratified by three-fourths of the then 48 states to be added to the Constitution. Tennessee became the 36th and final state needed to ratify the 19th Amendment on August 18, 1920. On August 26, 1920, the U.S. Secretary of State issued a proclamation declaring the 19th Amendment ratified and officially part of the U.S. Constitution. Today, August 26th is celebrated annually as Women's Equality Day.

ARIZONA QUICK FACTS

- Arizona ratified the 19th Amendment on February 12, 1920.
- Before the 19th Amendment, Arizona became the tenth state in which women won full voting rights in 1912 when the state's male electorate voted on an initiative (pushed forward by suffragists) to grant women the right to vote shortly after Arizona achieved statehood.
- Arizona was home to prominent suffragists such as Josephine Brawley Hughes, Frances Willard Munds, Maie Heard, and Pauline O'Neill.
- The Arizona Suffrage Association was the leading suffrage organization in the state.

ARIZONA AND THE 19TH AMENDMENT

RATIFICATION DATE: FEBRUARY 12, 1920

Women first organized and collectively fought for suffrage at the national level in July of 1848. Suffragists such as Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott convened a meeting of over 300 people in Seneca Falls, New York. In the following decades, women marched, protested, lobbied, and even went to jail. By the 1870s, women pressured Congress to vote on an amendment that would recognize their suffrage rights. This amendment was sometimes known as the Susan B. Anthony amendment and became the 19th Amendment.

The amendment reads:

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

Arizona became a territory of the US in 1863 and was not a state during the early days of discussions about a federal amendment enfranchising women. Suffragists in the Arizona territory worked to build support for women's right to vote and lobby the territorial government. They were successful in getting woman suffrage bills introduced several times in the 1880s, but each was defeated in the legislature. Josephine Brawley Hughes created the first women's suffrage organization in 1891 as the push for Arizona statehood began. She was joined by other women such as Frances Willard Munds. Hughes, Munds, and other suffragists campaigned for women's right to vote to be included in the new state constitution. President Benjamin Harrison rejected Arizona's bid for statehood and the constitutional protection of woman suffrage was no longer available.

Munds eventually became the leader of the Arizona Suffrage Association in the early 1900s. She reached out to Mormon women in the territory – something other groups refused to do. Mormons were often discriminated against due to their religion. But Munds recognized the importance of Mormon women in the fight for suffrage.

They came close to success when the territorial legislature passed a suffrage bill in 1903, but Governor Alexander Brodie vetoed it. Brodie also objected to the idea of including women as eligible voters in a proposed state constitution, fearing that including suffrage would hurt Arizona's chance for statehood.

Arizona became a state on February 14, 1912. Suffragists pushed for a woman suffrage initiative to be put to the voters right away. In November 1912, the Arizona male electorate voted overwhelmingly in favor of enfranchising women. Arizona was the tenth state in which women won full voting rights.

After decades of arguments for and against women's suffrage, the US Congress finally approved the 19th Amendment in June 1919. After Congress passed the 19th Amendment, at least 36 states needed to vote in favor of it for it to become law. This process is called ratification.

On February 12, 1920, Arizona voted to ratify the 19th Amendment. By August of 1920, 36 states (including Arizona) ratified the amendment, ensuring that the right to vote could not be denied based on sex.
