Ben –

As a broad statement of law this is fine. It needs to be supplemented with a case-by-case analysis of each individual's financial interests, which I assume you plan to do.

(Within a week or so there will also be a new waiver standard for advisory committee members under the new ethics law — ie waiver if need for service outweighs conflict. That should help too.

Comments

The purpose of the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology is to conduct a continuing review and assessment of developments in all areas of science and technology and to report to the President, advising him on such matters.

Authority

Under the provisions of a 1989 executive order, the President has the authority to appoint up to 15 persons to serve as members of the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology. One of these persons shall be the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Advisors, who shall serve as the chairman of the Council and report directly to the President. The remaining appointees to the Council shall be distinguished individuals from the private sector. The members would serve thereafter at the pleasure of the President.

Financial Disclosure Review

Based on a review of their resumes and their written responses to the Personal Data Statement (long form), each of the prospective nominees was interviewed to determine whether any financial interests or outside activities exist that might conflict with the duties of the position for which he is pending nomination. Since these are part-time, noncompensated positions, the prospective nominees were not required to file an SF 278. Similarly, section 102 of Executive Order 12674, prohibiting outside earned income, is inapplicable since it applies by its express terms only to full-time noncareer employees in the Executive Branch. The Council members, however, will be formally appointed to perform a federal function under the supervision of the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, who is a full-time federal officer. In addition, although the Council has an advisory function, the members are not serving in a purely representative capacity. The statutory definitions of "employees" and "special government employees" provided in Titles 5 and 18 are therefore applicable and suggest that the members may be considered special government employees (SGE's).

Under Title 18, SGE's are treated less restrictively under sections 203, 205, and 209 (and also under section 207 since these members are expected to serve less than 60 days a year). Section 208, however, would remain fully applicable. Section 208 expressly covers SGE's in its prohibition on participation in particular matters in which the SGE, his spouse or minor child, or an organization in which he is serving has a financial interest. Section 208 does not carry the narrower language of sections 203, 205, and 207 that would only disqualify SGE's from particular matters "involving a specific party or parties" in which the United States is a party or has an interest. In the absence of this reference to specific parties, participation by advisory committee members in deliberations tied to general rulemaking and the formulation of general policy must be scrutinized under section 208. The private affiliations of each of the prospective members therefore have been examined to ensure that no conflicts of interest arise under Title 18 as a consequence of their appointment to the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology.

"Particular matters" include any discrete or identifiable decision, recommendation, or other activities even though its outcome may have a broad impact. The Attorney General has interpreted section 208 as requiring recusal or formal exemption in cases of rulemaking proceedings and advisory committee deliberations of general applicability whenever the outcome may have a direct and predictable effect on a company or organization with which an employee or SGE has a financial interest, even though all other companies or organizations similarly situated will be affected in a like manner. Advice of a broad nature related to a particular matter is therefore covered by section 208 even if no preference or advantage over other companies or organizations might be gained. Notwithstanding this broad scope of section 208, the phrase "particular matter[s]" also means that an advisory committee member would not be disqualified from an entire area or range of activities merely because a certain decision or ~~or~~ recommendation might have some type of impact on a financial interest attributable to that person. Rather, the activity must have a direct and predictable effect upon the person's financial interest in order for a conflict to disqualify that individual as a participant in the advisory committee deliberations.

Other Information

The prospective nominees also were asked the standard interview questions. Unless otherwise indicated specifically in the individual biographies below, each person replied that he had never been arrested or had any difficulty with law enforcement officials apart from minor traffic citations. They stated that all tax returns for the last three years had been filed in a timely manner with ordinary extensions and that they have had no difficulties in the past with any tax authorities. They stated that they have never served as a registered foreign agent. Finally, they replied that no other investigations are pending on them, apart from the current FBI background investigation, nor do they know of any information in their background that might be embarrassing to them or to the President.

MEMORANDUM FOR C. BOYDEN GRAY
COUNSEL TO THE PRESIDENT

FROM: D. ALLAN BROMLEY
ASSISTANT TO THE PRESIDENT FOR SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY AND DIRECTOR OF SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY POLICY

SUBJECT: Conflict of Interest Exemptions

Pursuant to the provisions of 18 U.S.C. 208(b)(3) concerning advisory committees, I am writing to request a conflicts of interest exemption of certain prospective members of the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology from the conflicts of interest prohibitions of 18 U.S.C. 208(a). Exemptions under section 208(b)(3) may be granted where "the need for the individual's services outweighs the potential for a conflict of interest created by the financial interest involved" and where the individual has made a disclosure of the financial interests at issue. Executive Order 12674, section 402, delegates to the Counsel to the President exemption authority under 18 U.S.C. 208(b) for presidential appointees to committees established by the President.

Section 208(a) prohibits federal Executive Branch employees and special government employees from participating personally and substantially in matters in which the person has a financial interest. In the event that a person may be considered a special government employee by reason of his membership on the Council, the member would be under a statutory obligation to refrain from participating in any deliberations that involve a particular matter having a direct and predictable effect on a financial interest attributable to the member.

The Council members' duties, however, are essentially advisory and do not necessarily cause the individuals to be considered special government employees. The functions of the Council, as stated in the executive order establishing the Council, are to advise the President on matters of science and technology, to conduct a continuing review and assessment of developments in the field, and to report thereon to the President. It is my understanding that the Council will not be called upon to determine any particular controversies in which the legal rights of specific parties are at stake nor to deliberate on measures that would be targeted to specific companies or parts of any industries in science or technology. Nonetheless, even with this exemption certification, each person will be required to recuse himself or herself from participation in any matter before the Council that could uniquely affect the financial interests of the member or any financial interests attributable to the member.

Although the statutory prohibitions may not be applicable to the members, this request for exemption seeks in the exercise of caution to ensure that the members may freely fulfill their responsibilities on the Council in the performance of the members' limited federal duties. I therefore request exemptions for the persons named herein, who are presently pending formal nominations to serve as members of the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology. I have concluded that the deliberations of the Council conceivably may have a direct and predictable effect on those financial interests described below, interests which have been disclosed by the nominees. If the exemptions are granted, a copy of the exemption certification will be provided to the Director of the Office of Government Ethics.

A separate issue arises, however, concerning whether the statutory definitions of "employees" and "special government employees" provided in Titles 5 and 18 apply in this case to require that the members should be treated as special government employees (SGE's) for conflicts of interest review under Title 18.

The Council members will be formally appointed to fill an advisory role, thereby performing a limited federal function. They serve in this position under the supervision of the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, who is a full-time federal officer. In addition, the members serve in a representative capacity in so far as they are qualified for selection because of their status as "distinguished individuals from the private sector." In a memorandum to Counsel's Office dated October 13, 1989, OGE has concluded on similar facts that the members of another advisory committee, the National Advisory Committee on Semiconductors, were not government employees and therefore were not subject to the conflict of interest provisions of 18 U.S.C. 208. However, in the exercise of caution should the members of the Council later be determined to be SGE's, section 208 has been fully applied to the Council nominees in the preparation of their nominations, as will be discussed below.

Section 208 expressly includes SGE's in the prohibition on participation in particular matters in which the SGE, his spouse or minor child, or an organization in which the SGE is serving has a financial interest. Section 208 does not carry the narrower language of sections 203, 205, and 207 that would only disqualify SGE's from particular matters "involving a specific party or parties" in which the United States is a party or has an interest. (SGE's are also treated less restrictively under section 207 since these members are expected to serve less than 60 days a year.) "Particular matters" include any discrete or identifiable decision, recommendation, or activity even though its outcome may have a broad impact. The Attorney General has interpreted section 208 as requiring recusal or formal exemption in cases of rulemaking proceedings and advisory committee deliberations of general applicability whenever the outcome may have a direct and predictable effect on a company or organization in which an employee or SGE has a financial interest, even though all other companies or organizations similarly situated will be affected in a like manner. Advice of a broad nature related to a particular matter is covered by section 208 even if no preference or advantage over other companies or organizations might be gained. Consequently, section 208 would require that any participation by these advisory committee members in deliberations on particular matters tied to general rulemaking or the formulation of general policy would have to be scrutinized.

Notwithstanding this broad scope of section 208, the restriction still applies only to those activities having a direct and predictable effect upon the person's financial interest. This direct and predictable effect is the test of the degree of impact on a financial interest attributable to the individual that is required for a conflict to actually disqualify that individual from participating in advisory committee deliberations on a particular matter. This means, therefore, that an advisory committee member would not be disqualified from an entire area or range of activities merely because a certain decision or recommendation could have some type of impact on a financial interest attributable to that person.

In those instances where a financial interest would be disqualifying under section 208(a), the amendments under the Ethics Reform Act of 1989 now provide additional exemption authority under section 208(b) for SGE's serving on or being considered for an appointment to an advisory committee. An exemption may be granted under subsection 208(b)(3) where "the need for the individual's services outweighs the potential for a conflict of interest created by the financial interest involved" and where the individual has made a disclosure of the financial interests at issue. The official responsible for the SGE's appointment, upon full disclosure of the disqualifying financial interest, may certify in writing that the need for the individual's services outweighs the potential for a conflict of interest created by the financial interest involved. Executive Order 12674, section 402, delegates exemption authority under section 208(b) to the Counsel to the President for presidential appointees to committees, commissions, boards or similar groups established by the President.

I discussed with Gary Davis at OGE the implementation of this new statutory authority for conflict of interest exemptions of advisory committee members under 18 U.S.C. 208(b)(3). OGE has stated that at least until new implementing regulations can be prepared, the procedure to be followed should parallel that of waivers under subsection 208(b)(1). The disclosure of the financial interests may be made within the written certifications signed by the appointing authority or his proper delegee, followed by delivery of copies of the certifications to OGE.

Describe the grounds for making such a certification. Also, there should be consideration of whether there are some classes of issues from which individual members should abstain in order to avoid severe appearance problems.

The resumes and written responses to the Personal Data Statement (long form) of each of the prospective nominees has been reviewed to identify the financial interests or outside activities that might conflict with the duties of the position for which he or she is pending nomination. A description of these financial interests and the private affiliations of each of the prospective nominees follows.

Because individuals serving in ~~such~~ similar positions have generally been deemed to be SGE's, the analysis in this memorandum assumes that the members would be SGE's subject to the conflict-of-interest requirements of 18 U.S.C. 208.

position without compensation under the supervision of the Director of the Office of Science and Technology Policy, who is a full-time federal officer. As a matter of caution, however, in the event that the members of the Council may be determined to be SGE's, section 208 has been applied to the Council nominees in the analysis and preparation of their nominations.

Section 208 prohibits federal Executive Branch employees and special government employees from participating personally and substantially in matters in which the person has a financial interest. This section expressly includes SGE's in the prohibition on participation in particular matters in which the SGE, his spouse or minor child, or an organization in which the SGE is serving has a financial interest. Section 208 does not carry the narrower language of sections 203, 205, and 207 that would only disqualify SGE's from particular matters "involving a specific party or parties" in which the United States is a party or has an interest. (SGE's are also treated less restrictively under section 207 since these members are expected to serve less than 60 days a year.) "Particular matters" include any discrete or identifiable decision, recommendation, or activity even though its outcome may have a broad impact. In view of the possibility that a person could be considered a special government employee by reason of his membership on the Council, the member would be held to a statutory obligation to refrain from participating in any deliberations that involve a particular matter having a direct and predictable effect on a financial interest attributable to the member.

The Attorney General has interpreted section 208 as requiring recusal or formal exemption in cases of rulemaking proceedings and advisory committee deliberations of general applicability whenever the outcome may have a direct and predictable effect on a company or organization in which an employee or SGE has a financial interest, even though all other companies or organizations similarly situated will be affected in a like manner. Advice of a broad nature related to a particular matter is covered by section 208 even if no preference or advantage over other companies or organizations might be gained. Consequently, section 208 would require that any participation by these advisory committee members in deliberations on particular matters tied to general rulemaking or the formulation of general policy would have to be scrutinized.

Notwithstanding this broad scope of section 208, the restriction still applies only to those activities having a direct and predictable effect upon the person's financial interests. This direct and predictable effect is the test of the degree of impact on a financial interest attributable to the individual that is required for a conflict to actually disqualify that individual from participating in advisory committee deliberations on a particular matter. This means, therefore, that an advisory recuse oneself in such a circumstance would exceed the protection intended under the waiver and constitute a possible violation of section 208.

I have discussed with Gary Davis at OGE the implementation of this new statutory authority for the conflict of interest exemption of advisory committee members under 18 U.S.C. 208(b)(3). OGE has stated that at least until new implementing regulations can be prepared, the procedure to be followed should parallel that of waivers under subsection 208(b)(1). He also said that the required disclosure of financial interests for the waivers may be made within the written waivers as signed by the appointing authority or his proper delegee. This must be followed by delivery of copies of the waivers to OGE. Consistent with these guidelines from OGE, waiver requests have been separately prepared for each of the individuals.

Other Information

The prospective nominees also were asked the standard interview questions. Unless otherwise indicated specifically in the individual biographies below, each person replied that he had never been arrested or had any difficulty with law enforcement officials apart from minor traffic citations.
