Program Description

The U.S. Department of Energy (DOE), Office of Health and Environmental Research (OHER), established the Alexander Hollaender Distinguished Postdoctoral Fellowship Program in 1986 in memory of the late Dr. Alexander Hollaender, 1983 recipient of DOE's prestigious Enrico Fermi Award. Research conducted under his direction was instrumental in making DOE's biomedical research programs among the most prominent in the world. This program continues the tradition of excellence that was characteristic of all Dr. Hollaender's activities in research and education.

These fellowships are tenable at DOE laboratories having substantial research programs supportive of the OHER mission (see section on participating laboratories). This mission is directed at understanding the health and environmental effects associated with energy technologies and developing and sustaining basic and applied research programs at the frontiers of biomedical and environmental sciences in which DOE has responsibilities or unique capabilities. OHER's research mission includes atmospheric, marine, and terrestrial systems; molecular and subcellular mechanisms underlying human somatic and genetic processes; nuclear medicine; structural biology; and development of instrumentation necessary to achieve programmatic success (see section on programs and research areas of OHER).

Sponsor

The fellowship program is supported by the U.S. Department of Energy, Office of Health and Environmental Research, and administered by the Oak Ridge Institute for Science and Education (ORISE).

Eligibility

Applicants must have received a doctoral degree (PhD, MD, DVM, or equivalent) in an appropriate discipline (or completed all internship or residency requirements) within two years of the desired starting date, or expect to complete all such requirements prior to the desired starting date. The desired starting date should be between May 1 and September 30, 1993.

This program is open to all qualified U.S. citizens and permanent resident aliens without regard to race, sex, religion, color, age, handicap, national origin, or status as a disabled veteran or veteran of the Vietnam era.

Disciplines

Disciplines appropriate to the fellowship program include those in the life, biomedical, and environmental sciences and other supporting scientific disciplines. Applicants interested in research related to OHER's Human Genome Program or Global Climate Change Program should request information and application forms relevant to these fellowships.

Selection Criteria

The selection of fellows is based on academic records; recommendations; scientific interests; compatibility of the applicant's background and interests with the needs of the research center; and the availability of funds, programs, staff, and facilities.

Benefits

Fellows receive an annual stipend of $37,500 the first year and $40,500 the second year. Inbound travel and moving expenses (limit $2,500) are reimbursed according to the ORISE Travel and Moving Policies. Fellowships are for one year, renewable for a second year upon recommendation of the laboratory at which the fellowship is held, and subject to the availability of funds.

Obligations

Fellows must show proof of health and medical insurance. Fellowships involve a full-time commitment to the research program at the host laboratory.

Application Information

Completed applications and all supporting materials should be received by January 15, 1993. Fellowship offers will be made in May 1993.

and Supporting Disciplines

The Oak Ridge Institute for Science and Education (ORISE) carries out national and international programs in science and engineering education, training and management systems, energy and environment systems, and medical sciences. ORISE conducts these programs for the U.S. Department of Energy through a management and operating contract with Oak Ridge Associated Universities (ORAU). Established in 1946, ORAU is a consortium of 62 colleges and universities. This program is administered by the Science/Engineering Education Division under contract number DE-AC05-76OR00033 between the U.S. Department of Energy and Oak Ridge Associated Universities.
