Dear Mr. Bromley:

The crisis in the Persian Gulf reinforces once again the value of the USO to America's Armed Forces.

That is why we are inviting you to attend a very special event to benefit World USO and its worldwide mission of support for our troops now fighting for freedom overseas.

On Friday April 5, 1991, World USO will host its 50th Anniversary Salute at Universal Studios in Los Angeles. This recognition event will honor the USO and the many celebrities and volunteers who have so generously given their time for our soldiers, sailors, marines, airmen, and coastguardsmen.

In recognition of your service as a governmental leader, we would like you and your spouse or guest to join us for this historic event as a special guest of the USO.

Most important, proceeds from the Salute will benefit USO's current efforts to raise urgently needed funds to underwrite and continue its overseas operations and support programs for the dedicated troops now serving in the Persian Gulf.

I hope you will show your continued commitment to our troops stationed far from home by accepting our invitation to attend the USO 50th Anniversary Salute as our guest.

Admiral Bill Crowe, Co-Chairman of our 50th Anniversary, will join the many business leaders, military officials, and national dignitaries to honor those who have provided a "home away from home" for America's finest. President Bush, USO Honorary Chairman is planning to attend and former Presidents Reagan, Carter, Ford and Nixon have also been invited to join our Salute.

In this time of intense conflict, the USO's morale-boosting job for our country's enlisted men and women is more important and tougher than ever before. I am proud of what the USO has been able to do to meet some of the immediate needs of our troops, but I realize our job has just begun.

Please make your plans now to join us on April 5. Lending your name and personal support as a Special Guest will help make our 50th Anniversary Salute an overwhelming success and propel the USO into its sixth decade of outstanding service to America's Armed Forces deployed around the world.

If you have any questions regarding the Salute or need more information, please feel free to call Kelly Ward in my office at (202) 879-4702.

I look forward to hearing from you very soon.

Dear Dr. Bromley:

I am writing to invite you to participate in a luncheon roundtable on Thursday, April 11 here in Washington. The luncheon will be the focus of the closing session of the CSIS "Atlantic Partnership" project, and will take place between 12:00 and 2:30 p.m.

Our project has spent the last six months examining ways in which we can improve transatlantic defense trade and technology integration. On April 11, the twelve company CEOs and Presidents who make up the project Steering Committee (see attached list) will meet to review the project's draft recommendations prior to their May publication.

CSIS has invited a small group of senior U.S. and European policy-makers to join in a roundtable discussion of these recommendations. To ensure that our discussion is as productive as possible, the meeting will be held off-the-record and in an informal, "closed" format with minimal staff attendance. We would, of course, send you a copy of the draft project report prior to the meeting.

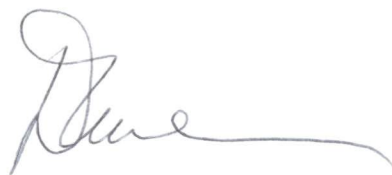

Events in the Middle East over recent months have brought into stark focus some of the challenges addressed by our project. The technology edge possessed by coalition forces was a critical element in their rapid and decisive victory. Technology and systems proliferation helped Saddam Hussein develop into a major regional threat. How can the Western Alliance maintain its technology edge, not just in the laboratories, but in the field, while at the same time ensuring that critical products stay out of the hands of potential adversaries? The uniqueness of this project is that its recommendations to overcome these and the many other challenges to the Alliance defense industrial and technology bases will reflect the joint position of twelve of our most senior U.S. and European industrial leaders.

The Honorable D. Allan Bromley
March 5, 1991

We hope that you can join us on April 11; your input into this final meeting of the "Atlantic Partnership" project would be invaluable to the project's success. If you have any questions about the meeting or the project, please do not hesitate to contact me.

With warm regards,

Sincerely yours,

Dear Dr. Bromley:

On behalf of the American Welding Society and Senator John McCain, it is my pleasure to invite you to a reception in honor of U.S. - Soviet cooperation in manufacturing technology transfer.

The reception will be held Thursday, March 14 at 6:00 PM in Room 188 of the Russell Senate Office Building. Hosted by Senator McCain, the reception will honor Dr. Boris Paton, Director of the E. W. Paton Electrical Welding Institute of Kiev, USSR. The Paton Institute is a showpiece of Soviet Science, and the recognized world leader in welding in space. Dr. Paton is visiting the United States as part of an ongoing technology exchange with the American Welding Society. This Congressional reception will be the final event of his tour, and we hope you will be able to join us.

Please call my office here in Washington at (202) 833-4787 to RSVP. I look forward to seeing you on the 14th.

Dear Dr. Bromley:

It is my pleasure to invite you to attend a lunch held in honor of our Winter Commencement guests immediately following the ceremony on Friday, March 22, 1991.

We will begin to gather around 11:30 a.m. in the Grand Lounge of the Faculty Club. A brief reception will precede the lunch to allow time for all guests to arrive.

We are looking forward to having you with us on March 22 for this special occasion.

Dear Allan:

This letter is to invite you to dedicate the new U.S. science laboratory at McMurdo. The event is planned for November 4-6, 1991. The inherent difficulties of travel to Antarctica will require that you leave Washington November 1, returning about November 10.

The dedication will highlight international cooperation and support for scientific excellence in the polar regions. The laboratory will support the most sophisticated scientific work ever done in Antarctica and the U.S. has offered to make the science laboratory available to scientists from all nations.

Concurrent with the McMurdo dedication, the new Christchurch International Antarctic Center, in which we are a partner, will be formally opened. The U.S. will participate in the dedication and in a Scientific Symposium to highlight Antarctica's scientific heritage and future.

We plan to highlight international scientific cooperation, a tradition in Antarctica encouraged by the Treaty. I welcome your recommendations about the content of the symposium, and would suggest that NSF also extend invitations to your counterparts from New Zealand, Italy, Australia, and France. Let me know your thoughts.

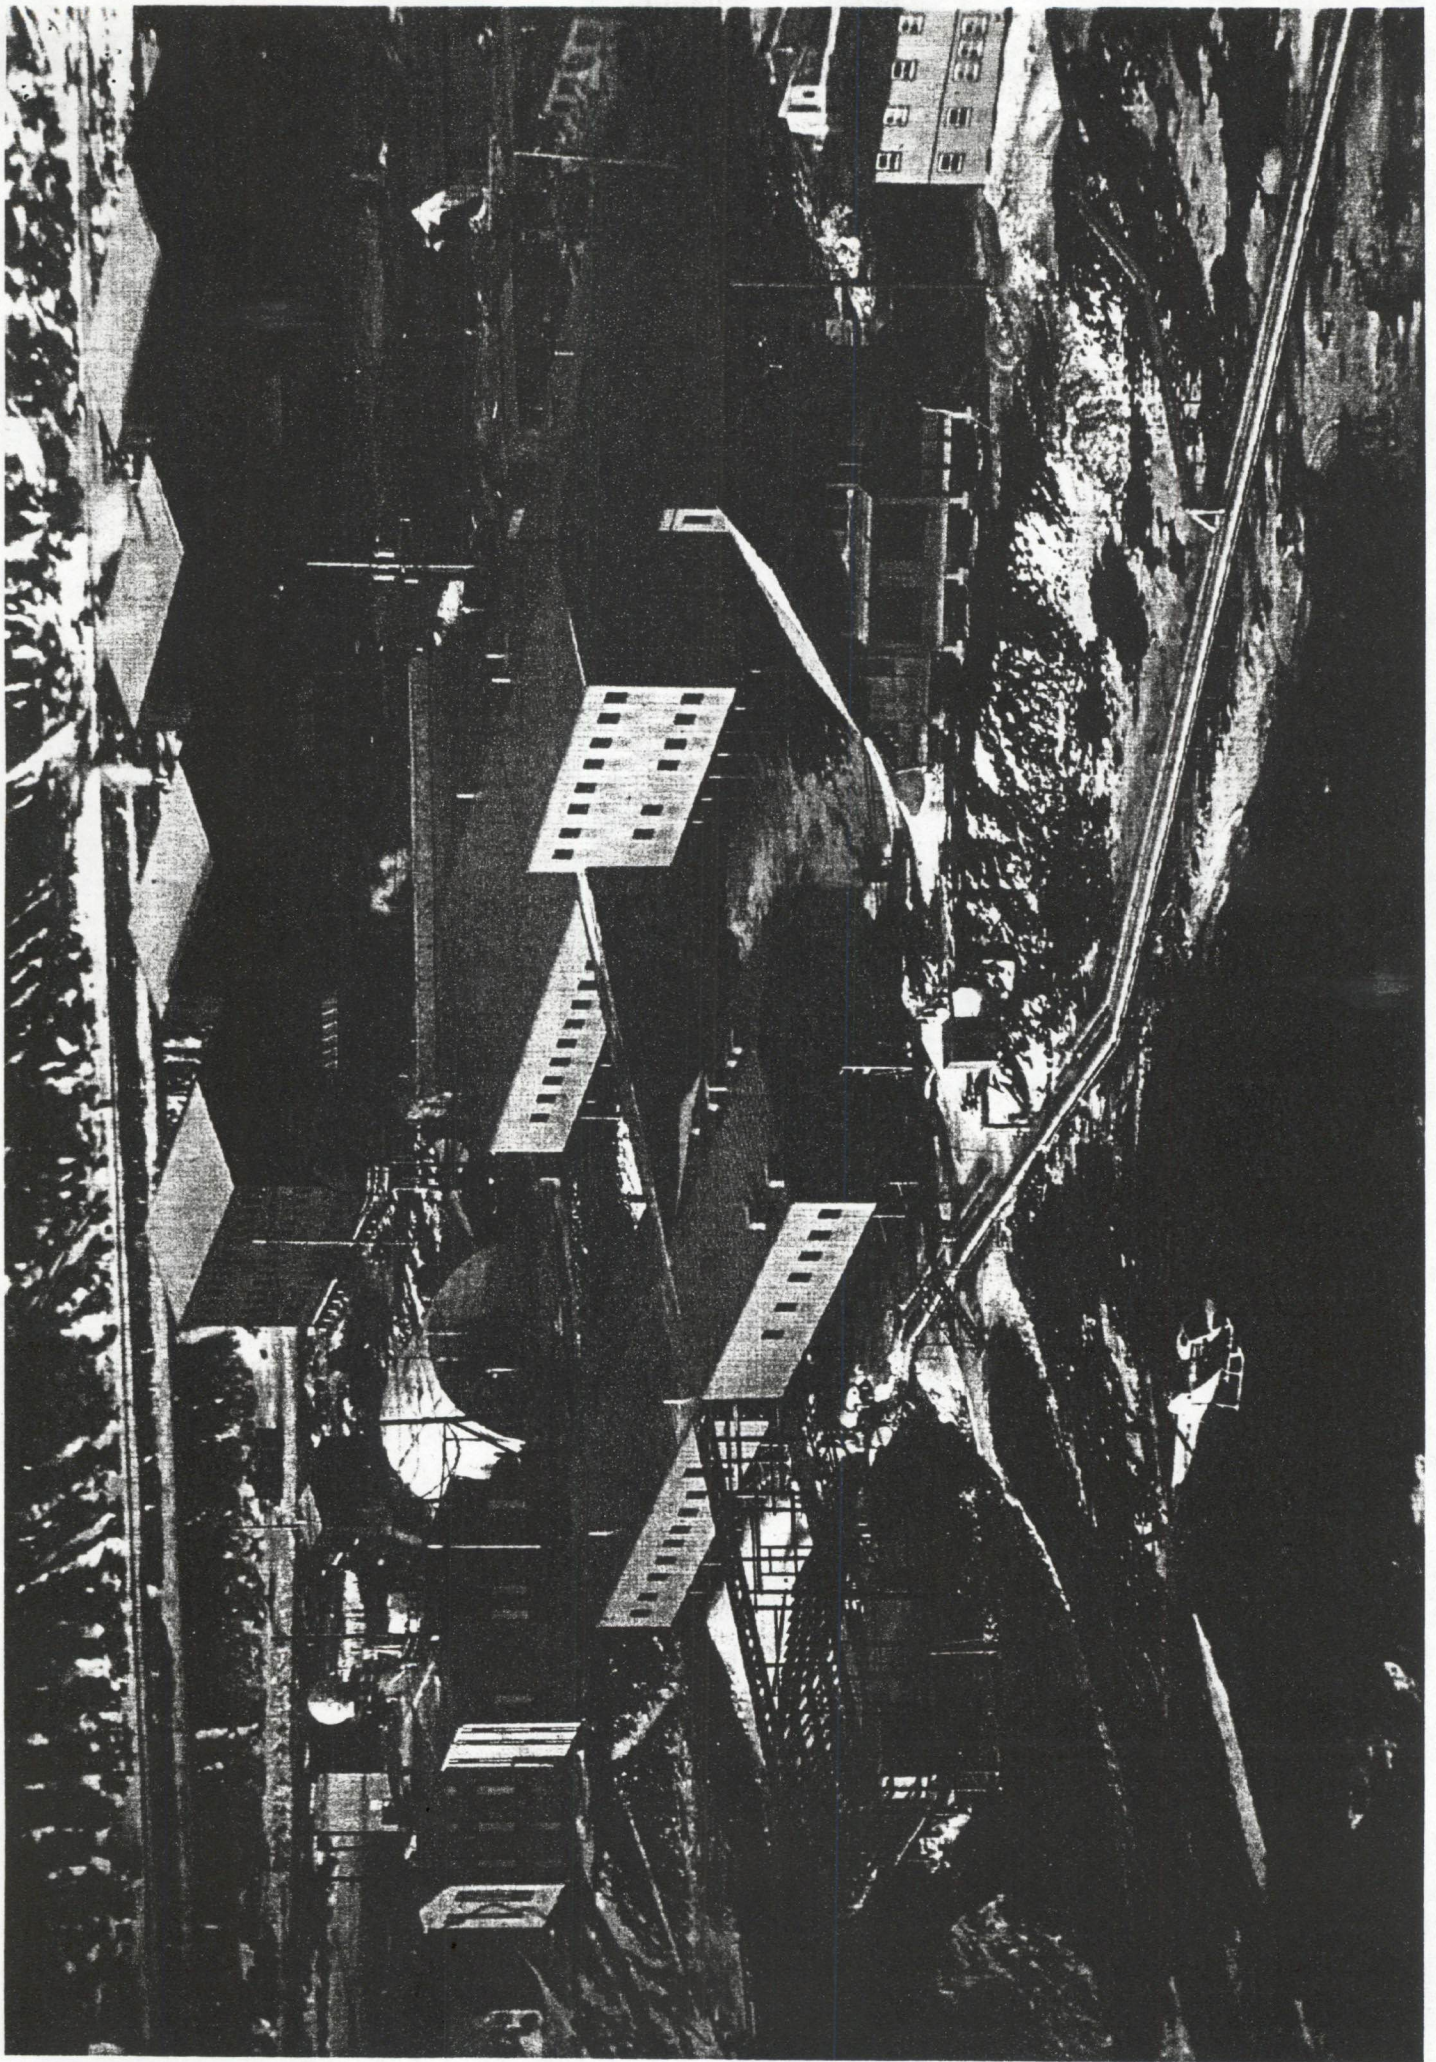

We hope you can join us in this important event. Enclosed are a photo of the Science Laboratory as it stands now and a brief description on the International Antarctic Center.

Sincerely,

Frederick M. Bernthal
Acting Director

Science laboratory
McMurdo Station, Antarctica

A 47,000-square-foot laboratory is being built at McMurdo Station, the largest station in Antarctica and operational hub of the United States Antarctic Program.

The laboratory consists of three sections connected by a passageway. The upper section contains biological and environmental laboratories and a center for information, communications, conferencing, and computing.

The middle section is for atmospheric and earth sciences, including glaciology.

The lower section, consisting of only a steel framework in this November 1989 photograph, will contain aquaria for marine biology studies.

The new laboratory will replace inadequate and antiquated structures built in the early 1960s. These structures are not visible in this photograph.

Other structures in this photograph:

The peaked-roof structure in the foreground is the National Science Foundation administration building (the "Chalet").

The four large brown buildings in the background are dormitories.

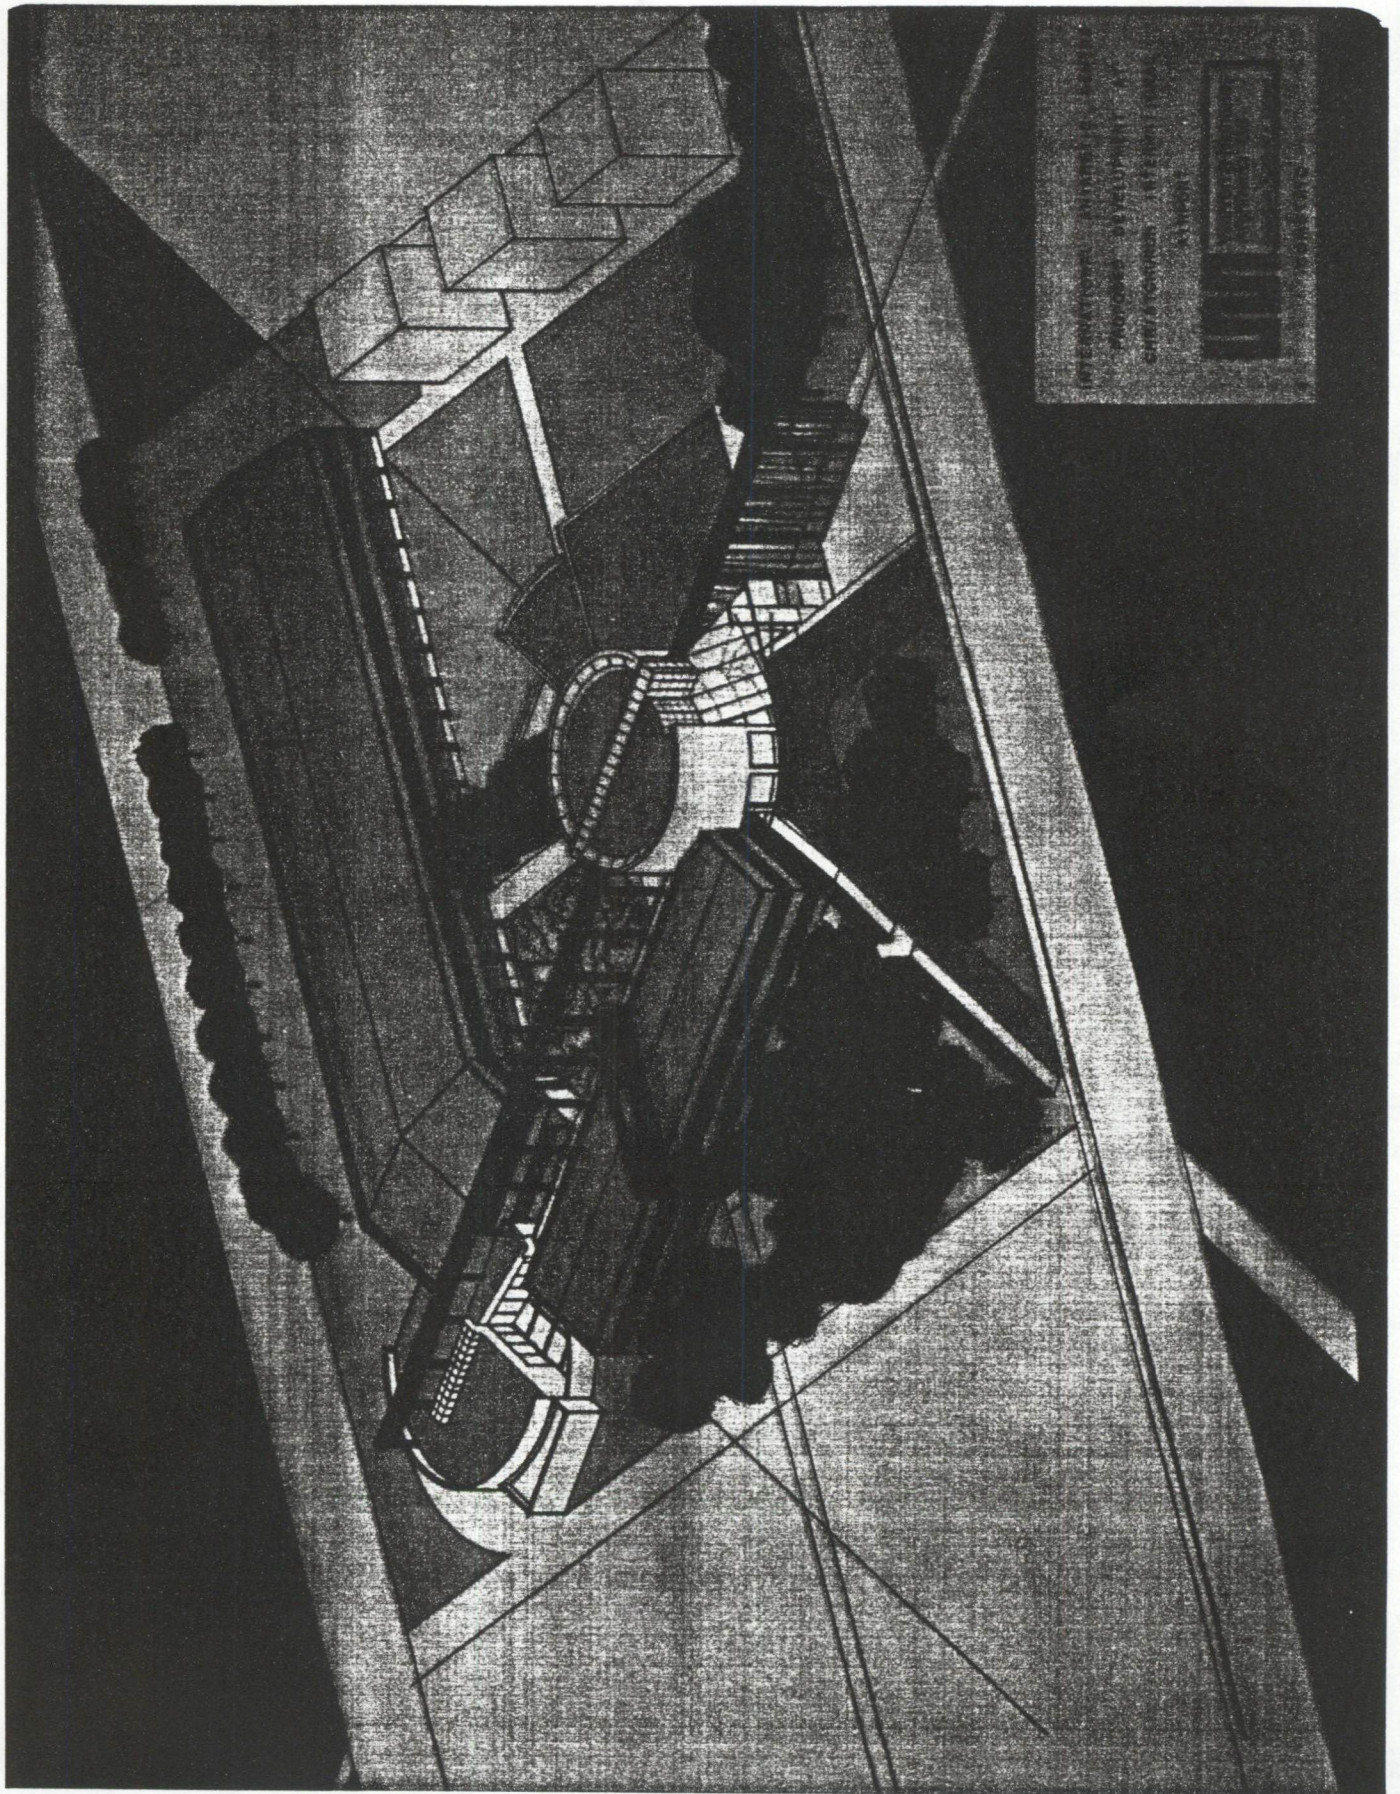

The tan building with a small white geodesic dome on its roof, at the lefthand side of the photograph, contains communications facilities and administrative offices.

Beyond the tan building one can view part of Winter Quarters Bay, McMurdo Station's seaport.

McMurdo Station is on the southern tip of Ross Island. It is 729 nautical miles from the geographic South Pole.

International Antarctic Center
Christchurch, New Zealand

The International Antarctic Center is a facility at Christchurch International Airport, on the South Island of New Zealand, that was opened in 1990 to provide operational and other services to entities that use New Zealand as a gateway to the Ross Sea region of Antarctica.

Currently, the United States Antarctic Program and the New Zealand Antarctic Research Program have long-term leases on space at the facility, which was designed and erected by the Christchurch International Airport Authority Ltd. Both programs moved to the center from older, inadequate facilities that they had occupied for many years in the Christchurch area.

Functions at the center include headquarters for the New Zealand Antarctic Research Program, an advance headquarters for the United States Antarctic Program, passenger processing for travel to and from Antarctica, polar clothing distribution areas, storage space, an antarctic library, and medical and postal facilities.

The International Antarctic Center when completed will comprise three distinct phases.

Phase 1, which has been completed, consists of two large buildings performing all of the services listed above. In the drawing, phase 1 consists of the two light blue, rectangular buildings.

Phase 2 will be an antarctic cultural and information center; the airport authority currently is completing studies and plans for phase 2. In the drawing, phase 2 is the circular building in the foreground.

Phase 3 will consist of berthing for personnel awaiting transit to Antarctica. In the drawing, phase 3 consists of the three outlined buildings to the viewer's right.

February 25, 1991

Dear Fellow:

I am pleased to announce the third annual meeting for Fellows of the American Academy in the Washington, D.C. area. The meeting will be held on the evening of Thursday, April 18, 1991, at the James Madison Memorial Building of The Library of Congress, 101 Independence Avenue, S. E. We are fortunate indeed to have as our guest speaker Professor Jonathan Spence of Yale University. His talk is entitled: "Crossing the Faiths: Chinese and Westerners since 1600."

This occasion will mark the 1728th Stated Meeting of the American Academy. In accordance with our traditional practice, the meeting will be open to all Fellows, their spouses and guests. The evening will begin with a reception at 6:30, followed by dinner at 7:15. Professor Spence will speak at about 8:30.

We are especially grateful to Dr. James Billington for inviting us to The Library of Congress, and to Professor Spence for accepting our invitation to speak.

A reservation card and return envelope are enclosed. Seating is limited so we must receive your reservation by April 4. The fee for cocktails and dinner will be $50.00 per person. If you wish additional information, please call Mrs. Murphy-Keyho (617/492-8800).

I look forward to seeing you on April 18.

Sincerely,

Leo L. Beranek

Dear Mr. Bromley:

New research shows that children who viewed Square One TV, Children's Television Workshop's math series for eight to twelve year olds, regularly showed significant improvement in their ability to solve unfamiliar, complex mathematical problems -- regardless of their socio-economic background, gender or ethnicity.

We believe the results are the most encouraging news yet about television and its role as an educator.

Please join Representative Bill Green, National Science Foundation Director Dr. Walter Massey and me for breakfast on Wednesday, March 13 at 8:30 a.m. in the Zenger Room on the 13th floor of the National Press Club, 14th and F Streets, N.W. We will present the study results in detail and our researchers will be available to respond to your questions.

Given the well-documented need to improve mathematics skills among many American students, it is encouraging to report that Square One TV viewers reached solutions that were more mathematically complete and sophisticated than non-viewers. In addition, many viewers spontaneously talked about enjoying math and problem-solving!

I look forward to seeing you at the National Press Club on March 13.

Sincerely,

David V.B. Britt

Dear Allan:

I would like to personally extend my congratulations on the truly visionary High Performance Computing and Communications Initiative that you and the FCCSET committee submitted with the FY92 Budget Request. Cray Research continues to aggressively support the Administration's efforts in high performance computing and communications. At the request of the FCCSET Working Group, I will be sending them my remarks on the Initiative, made during Cray's briefing on February 8, 1991. These can be summarized as:

- Build on current US successes in technology and computational science in addition to innovations in architecture;
- Broadly involve non-vendor industry and deal with issues that affect the large scale adoption of supercomputing by researchers and engineers from all industries and disciplines;
- Ensure that an entire spectrum of underlying generic, enabling technology is included to ensure that the ultimate impact is long-term.

I believe it would be useful to discuss the High Performance Computing and Communications Initiative, its tremendous potential, and how Cray Research, or my personal efforts can add to OSTP's very substantial effort. With the Congressional activity on the Initiative heating up, I feel that an early meeting between us would prove valuable.

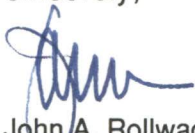

I will be in Washington, DC for the meeting of the Advisory Panel on High Performance Computing and Communications on March 15, 1991. I plan to arrive in Washington mid-day on March 14. If your schedule permits, I would like to invite you to dinner on the evening of the 14th.

Bromley Letter

One of my priorities has been to broaden the involvement of industry, both vendor and non-vendor in the Initiative's implementation. As a result of discussions with you and other members of the Administration, the Computer Systems Policy Project (CSPP) has defined a project focused on the implementation of the High Performance Computing and Communications Initiative (HPCCI) and on providing specific feedback and recommendations. This and other activities focusing on the HPCCI would seem to point to an early dialogue. I am hopeful that we will be able to work something out.

Again, I extend my personal support of and warmest congratulations on your efforts to date on the High Performance Computing and Communications Initiative. We look forward to the day when we can ensure that the potential envisioned by the Initiative is realized. In the mean time, if there is any way that I can personally be of assistance to you in this or any other matter, please do not hesitate to call.

Sincerely,

Dear Dr. Bromley:

I am very pleased to learn that you will be able to come to Guelph to receive an honorary degree on the morning of Thursday, June 6, 1991. I understand you will be a guest at a reception and luncheon held in your honour at the President's home at noon on that day.

I am told you plan to arrive in Guelph on Wednesday, June 5. The Department of Physics and the College of Physical and Engineering Science would be pleased to arrange a reception in your honour Wednesday afternoon or evening, or following Convocation if this is more convenient.

If time permits, members of the Physics Department would be pleased if you could visit our department, and have the opportunity to discuss matters of physics and/or science policy. We would be happy to arrange a colloquium, or informal discussion, according to your preference and time constraints, either Wednesday or Thursday afternoon.

We certainly hope you will plan to be our guest for dinner Wednesday evening. I will proceed with arrangements for any of the functions I have suggested at such time as you are able to inform me of your schedule.

I look forward to your visit to Guelph.

Yours sincerely,

Robin
