Dear Dr. Bromley:

The Federalist Society is pleased to invite you as its guest to the Sixth Annual Lawyers Convention on "The Congress: Representation, Accountability, and the Rule of Law." The conference will be held June 12 and 13 at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington, D.C. The many distinguished speakers and commentators will include Judge Robert Bork, Judge Frank Easterbrook, Rep. Barney Frank, Hon. Boyden Gray, Senator Orrin Hatch, Clinton Campaign Counsel David Ifshin, Dr. Alan Keyes, Hon. Edwin Meese, Judge Laurence Silberman, Professor Peter Strauss, Professor Cass Sunstein, and Hon. Jim Wright.

Accountable and responsive representation is an indispensable bulwark of democratic and constitutionally limited government. Over the last 200 years, the U.S. Congress, and the Capitol Building in which it meets, have become a symbol to the world of our system of constitutional democracy and representation. Recently, however, some have called for reforms to address perceived defects in the way Congress works. Debate over the desirability of Congressional term limits has been especially pronounced. This conference will explore the proper role of Congress, whether its performance conforms with that role, and what reforms, if any, may be needed to secure better the rights of the people. We are confident that this event will be intellectually stimulating and provocative.

As you may know, the Federalist Society is an organization of conservative and libertarian lawyers, law students and other individuals interested in the current state of the legal order. The Society is dedicated to promoting limited, constitutional government, the separation of governmental powers mitigated by Madisonian checks and balances, the principles secured by our Bill of Rights, and, more generally, the Rule of Law.

Enclosed is a brochure with more information about the Society and the convention. A reply envelope for use in registration has been provided. We hope to see you in June.

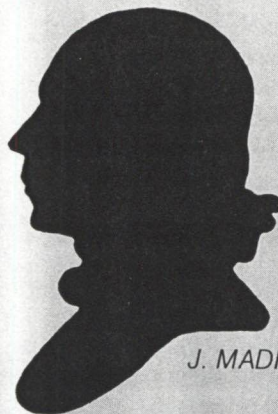

Sincerely,

Steven G. Calabresi

in a special seminar entitled*

The Impact of Information Technology on Society,
the Workplace,
and the Individual *to be held at

The Aspen Institute Center
Aspen, Colorado*

August 6-9, 1992

The cube above is a three-dimensional roadmap of issues that the seminar will examine.

The Aspen Institute brings together leading citizens from the public and private sector in the United States and throughout the world to consider issues in contemporary society that affect democratic values.

This intimate roundtable seminar of approximately 25 leaders will permit business executives, world political leaders, technological visionaries, and other luminaries to explore together how the crucial resources of the Information Age can be used effectively, fairly and freely to advance the quality of human life on the planet.

A list of invitees, a brief agenda, and a reply card are enclosed. We hope you will join us for this unique seminar, made possible by generous contributions from Oracle USA and SHL Systemhouse, Inc.

The Aspen Institute

presents a special seminar on

THE IMPACT OF INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY ON SOCIETY, THE WORKPLACE, AND THE INDIVIDUAL

Seminar Agenda

THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1992: TECHNOLOGICAL ADVANCES
9 A.M. - 12 NOON

The Conference will begin with a demonstration and discussion of recent technological advances in multimedia information technologies. Participants will consider the implications of those technological trends on the nature and commerce of information. The meeting will then focus on the dangers, the opportunities, and the broad policy implications of those trends, setting the agenda for the ensuing three days.

FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1992: THE WORKPLACE
9 A.M. - 12 NOON

On Day 2 the seminar will focus on reengineering the workplace. How does the relationship of supervisor/worker change with the potential for greater access to information at any level? Will information and communications technologies democratize the workplace, empower the worker, flatten organization charts, make jobs more accessible to telecommuters, and allow people to work collaboratively with cohorts in distant locations? Will they replace jobs, subject workers to invasions of privacy, dehumanize the working locale, and lead to a loss of morale of the workforce? If the answer is in between, how can businesses foster the positive and stifle the undesirable effects? What is the ideal approach to the use of these technologies? How can executives work with employees to address the issues at stake, and with communications and information vendors to engineer positive results?

SATURDAY, AUGUST 8, 1992:

THE INDIVIDUAL

9 A.M. - 12 NOON

Day 3 will center on the individual. How does one maintain one's freedoms, particularly those of privacy and freedom to communicate? What opportunities should one have in the future for an enhanced education, for a higher quality of life, and to participate in activities of interest? What information specters, on the other hand, loom over the individual to prevent one from accomplishing desired goals? Will individual privacy become a commodity, available only to those who can purchase it? If it is a right, how far does or should it extend? Will large corporate interests control the gateways to communication and information? What are the rights and guarantees of access to the dissemination system? To information resources? What are the scenarios of oppression which need to be avoided — e.g., those of Orwell or Huxley — and how can they be prevented?

SUNDAY, AUGUST 9, 1992:

SOCIETY

9 A.M. - 12 NOON

The final session, Day 4, will center on the broader implications for community, nation, and world. Are these, as Ithiel de Sola Pool described them, "technologies of freedom?" Or are they value-neutral? How can information technologies be used to foster democratic advances over demagogic uses? How can they be used to balance the democratic values of liberty, equality, efficiency and quality of life in a way that allows for greater enjoyment of each of these? Should all citizens have equatable access to essential information, privacy, and opportunities to communicate freely and effectively? How can or should leaders protect against information poverty? What is the relationship between one's ability to access, manipulate, and disseminate information, for example, and citizenship in the societies of tomorrow? What is the role of the marketplace, and where should government intervene? To what extent should international boundaries affect the answers to the other questions? How can countries, businesses, and other organizations work together to resolve problems of information poverty, invasion of privacy, and inefficiencies in the information marketplace?

SATURDAY, AUGUST 8, 1992:

9 A.M. - 12 NOON

Society

The final session, Day 4, will center on the broader implications for community, nation, and world. Are these, as Ithiel de Sola Pool described them, "technologies of freedom?" Or are they value-neutral? How can information technologies be used to foster democratic advances over demagogic uses? How can they be used to balance the democratic values of liberty, equality, efficiency and quality of life in a way that allows for greater enjoyment of each of these? Should all citizens have equitable access to essential information, privacy, and opportunities to communicate freely and effectively? How can or should leaders protect against information poverty? What is the relationship between one's ability to access, manipulate, and disseminate information, for example, and citizenship in the societies of tomorrow? What is the role of the marketplace, and where should government intervene? To what extent should international boundaries affect the answers to the other questions? How can countries, businesses, and other organizations work together to resolve problems of information poverty, invasion of privacy, and inefficiencies in the information marketplace?

Dear Dr. Bromley:

On behalf of the National Aviation Club, we extend to you a most cordial invitation to be an honored Head Table guest at the annual Robert J. Collier Trophy Presentation Banquet on Wednesday, May 6, 1992. Though your firm/organization may have received an invitation packet and table reservation information for the Banquet, we respectfully ask for your participation at the Head Table.

We are happy to inform you that the Northrop Corporation B-2 Industry Team and the U.S. Air Force will be awarded the 1991 Collier Trophy for the design, development and flight test of the B-2 Stealth aircraft.

The Banquet will begin with a reception at 7:00pm in the Ambassador Room of the Omni Shoreham Hotel at 2500 Calvert Street, followed by dinner and ceremonies beginning at 8:00pm. Following dinner and the awards program, guests are invited to stay for dancing. Dress for the evening will be black tie or military equivalent.

We would also like to extend an invitation to your spouse or guest to attend this important aviation industry occasion. Your guest will be hosted at a National Aviation Club member table.

We of the National Aviation Club sincerely, hope that you will find it possible to attend. Please contact the Collier Banquet Committee at 202-785-1188 with your earliest favorable reply.
