BENNETT UNVEILS EMERGENCY ANTI-DRUG PLAN FOR AREA Larger U.S. Role Involves Prisons, Extra Prosecutors

National drug policy director Bennett, describing drug-related violence in the District as "out of control," yesterday unveiled an emergency plan to build two federal prisons in the Washington area, evict drug dealers from public housing projects and bring in extra federal prosecutors, drug agents and military intelligence analysts as part of a concerted attack on the city's drug problems.

"Make no mistake, we are insisting on resolute and substantive efforts from the District," Bennett said at a news conference with Attorney General Thornburgh and HUD Secretary Kemp. "The plain fact is that for too long and in too many respects, the D.C. government has failed to serve its citizens."

But the plan, which Bennett estimated would cost "roughly $70 million to $80 million," stops far short of the more sweeping request for assistance made last week by D.C. Mayor Barry. It does not turn over any funds to the D.C. government and provides no money for the 700 new city police officers, 11 new judges and 79 extra probation officers and other court employees sought by Barry. It fails to declare the District a "high intensity drug trafficking area," as Bennett suggested he would do three weeks ago, largely because of objections from the Justice Department.

(Michael Isikoff, Washington Post, A1)

Anti-Drug Plan For America's Murder Capital

National drug chief Bennett announced a federal emergency plan Monday to fight soaring drug-related crime in D.C., America's murder capital....

[Mayor] Barry later welcomed the federal assistance as an "important first step to reclaim our territory," but stressed in a statement that "crime, violence and drugs are a national problem." The mayor then abruptly walked out of his news conference without answering any questions.

"If you do the crime, you are going to do time," [Attorney General] Thornburgh said. He added, however, that the long-term answer to drugs will not be won by law enforcement, but "on the battlefield of values."

(Thomas Ferraro, UPI)

Housing Plan Takes Aim At Drug Pushers

The nation's top federal housing official on Monday announced that he would speed evictions of drug dealers and establish greater security in public housing projects as part of a broad plan to curtail the growing drug trade in federally subsidized housing.

HUD Secretary Kemp said he will relax HUD lease and grievance rules to encourage quicker evictions of drug dealers. He called on public housing authorities across the nation to enact the proposals, which also call for secure and controlled entrances and exits to public housing projects; tenant management of projects; anti-drug hotlines to assure quick police response to projects; and repossession of vacant units so they do not serve as drug havens for addicts and dealers.

(Kevin Merida, Knight-Ridder)

Kemp's Eviction Ideas Rile Housing Advocates

A federal plan aimed at more easily evicting drug offenders from public housing could put more people on the street with nowhere to go, District officials and housing advocates said yesterday.

"This is not getting rid of the problem. This creates another problem," said Rick Tingling-Clemmons, a public-housing advocate and Washington legislative liaison for the National Tenant Organization.

"The people affected by this would then be homeless and we'll have to pay more money for them than we're already paying to put families at Capitol City Inn and the Pitts (Hotel)," said Tingling-Clemmons. "What's needed is treatment and jobs, and that's just not in public housing."

(Vincent McCraw, Washington Times, A1)

Barry Aides Say U.S. Went Too Far, Not Far Enough

...While several of Mayor Barry's top officials said later they welcomed [Drug Czar] Bennett's help, others complained privately that the Barry administration had been relegated to a secondary role in planning the local war on drugs.

The District officials also complained that the federal plan announced yesterday fell far short of Barry's request last week for a $102 million in aid for a broad range of federal public safety and social services assistance....

While city officials stewed over what they saw as both too little help and too much intervention by the Bush administration, officials in Virginia and Maryland responded with mixed reactions to Bennett's plan.

Bennett Faces Inherent Hurdles In Plan To Rid D.C. Of Drugs

In taking on the District's drug crisis, national drug policy director Bennett will have to overcome obstacles that have stymied the city and other authorities for years: neighbors who oppose new prisons near their homes, a seemingly endless need for additional prison space, and an already strained relationship between city housing officials and the federal government....

City officials in several departments...said the federal initiatives are more of a wish list than immediate help for a beleaguered city. They said the Bennett plan includes several law enforcement, housing and education proposals that are already in place. And they were surprised to find that the plan does not address suggestions that the D.C. police force is understaffed.

BUSH SIGNS WHISTLE-BLOWER LEGISLATION

Calling whistle-blowers "public servants of the highest order," President Bush signed legislation Monday giving new protections to federal employees who expose waste, fraud and abuse in government.

At a ceremony in the auditorium of the Executive Office Building, Bush signed into law the Whistle-Blowers Protection Act of 1989, which he said is free of the "constitutional flaws" that led President Reagan to pocket veto a similar bill last October....

"A true whistle-blower is a public servant of the highest order," Bush said. "And I share the determination of Congress that we do everything possible to ensure that these dedicated men and women should not be fired or rebuked or suffer financially for their honesty and good judgment."

BUSH RETREATS ON HILL HONORARIA BAN
Ethics Commission's Proposal To Be Left Out Of Legislative Package

President Bush has decided to retreat from a key recommendation of his ethics commission that members of Congress be barred from accepting speaking fees and other honoraria, senior White House officials said yesterday.

In the ethics legislation Bush is planning to unveil on Wednesday, the officials said he will leave the difficult question of congressional honoraria to be worked out in the future along with the still-unresolved issue of a possible congressional pay raise....

The honoraria ban was a major recommendation in the report last month of the ethics commission appointed by Bush shortly after he took office. The panel...urged that "federal employees in all three branches be prohibited from receiving honoraria."

SUNUNU WARNS SUBORDINATES NOT TO CRITICIZE REAGAN

Press Secretary Fitzwater told reporters Monday that Chief of Staff Sununu had warned his subordinates not to criticize former President Reagan.

Sununu took the action after President Bush complained that reports of such criticism were disruptive and appeared to make Bush appear to be ungrateful to Reagan, who had helped him win the presidency....

Shortly after the story appeared in print, former President Nixon sent a strongly worded letter to Sununu urging him to crack down on White House officials who were trying to build up Bush at Reagan's expense.

Sununu then held a staff meeting to caution aides against making jokes about Reagan.

Don't Rap Reagan, Bush Aides Told

Chief of Staff Sununu, reflecting the concerns of President Bush, admonished White House staff members for a third time Monday to halt the flow of quiet, anonymous criticism of former President Reagan that has crept into their conversations with reporters in recent weeks.

Some Bush aides, seeking to distinguish their boss from his predecessor, have been portraying Reagan as a chief executive who simply followed the directions of his staff.

Sununu, according to a member of the senior White House staff who asked not to be identified, told the staff Monday to stop building Bush's stature by tearing down Reagan's.

And another senior aide, reflecting annoyance with the issue, muttered when asked about it: "Make the story go away."

WHITE HOUSE AND QUAYLE DIFFER ABOUT IMPACT OF ABORTION MARCH

While the White House acknowledged today that the march in the capital by hundreds of thousands of people in support of abortion rights Sunday was "very successful," Vice President Quayle appeared less than impressed by the turnout.

The Vice President said the march was "nothing unusual in this town."

"I don't believe the Supreme Court, should be, nor do we expect it to be swayed by a demonstration," he said. "That is not the way the system is supposed to work. They are there to render a legal opinion."

BUDGET NEGOTIATIONS STILL DEADLOCKED

Congressional and administration budget negotiators remained deadlocked Monday as they tried to complete a compromise spending plan for fiscal 1990.

"We do not have an agreement yet," Democratic leader Tom Foley said...Monday evening. "We are not there yet."

Talks will resume [this] morning.

HOUSE PANEL BACKS SOFTER S&L CAPITAL RULE Administration Tries To Squelch Amendment To Reform Package

The House Banking Committee, in a big concession to the S&L industry, tentatively agreed yesterday on an amendment that would permit S&Ls to use softer financial standards than the White House thinks is safe.

The Bush administration tried to squelch the move by the committee members, repeating hints that the President might veto an S&L rescue package if it does not include strong financial guidelines for federally insured S&Ls.

"The administration is strongly opposed to amendments that would remove the essential discipline for strong capital and accounting rules," said Richard Breeden, special assistant to the President for issues analysis. "Amendments that would weaken these standards could open the door to a future repetition of this problem."

Administration Hits Panel's Bid To Amend Bailout Package

The Bush administration tried Monday to squelch an effort by members of the House Banking Committee to weaken the administration's S&L reform plan by diluting a proposal to toughen capital standards.

A senior Treasury Department official, briefing reporters on the condition of anonymity, said the committee's proposed capital rule "has the cosmetic appearance of going in the right direction" but would "undermine the effectiveness of the capital discipline."

In reply, a committee aide, also speaking on the condition of anonymity, said the proposal is in some ways tougher, although a greater number of solvent S&Ls would be able to meet it. (Dave Skidmore, AP)

Honeymoon Ending On S&L Bailout Plan

A two-month honeymoon between President Bush and congressional Democrats on solving the S&L crisis is disintegrating into a kitchen squabble over who takes out the trash and whose friends get invited to supper.

House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Rostenkowski on Monday endorsed making Bush absorb some of the trash chore by putting the bulk of the cleanup's $50 billion to $75 billion taxpayer cost on the federal budget.

And senior Democrats on the House financial institutions subcommittee planned today to invite to the table 300 to 400 marginally solvent S&Ls which Bush and the American Bankers Association would exclude from federal deposit insurance in two years unless they come up with a lot more capital.

KENNEDY MOVES COURT TO RIGHT Justice More Conservative Than Expected

When Justice Kennedy took his seat on the Supreme Court...no one doubted he was a conservative.

The only question was whether he was a moderate conservative, like Justice O'Connor, and his predecessor, Lewis Powell, or a more hard-line conservative, like Chief Justice Rehnquist and Justice Scalia.

The answer, so far, is that Kennedy is as conservative as any justice nominated by President Reagan. At least as conservative as [Robert] Bork was expected to be, Kennedy has moved the court's center much farther to the right than observers on either side of the ideological divide expected....

"Anthony Kennedy's performance on the Supreme Court is what all those raving lunatics who opposed Bob Bork deserve," said Daniel Popeo, general counsel of the conservative Washington Legal Foundation. "What's so wonderful about it is that he is so young and healthy" that he will be on the high court a long time, Popeo said. Kennedy, 52, is a decade younger than Robert Bork.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT OPPOSES FAIRNESS DOCTRINE LEGISLATION

The Justice Department is recommending that President Bush veto any legislation that would write into law the fairness doctrine and require that broadcasters air opposing views on controversial issues.

In a letter to Rep. Dingell, Assistant Attorney General Thomas Boyd said the doctrine...was outdated, hindered free expression and unduly discriminated against broadcasters in favor of the print media.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT: NORTH TRYING TO KILL TRIAL

The Justice Department accused Oliver North Monday of trying to abort his 8-week-old criminal trial with a sweeping demand for state secrets about U.S. efforts to free American hostages in Lebanon.

North's lawyers filed a sealed request last week with U.S. District Judge Gesell, asking for subpoena power to demand documents about wiretaps of foreign nationals involved in the arms deals.

In court papers filed Monday in response to the request, Edward Dennis, chief of the Justice Department's criminal division, accused North of launching "a last-ditch effort to use classified information as a weapon rather than as proof."

NORTH DENIES TAPPING FUNDS
Prosecution Sees Iran-Contra Affair Venality

Former White House aide Oliver North, straining to keep his temper, denied yesterday that he ever dipped into Iran-contra cash for his own use and said he had a $15,000 "family fund" in a metal box bolted into his closet floor that he used for personal expenses.

Testifying at his trial in federal court here for the third day, North disclosed the existence of the fund in the face of prosecution contentions that there was a venal side to the Iran-contra affair and that North had succumbed to it.

ETHICS COMMITTEE SAID TO VOTE 30 VIOLATIONS BY SPEAKER

The House ethics committee has already voted to cite Speaker Wright with 30 ethics violations and still has more than a week to consider other possible violations, CBS News reported Monday.

Wright's spokesman Mark Johnson said he did not know if the committee had begun voting on the allegations made against the speaker but said he believed the report that 30 violations had already been approved was absurd.

"We have absolutely no information along those lines," he said. "We think that is an absurd report."

CBS quoted a source close to the ethics investigation as saying Wright would be charged with benefitting from business dealings with Fort Worth developer George Mallick....

Wright's chief accuser, Rep. Gingrich, said he did not know whether the ethics committee...had yet approved 30 violations or any violations against the speaker.

But Gingrich told Reuters: "Based on the public record it would not be surprising if the ethics committee voted to censure Speaker Wright. But we should know in a week and we should wait for the report."

"I am very patiently waiting because I think the report will be devastating," Gingrich said.

Source: House Ethics Panel Has Decided Wright Violated House Rules

The House ethics committee has tentatively decided there is "reason to believe" that Speaker Wright violated House rules by failing to report as gifts the benefits he received from a business partner, a source familiar with the investigation said late Monday.

The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, declined to say how many instances of failure to report gifts had been identified by the panel.

But the number could easily be in the dozens, because several benefits Wright received continued over a period of years and would have had to be reported on each year's financial disclosure form.

KEMP AVERTS PROTEST AT FAMILY PARTY
Group Trades Brunch For Meeting Monday

Jack and Joanne Kemp were expecting guests Sunday for a quiet gathering at the Cabinet secretary's home in Bethesda....

A few miles away in Washington, 500 uninvited guests...were ready to board buses for the Kemp house, carrying signs, bullhorns and a list of demands for the HUD secretary.

Kemp's assistant got wind of the protesters' plan and moved to save the brunch: He called their hotel, then hand-delivered a letter...agreeing to the group's demand for a series of meetings with the secretary.

PALESTINIANS, ISRAELIS APPEAR TO DIG IN HEELS

All sides of the Middle East conflict appeared to dig in their heels Monday, raising concerns about whether Israel's peace proposal will fade as quickly as it appeared.

"We hope all the posturing is just that, staking out hard-line positions for longer-term negotiating purposes," a senior administration official said Monday. "If it's more than that, it's trouble."

The official said the Bush administration was asking for support from U.S. allies and Arab leaders for the plan outlined in Washington last week by Israeli Prime Minister Shamir. (Adam Pertman, Boston Globe)

ISRAELIS AGAIN RULE OUT 'LAND FOR PEACE' FORMULA

Key Shamir Aide Rejects U.S. Approach
Toward Middle East Peace Negotiations

Israeli Prime Minister Shamir's top political adviser stressed here yesterday that Israel will not agree to hold Middle East peace negotiations on the basis of the "land for peace" formula that President Bush said last week remains the foundation of the U.S. approach toward any talks.

Yosef Ben-Aharon, director general of Shamir's office, said that one of the tenets of the national unity government now in power was that "territory for peace will not wash, will not be acceptable" as a basis for final settlement talks on the Palestinian issue.

Shamir and his aides were known to be irritated by Bush's insistence ...that the U.S. wanted an end to Israeli occupation of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. (David Ottaway, Washington Post, A6)

ARENS DENIES ISRAEL TALKING TO PLO THROUGH WASHINGTON

JERUSALEM -- Foreign Minister Arens denied Monday that Israel was indirectly dealing with the PLO through the U.S. but Israeli officials admitted there were contacts through Palestinians in the occupied territories.

"I don't believe in any negotiations, direct or indirect, with the PLO. Our contact with the United States has nothing to do with an indirect tie," Arens told reporters after a parliamentary meeting.

Vice Premier Peres said Sunday that U.S. talks with the PLO about Israel's proposal for elections in occupied territories could be seen by Washington as indirect Israeli contacts with the Palestinian group. (Reuter)

UPRISING LEADERS REJECT ELECTIONS UNDER ISRAELI OCCUPATION

JERUSALEM -- Underground leaders of a Palestinian uprising, in their first comment on Prime Minister Shamir's latest peace proposals, Monday rejected elections under Israeli occupation.

"No to the Shamir plan, no to elections under occupation. Only the PLO represents us and the only option is the Palestinian option," the Unified National Leadership of the Uprising said in its 38th leaflet, distributed in Jerusalem. (Paul Taylor, Reuter)

ARAB LEAGUE AMBASSADOR CALLS
SHAMIR ELECTION PLAN A 'CHARADE'

The Arab League ambassador to the U.N. Monday called Israeli proposals for Palestinian elections a "charade," chiding the U.S. for supporting the plan.

Clovis Maksoud...said the proposals to elect Palestinian representatives in the Israeli-occupied territories were unacceptable to Arab nations....

"This whole propaganda offensive about elections is really a charade, and for the United States to accept that as a 'genuine opening' constitutes to us an American misreading of [Prime Minister] Shamir's plan," Maksoud said. (Reuter)

SHAMIR SAYS ARABS SHOULD HELP SOLVE REFUGEE PROBLEM;
DETAILS PEACE PLAN

CHICAGO -- Arab states should help Israel pay to "establish a human condition" for the nearly two million Palestinians living in refugee camps in occupied territories, Israeli Prime Minister Shamir said Monday.

"Israel doesn't have the financial means to solve all these problems" in the refugee camps, Shamir said at a news conference during a day-long trip to Chicago to promote a Middle East peace plan he proposed last week.

"It couldn't substitute for a political solution but it could improve the climate," he said. (Sheri Prasso, AP)

SYRIA AGREES SUPERPOWERS COULD TAKE PART IN PEACE TALKS

DAMASCUS -- Syrian President Assad said Monday Syria would agree to the U.S. and Soviet Union taking part in a conference to seek a solution to the conflict in the Middle East.

Syria...had previously called for a conference to be held under the auspices of all five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council....

Speaking at an official banquet in honor of visiting Czechoslovak Communist Party leader Milos Jakes, Assad said:

"(Syria) accepts an international conference...with the participation of the two superpowers -- the Soviet Union and the United States -- or with the participation of the permanent members of the (U.N.) Security Council." (Reuter)

CONTRAS -- REFORMS NOT ENOUGH
FOR US TO TAKE PART IN ELECTIONS

GUATEMALA CITY -- The contra rebels said Monday that the Nicaraguan government had not made enough reforms for them to take part in elections next year and a proposed electoral law would rig victory for the ruling party....

"We would be willing to participate if the right conditions are met, but these conditions do not exist now," contra spokesman Bosco Matamoros said.

An electoral law proposed by the ruling Sandinistas would assure them "a mathematical majority," he told Reuters. (Lucy Hood, Reuter).

AMERICANS IN PANAMA COMPLAIN OF HARASSMENT U.S. Efforts To Oust Gen. Noriega At Issue

PANAMA CITY -- [Several incidents involving Panamanian defense forces and U.S. citizens in Panama] exemplify a growing campaign of harassment, intimidation and violence by [Panamanian leader Gen.] Noriega's rule against Panamanian political foes and the U.S. -- which has sought the ouster of Noriega.

U.S. PRAISES HAITIAN ON DRUG EFFORTS

The president of Haiti, Lt. Gen. Avril, has made serious efforts to combat narcotics, and the U.S. is encouraging those efforts, American officials said Monday.

U.S. ASKS MOSCOW TO USE RESTRAINT IN GEORGIA

The U.S. urged Soviet authorities Monday to act with restraint in dealing with the protests in Soviet Georgia, which have led to clashes between troops and demonstrators.

"We call on the Soviet authorities to use restraint in dealing with peaceful protests by those wishing to exercise their right to peaceful political expression," said Richard Boucher, a State Department spokesman.

Boucher also expressed concern about the deaths of civilians in the protests. (Michael Gordon, New York Times, A7)

TRILATERAL REPORT ADVOCATES TIGHTER ECONOMIC TIES TO SOVIETS

PARIS -- The U.S. and its European allies should be prepared to finance economic changes that move the Soviet Bloc closer to free-market conditions and to grant the Soviet Union observer status in major international financial and trade organizations, three prominent conservative statesmen said today in a detailed report on the future of East-West relations.

The report, written by former Secretary Kissinger, France's ex-President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and former Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, coupled the suggestions for a liberalization of East-West economic relations with a call for a more cautious approach to U.S.-Soviet arms control negotiations.

The three statesmen...urged that the implementation of any future U.S.-Soviet accord on strategic nuclear missiles be linked to the achievement of an accord on conventional armed forces in Europe.

BUSH MOVES ON JET PROJECT WITH TOKYO

The U.S. and Japan are narrowing their differences on the FSX jet-fighter project, but Washington has asked Tokyo for new "clarifications," administration officials said today. The move suggests that further delays are possible before President Bush seeks congressional approval.

U.S. BUSINESSES URGE TRADE SANCTIONS TO STOP PIRACY OF SOFTWARE IN CHINA

BEIJING -- American business executives in Beijing are urging trade sanctions against China to halt what they call some of the worst piracy of American computer software in the world. Such piracy, they say, costs them between $100 million and $400 million a year in lost revenues.

U.S. Ambassador Winston Lord said in an interview that the unauthorized copying of American software by Chinese engineers is now emerging as "one of the most acute issues" in U.S. relations with China. It "has come to the top of our agenda among economic questions, and we're engaging in serious...discussions with the Chinese," Lord said.

NETWORK NEWS SUMMARY

(Monday Evening, April 10)

WHISTLE-BLOWERS

ABC's Peter Jennings: In Washington federal whistle-blowers who expose corruption and waste in government got some new safeguards today. President Bush signed the Whistle-Blower's Protection Act of 1989 into law, in front of an audience which included the consumer advocate Ralph Nader, a long-time supporter of such legislation. Nader had not been invited to the White House since 1978. (ABC-5)

DRUG ENFORCEMENT/BENNETT

Jennings: We begin tonight with crime in the nation's capital, and drugs underneath the seat of government and the government's new plan to get it under control. Today the President's Drug Czar, William Bennett, stood up before the microphones and said, "The drug-infested, crime-ridden Washington will be officially Washington's test case in the national war against the violence of the drug culture. "The city," he says, "has failed to do it on its own."

ABC's Jeanne Meserve: The death toll from violent crime in the District of Columbia has reached 135 this year.

(Director Bennett: "Over the course of the weekend we had to add three more murders. I don't think you sit around and philosophize about ultimate causes. You've got to go out and try to do something.")

What Bennett will do is take $80 million from existing federal programs to fight crime in the District. The program will create 1,200 new prison beds for drug offenders; will beef up local law enforcement with 25 FBI agents, 11 agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration, and additional personnel from the Department of Defense; will make it easier to evict drug dealers from public housing, and will try to make projects more secure. Although drug treatment and education will receive some new emphasis, the target is clearly drug dealers.

(Director Bennett: "One of the immediate pressure points in this city is to get the bad guys off the street.")

Bennett accused the D.C. government of failing to serve its citizens by allowing the drug problem to get out of control.

(Director Bennett: "Serious questions of local politics and governance can no longer be avoided or excused. They must be answered.")

But Mayor Barry, himself a subject of drug allegations, ducked Bennett's charges.

(Mayor Barry: "We certainly welcome the support, and look forward to a sustained relationship and partnership.")

But the city's police union said the Bennett plan is inadequate. Officials of other drug-infested cities fear that more resources for the District of Columbia means fewer resources for them. But Bennett responds that the lessons learned here will eventually be applied elsewhere. (ABC-Lead)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: William Bennett, the nation's new Drug Czar, today declared the nation's capital his opening battlefield in the war on drugs. He said the D.C. situation is getting worse, not better. It is out of control.

NBC's Lisa Myers: It was an average weekend in Washington, D.C. Three more people were murdered, bringing this year's death toll to 135. This time last year it was 91. Bennett's answer: more and tougher law enforcement. The emergency plan includes 11 more federal drug agents, 25 more FBI agents, five military intelligence analysts to beef up a task force to target crack distributors, 10 military lawyers to help local prosecutors with a backlog of more than 2,000 drug cases, and a crackdown on drug dealers and users in public housing projects.

(Director Bennett: "I think we all know that in the end, ultimately, this war will be won on the battlefield of values. But I'll tell you, I think that one of the immediate pressure points in this city is to get the bad guys off the street.")

Washington, D.C. has tried arresting the bad guys before. But Bennett said that out of 46,000 drug arrests in the last two years, only 1,400 went to prison, often because there was no room. Now the District will get two new prisons in the next two years. Bennett criticized city officials for repeatedly failing to meet their responsibilities. And in an apparent swipe at Mayor Barry, he said the emergency plan will be controlled by federal officials, not by the city.

(Director Bennett: "This is not an attempt to get the D.C. government off the hook. They must go to work now, seriously, and meet their responsibilities.")

Barry, who was not invited to Bennett's news conference, later read a brief statement and refused to answer questions.

(Mayor Barry: "Let me applaud the time and attention focused on helping the District meet this serious challenge.")

But some community leaders claimed that the plan didn't try to deal with the underlying problem of poverty. Bennett is not predicting any miracles. He says the bloodshed may even get worse before it gets better. But he believes that six months from now the streets of this city will be at least a little less violent. (NBC-Lead)

CBS's Dan Rather: President Bush's drug policy coordinator today talked up details of a high-publicity drug crackdown in Washington. The millions to pay for it will be diverted from other drug programs. Which ones? Not specified. This comes amid the growing embarrassment of having the nation's capital be known as the nation's murder capital because of record-high drug-related violence.

CBS's Wyatt Andrews: Three more murders in Washington this weekend only added to the urgency. The President's first formal battle in the war on drugs will now be an $80-million assault on the drug-related crime spread in the nation's capital. Drug Czar Bennett called the emergency action necessary, because the administration of D.C. Mayor Barry proved incapable of handling the problem.

(Director Bennett: "Here, where the problem is so glaring, so out-of-control, serious questions of local politics and governance can no longer be avoided or excused.")

Andrews continues: Bennett's plan is to throw manpower, prison space and a public housing crackdown at the problem. For law enforcement, the plan reassigns for the Washington drug war agents from the DEA, the FBI, even five Pentagon intelligence specialists. The government will also build two new area prisons, possibly on military-owned land, and will immediately transfer 250 D.C. prisoners to free up local jail space. In Washington's public housing projects, the plan calls for new security measures, including photo ID cards for tenants, easier eviction of drug dealers, guarded entrances, and even fences around what one official called Washington's horror story projects. This afternoon Mayor Barry acted as if unaware of the blistering critique clearly directed at him.

(Mayor Barry: "I'm also pleased that Secretary Bennett underscored so many permanent areas of agreement.")

Barry said he'd accept the federal help, but was in no mood to accept questions. Congress, meanwhile, was asking the questions: How can the Bush Administration spend $80 million to wage a drug war in just one city? The Administration calls this a test case and says the $80 million will come from within the budget -- exactly why critics want to know what is it that loses while Washington gains. (CBS-3)

DEA ARREST

Jennings reports that today the Drug Enforcement Administration arrested one of its own, as well as a former policeman. The charges: conspiracy to distribute cocaine.

ABC's Mark Potter reports that Jorge Villar, a 10-year veteran with the DEA, served in Bogota and Miami, specializing in smuggling cases. Arrested with him was Alex Marrero, a private investigator and former Dade County policeman. The DEA says it began suspecting its own agents two years ago. Internal affairs investigators sprung a trap by setting up a phoney smuggling operation that supposedly would bring 300 kg of cocaine into Miami from the Bahamas. In court, Villar and Marrero were accused of conspiracy to protect the cocaine smugglers from arrest in exchange for $300,000. More arrests in the corruption case are expected soon. (ABC-2)

MEXICO DRUG ARREST

Jennings reports that the man who has apparently earned the title the godfather of Mexico's drug trade is in custody tonight. Felix Gallardo was accused of smuggling tons of cocaine into the U.S. every month as part of an arrangement he made with Colombian drug lords. Gallardo was arrested in Mexico over the weekend along with 80 other men from his hometown. All of those men happen to be policemen. (ABC-3, NBC-2)

ETHICS/WRIGHT

Rather: New reports of possible new, deep political trouble for Speaker of the House Wright. CBS's Phil Jones has been told that the House Ethics Committee has voted to cite Speaker Wright for dozens of counts of what it calls wrongdoing.

Rather continues: Wright's office flatly denies that the committee has done any such thing, saying, that's absurd. Word of this comes as Wright has been working hard to limit damage from the ethics investigation, fend off a Republican political attack, hang in, hang on and fight back.

CBS's Phil Jones reports that the House Ethics Committee has already voted to cite Speaker Wright for more than 30 instances of ethical wrongdoing, and the committee is still a week away from finishing. According to a source close to the investigation, the charges will involve business activities with Ft. Worth developer George Mallick. Mallick said the company he formed with Wright was perfectly legitimate. Other charges will include questionable oil deals and attempts to avoid House limits for outside income. Wright is expected to be sighted for alleged wrongdoing by himself and his staff for converting honoraria to the purchase of his book, "Reflections of a Public Man." The final report is not expected out until next week.

(CBS-Lead)

ABORTION

Brokaw: Barbara Bush today had something to say about another big event in Washington: the weekend demonstration in support of pro-choice on abortion. An estimated 300,000 marched, and Mrs. Bush said today, "That's what America is all about. It's great." Her office then pointed out that Mrs. Bush was referring to the right of any group to protest. She was not backing pro-choice....

(NBC-4)

Jennings reports that the day after more than 300,000 people gathered in Washington to demonstrate their support [for pro-choice], some of those who were at that giant rally fanned out across Capitol Hill today urging members of Congress to preserve abortion rights.

(ABC-6)

DRINKING WATER

Brokaw reports that all American schools today were warned to test their drinking water to make sure that students are not being poisoned. This warning was issued by the EPA.

NBC's Robert Hager reports that when the Montgomery County, Md. school system tested its drinking fountains recently, it found unusually high levels of lead in the water. Today the EPA warned schools nationwide that more than a million water coolers were built in such a way that lead solder gets into the water. It said a few other water coolers have lead-lined tanks inside, and said those should be recalled. And it said even tap water in many schools is suspect, may pick up excess lead during long periods when the water isn't running. Studies have linked lead to impaired learning ability in school-age children. Doctors say even slight amounts of lead can slow down development of the brain or nervous system.

OIL SPILL

Jennings: The oil off the Alaska coast was beginning to break up today in high winds and rough seas. That's the good news. The bad weather is hampering the overall cleanup effort, that's the bad.

ABC's Mike von Fremd reports that some residents will receive $2,000 a week to help clean up beaches; fishing boat owners are renting their vessels to the oil company for $40,000 a month, even as the oil company is paying them damages because they cannot fish; and residents are renting spare rooms for $900 a week and renting their cars for $100 a day. With all the new people in town, the Valdez population of 3,500 has doubled in two weeks. A company spokesman said today Exxon will write off the expenses -- up to $250 million worth -- in taxes, which will ultimately have to be made up by the rest of the American taxpayers. (ABC-7, CBS-8)

Brokaw reports that tonight Exxon has told federal officials it opposes President Bush's order to send American troops to clean up the company's huge oil spill. (NBC-5)

NORTH TRIAL

Brokaw: Rep. Gingrich today had some surprising comments on the North trial. Gingrich said that he was sympathetic to North's family, but he does not believe the President's men should lie. Then Gingrich described to a small group of reporters how he thinks that North was influenced by President Reagan. He said on Air Force 1 trips the President would joke about bombing Capitol Hill, saying in effect, "We patriots are trying to save the West, and the guys on the Hill just don't understand." (NBC-3)

HAITI HIJACKING

Jennings: A small plane with seven passengers on board was hijacked from Haiti today to Miami. Two gunmen, who the police say appeared to be Haitian soldiers, surrendered when the plane touched down. The Haitian government put down another military revolt over the weekend, and there is speculation the hijackers may have been on the losing side. (ABC-12)

SOVIET GEORGIA

Jennings reports that today the Soviet army opened fire on a pro-independence rally in Soviet Georgia. At least 18 people have died in a week of unrest.

ABC's Jim Laurie reports that Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze, himself a native Georgian, canceled a foreign visit and went to Tblisi, the capital, to head a commission investigating the unrest. The local Georgian Communist Party secretary admitted tonight that all those killed were innocent victims. It's clear that Tblisi will remain under virtual martial law until emotions have quieted.

SOVIET NUCLEAR SUB

Jennings reports that Norwegian officials say there is no indication of serious radiation leaks in the area where the sub went down off the coast of Norway. The Soviets say an electrical short-circuit was the cause of fire in the sub. (ABC-9, NBC-9, CBS-5)

SAKHAROV

Jennings: Andrei Sakharov, the Soviet human rights activist who spent six years in internal exile for his views, may soon be a member of the new Soviet parliament. Sakharov was nominated to parliament today by the Soviet Academy of Sciences, which rejected him just three months ago. (ABC-11)

SUDAN

Rather reports that in Sudan negotiations are underway to try to end the five-year-old civil war, and the UN is ready with a massive relief effort to try to save thousands of starving refugees. (CBS-7)

FUSION

ABC's Jim Slade reports that today scientists at Texas A&M said their version of the fusion experiment [tried by scientists in Utah two weeks ago] is producing significantly more energy than they're putting into it. They think it could be fusion, but aren't sure. They wonder if the energy might be produced by a chemical reaction. (ABC-8, NBC-7)

CBS's Jerry Bowen reports that Georgia Tech scientists say their room-temperature fusion experiment produced high levels of neutrons, confirming nuclear fusion is taking place. Scientists at Brigham Young University also claim to have duplicated the Utah experiment, but with far less excess energy and very low levels of neutrons. Skeptics say that real fusion would produce trillions of neutrons, not the hundreds researchers at BYU and Georgia Tech have measured so far. (CBS-4)

Volunteers of America

Not content merely to lead cheers, President Bush will be asking for $25 million to start a program called Youth Entering Service to America. As White House Chief of Staff John Sununu told The Washington Times last week: "National service could emerge as a defining aspect of this presidency." Or as Deputy Assistant to the President for National Service Gregg Petersmeyer puts it: "It is almost inevitable that 1,000 points of light and national service, which are the same thing, will become the defining element. The forces at work are irresistible in that direction."

Whenever a government official insists that "irresistible" forces are at work in the bureaucracy, Americans should reach for their semiautomatics, or at least consider a trip to the voting booth in another couple of years. After all, our whole system of government was premised on the idea that freedom can be safeguarded only so long as government forces are resistible.

Of course, that was 200 years ago, and America has changed since the days when citizens rebelled against a government that wanted to tax their whiskey. Today, try to find a place in your life untouched by the hands of government.

It won't, obviously, be anywhere near your pocketbook, your house, your car, or the school your child attends. It won't be at the bank, the S&L, the grocery store, the liquor store or even on the high peaks of the Blue Ridge, which, of course, belong to the feds and cannot be visited without paying a tribute to Uncle Sam. If you belong to a church, you probably can take sanctuary there once a week or so and repose a while on untaxed property in a pew built solely by private funds. But when the collection plate is passed, can you completely exorcise from your soul the knowledge that your very contribution is "tax deductible"?

Maybe, if you don't have to work overtime to pay rent on your rent-controlled apartment, or baby-sit the kids while your wife works for the cash needed to cover the mortgage and the taxes on your reassessed home, maybe then you can take a few hours and devote yourself to something so purely altruistic it edifies your soul.

But if George Bush is the president he aims to be, Uncle Sam will find you even there. The federal imprimatur will be tattooed to your good deeds. You may even be singled out as a national hero.

The whole notion of national service has less to do with community "volunteerism" than with an intramural Washington political struggle. The arm-wrestling began earlier this year when Sens. Sam Nunn and Chuck Robb and Rep. David McCurdy introduced legislation that would force recipients of federal tuition loans into military or community service. Like most struggles for power in Washington, this one seems destined to end with the government taking more power from us, in this case the power to be a good person without the proddings of Big Brother. The American people could perform a great national service by telling Mr. Bush and his congressional adversaries to take their jobs and shove them. We ain't volunteering.

1. Excerpts from Parade Article by Tad Szulc, August 28, 1988

"Be nice. Stop being the ugly American," President Oscar Arias Sanchez of Costa Rica told me amiably. I had asked him what he thought would be the most fruitful approach the United States could take to his crisis-ridden part of the world.

Relaxed, quick to smile but doggedly stubborn and brutally honest, Arias has been in office since May 1986. He is both a hell-raising politician and a man of great intellectual resources. He has a saturnine countenance, which he says comes from Indian blood "that almost all Costa Ricans have in their veins -- a mixture of Spanish and Indian." He resembles somewhat Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis, whom he met years ago. The two men admire each other, and Arias told me, "We share the problem of lacking sufficient sense of humor and of being too serious and too intellectual in talking to our people, but we are both overcoming it."

2. Excerpts from Editorial by Frederick Kemp, Outlook Section, P. C-2, The Washington Post, December 11, 1988.

"He made little secret of his preference for Michael Dukakis, who included the Arias plan in his platform. The two met with fanfare when Arias received a honorary degree at Harvard last June -- when Dukakis looked like a winner."

Pool report for the April 11 Cabinet meeting:

As the press came in, Bush said, "This might be a good time to tell the Trade Rep how pleased I am with the way your people did abroad on your agenda to folo on the Uraguay round. Tell the Secretary of Labor how pleased I was with her trip to many, many cities, ~~xx~~ and to Jack Kemphis forays, and of course to our drug czar back here, the man of the moment, with taking a strong initiative that I hope will have widespread support. And I'll get Cheney mad if I don't mention him."

Asked by a reporter if he supported Mayor Barry, Bush declined to respond. Gesturing to reporters with his thumb to tell them to leave, Bush said "Get out of here." Realizing that might be interpreted as what he thought of Barry, Bush quickly said to reporters, "that's you, no him. If that comes out wrong now..."

C O P Y
from ORM

April 11, 1989

Dear Madame Prime Minister:

Thank you very much for your invitation to the United States Government for its participation in the Bergen Conference in May of 1990. We will be honored to attend.

I am also pleased to confirm that the United States is prepared to host the November 1989 workshop on "The Economics of Sustainability."

The choice of our Ministerial-level representative will be made closer to the conference date. In the interim, I have designated Secretary of State Baker as the focal point within the U.S. Government for the conference.

I wish you success in this important undertaking and reiterate my appreciation to you for your leadership in this effort. I look forward to our meeting in early May when we can discuss this and other issues on a personal basis.

Sincerely,

Her Excellency
Gro Harlem Brundtland
Prime Minister of Norway

Dear Lee:

Your letter from the holidays just bobbed to the surface, and I want to thank you for your thoughtfulness and support. The kindness of folks like you has always been a source of strength, and I count on it now more than ever.

It was a pleasure to meet you at George and Tuttle's, and I look forward to getting together again. Until then, Barbara joins me in sending our appreciation and best wishes.
