BUSH PLEDGES RESEARCH ON GLOBAL WARMING Speech To U.N.-Sponsored Panel Endorses No Proposed Remedies

President Bush Monday promised aggressive U.S. research efforts on global warming but stopped short of the endorsement of remedies that his top environmental advisers had urged.

In an address to a meeting of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) here, Bush referred to the "uncertainty" of global warming theories that are largely accepted by the scientific community and emphasized the need for "reconciling of environmental protections to the continued benefits of economic development."

"Wherever possible, we believe that market mechanisms should be applied and that our policies must be consistent with economic growth and free market principles in all countries," he said.

(Michael Weisskopf, Washington Post, A1)

Bush Outlines Go-Slow Approach On Global Warming

President Bush, warning that politics is intruding into the science, Monday urged caution in the battle against global warming and called for a better balance between environmental measures and the needs of industry.

The President's remarks...were quickly criticized both by some Democrats in Congress and by scientists who had been hoping for what Brooks Yeager of the National Audubon Society called a "step forward."

But Bush was cautious throughout his remarks...declining even to match comments he made during the 1988 presidential campaign that global warming is, indeed, a problem....

Stewart Boyle of the Association for the Conservation of Energy in Britain, decried what he called "a leadership crisis" on the issue at the White House, adding, "About the only thing we can say about it is he turned up."

Sen. Wirth called the speech "a missed opportunity," and said the Administration is now "adrift on the issue." (George Condon, Copley)

Bush Continues Cautious Approach To Global Warming

Addressing officials gathered from more than 40 countries Monday to discuss global warming, President Bush continued his cautious approach to the problem in a speech that was long on environmental rhetoric and short on proposals for action....

While the speech was not seen as strengthening U.S. leadership in these international talks, some Administration officials privately expressed relief that it did not mark a major retreat on the issue.

Environmentalists expressed disappointment that the speech made no new commitments to action.

Some European officials, who have characterized the U.S. behavior at these U.N. talks as "foot dragging," viewed Bush's appearance as a positive development and read favorable signals.

(Diane Dumanoski, Boston Globe)

Bush Asks Cautious Response To Threat Of Global Warming

President Bush Monday called for a cautious response to the threat of global warming, pleasing those in his Administration who want a deliberate policy but disappointing many environmentalists....

Administration officials said the speech marked a middle ground between conflicting positions among Mr. Bush's aides.

His chief of staff, John Sununu, wanted to emphasize scientific uncertainties about global warming and to warn of economic dangers in rushing to act. Several agency heads, including William Reilly, Administrator of the EPA, pressed for a stronger message of America's commitment to action.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the speech did not represent a victory for the chief of staff. But it is clear that Mr. Sununu...is having substantial influence on one of the most important issue before the President. (Philip Shabecoff, New York Times, A1)

Climate Panel Frosty To Bush

President Bush sought Monday to strike a balance between environmental protection and economic development in a major policy speech that disappointed environmentalists.

The U.S. will support "aggressive and thoughtful action" to cope with global climate change, Mr. Bush told the opening session of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change....

Mr. Bush's cautious approach was panned by environmental officials attending the conference at Georgetown University.

"Mr. Bush could have demonstrated a more favorable commitment to action," said Swedish Minister of the Environment Svante Bodin. "You shouldn't crush an economy, but market forces might not be enough."

"Economic systems are not effective in controlling climate changes," said Japanese delegate Tsunetoshi Yamamura, a Kobe University professor of environmental law.

Industry representatives, meanwhile, applauded the President for an even-handed approach.

Any environmental program "has to be based on economics," said Dolores Kern of the National Coal Association.

(Ronald Taylor & Paul Bedard, Washington Times, A1)

Bush Calls For More Research On Global Warming

President Bush Monday called for more research on the Earth's warming trend, angering environmentalists who thought he had promised action on what they consider a major threat.

In a major policy speech, which he delivered at Georgetown University to the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, Bush said environmental protection and economic development must be balanced.

"Our goal continues to be matching policy commitments to emerging scientific knowledge -- and a reconciling of environmental protection to the continued benefits of economic development," Bush said.

Those are fighting words for environmentalists, who raged against Bush Monday. Sen. Gore said Bush is "moving like molasses when sure, steady leadership is needed." The Sierra Club rated Bush's speech a "gross disappointment."

(Ann McFeatters, Scripps Howard)

U.S. TO ACCEPT NEW GERMANY OUTSIDE NATO

The Bush Administration said Monday that a new, united German state would not have to be a member of NATO but rather need only maintain "ties" to the alliance.

The shift in U.S. policy is the latest and most significant in a hectic series of revisions as Administration policy-makers run to keep up with the rapidly changing European situation. If it becomes reality, the new position on Germany would substantially reshape the Western alliance....

Until now, U.S. policy toward German unification has been guided by four principles: self-determination, alliance with NATO, gradual change and reaffirmation of Germany's eastern borders.... Now, said a senior White House official, "Forget about the four points. Events are just moving too fast."

"We're starting to shift to face reality."

(David Lauter, Los Angeles Times)

EAST GERMANY BROADENS CABINET

Appointment Of 8 Non-Communists Gives Opposition
Control For First Time In 40 Years

EAST BERLIN -- Eight opposition representatives joined the East German government Monday, giving non-Communists control of the cabinet for the first time in 40 years.

The move, which stemmed from an agreement by communists and opposition leaders a week ago, was aimed at staving off economic and political problems before the country's March 18 elections. The government announced Monday that industrial production was expected to drop 4 to 5 percent this year, largely as a result of East German emigration to the West.

Meanwhile, a demonstration in Leipzig by more than 100,000 East Germans calling for government reforms and German unification was marred by violence Monday night. Hundreds of skinheads and neo-Nazis were reported to have smashed storefront windows and goose-stepped through the streets, shouting "Sieg Heil!" and anti-Jewish slogans.

(Michael Wise, Washington Post, A16)

GORBACHEV URGES END TO PARTY POWER MONOPOLY

MOSCOW -- Soviet leader Gorbachev told the assembled Communist Party leadership Monday that the party should relinquish its constitutionally guaranteed monopoly on power and begin to compete for political rule "strictly within the framework of the democratic process."

The creation here of a legal multi-party system like those on the rise in Eastern Europe may take months of debate and constitutional revision, but Gorbachev's speech on the opening day of an extraordinary session of the party's policy-making Central Committee marked the official start of a historic reversal of the Communists' seven decades of ensured rule.

Gorbachev said that in the future the party "intends to struggle for the status of ruling party but will do that strictly within the framework of the democratic process, giving up any legal or political advantages, offering its program and defending it in discussions and cooperating with other social and political forces."

Gorbachev also put forward a platform for radical restructuring of the party organization and proposed that the date of the next Communist Party congress...be moved up from October to late June or early July.

(David Remnick, Washington Post, A1)

Kremlin Leader's Best Defense Is A Surprisingly Bold Offense

MOSCOW -- President Gorbachev, by announcing that the Soviet Communist Party should abandon its guaranteed right to rule and compete for power, Monday broke with 70 years of totalitarian tradition. He also demonstrated his mastery of the preemptive political strike....

Gorbachev made clear that he still regards a reinvigorated Communist Party as the fulcrum of Soviet politics around which other political forces will revolve. Even so, his speech represented an astonishing political somersault for a man who just a year ago was describing the very notion of a multi-party system as "rubbish."

The likelihood that a majority of Central Committee members will accept Gorbachev's proposals and agree in effect to their political surrender may seem surprising. The explanation advanced by Gorbachev's supporters, who are confident of victory, is that the conservatives may be angry and frustrated, but they have no alternative political program to propose and no obvious leader to rally behind. (Michael Dobbs, Washington Post, A1)

BUSH NOTES RISE IN SOVIET ANTI-SEMITISM

President Bush, expressing surprise that reforms in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union have led to increased incidents of anti-Semitism, pledged Monday that the U.S. would assist Jews if evacuation becomes necessary.

A 40-minute meeting between Bush and U.S. Jewish leaders focused more on such threats than it did on the problems of the Middle East....

"We talked about the sense of emergency about the problem," said one of Bush's visitors, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

He added that the President said the U.S. would "do what we can" if the anti-Semitism grows into pogroms."

(James Gerstenzang, Los Angeles Times)

CHINA ACCUSED OF WIDE RIGHTS ABUSES

State Dept. Report Cites Actions
Before And After June Massacre

A State Department report has accused China of "widespread human rights abuses" throughout 1989, including indiscriminate arrests, torture and execution of political prisoners and religious groups before and after the June 3-4 massacre of students at Tiananmen Square in Beijing.

The as yet unpublished report...states that the situation in China "deteriorated dramatically" last year because of a tightening of control over political expression, education and social mores. The report is scheduled to be released later this month.

State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler denied Monday that the report reflects intergovernmental policy differences. President Bush has backed continued amicable relations with Beijing and turned back legislation that would have protected Chinese students in the U.S. from deportation.

"We don't see any daylight between the State Department and the White House on this," Tutwiler said. She noted that the report reflected events prior to the lifting of martial law restrictions in Beijing last month.

(R. Jeffrey Smith, Washington Post, A14)

EX-IM BANK RESUMES AID TO CHINA

The Export-Import Bank, an agency of the federal government that provides credit to the customers of American exporters, has made its first loan to China since the military crackdown against pro-democracy demonstrators in June, bank officials said Monday.

The loan is believed to be the first to China by any Western lending agency since June.

The $9.75 million loan to the China National Offshore Oil Corporation was signed in Washington on Friday. Wary of criticism by those who believe its China policies have been too lenient, the Administration did not announce the action. (Clyde Farnsworth, New York Times, D1)

ISRAEL POSTPONES PEACE MOVES AFTER ATTACK Relations With Egypt Intact Despite Tour Bus Ambush

JERUSALEM -- Israel's political leadership Monday essentially suspended crucial deliberations on its next moves in the peace process following a terrorist attack Sunday on a tourist bus in Egypt that killed nine Israelis and wounded 15.

At the same time, official sources signaled that the Israeli government is satisfied with Egypt's reaction to the incident and will not shift its diplomatic course away from efforts to arrange Israeli-Palestinian talks in Cairo....

Foreign Ministry officials said Prime Minister Shamir and his chief rival in the right-wing party, Ariel Sharon, were putting off any move to arrange a planned meeting in Geneva of Secretary of State Baker, Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Arens, and Egyptian Foreign Minister Esmat Abdel-Meguid. Egyptian officials had said before the attack that they hoped the meeting...could take place as soon as next weekend.

However, Israeli Deputy Foreign Minister Netanyahu told a press conference Monday that no date for the meeting had been set before the attack and no immediate action would be taken now. "We have to first attend to this tragedy, care for the wounded and bury the dead," he said. "Then we'll see." (Jackson Diehl, Washington post, A16)

EGYPT PLEDGES TO PURSUE TALKS Violence Seen A Threat To Mubarak As Well As To Israel

CAIRO -- Egyptian officials, expressing shock and embarrassment at the terrorist ambush Sunday of an Israeli tour bus, pledged Monday to pursue peace efforts with Israel as police continued their search for the assailants.

President Mubarak, in a telephone call Sunday night to Israeli Prime Minister Shamir, appeared intent on limiting the political damage to Egypt from the attack, widely described as the worst terrorist incident since the assassination of President Sadat by Islamic fundamentalists in 1981....

Officials in Cairo said the violence poses both a domestic security problem for Mubarak and a threat to his diplomatic initiative with the U.S. aimed at setting up direct talks between Israelis and Palestinians.

"A bus full of people to be stopped on a highway and shot at is something that never happened here," a Foreign Ministry official said. "It's a challenge to Egypt before it is a challenge to Israel."

(Caryle Murphy, Washington Post, A16)

EGYPT ARRESTS PALESTINIAN SUSPECTED OF KILLING ISRAELIS

CAIRO -- Egyptian police have arrested a Palestinian suspect in an apparent breakthrough in their hunt for masked gunmen who killed nine Israeli tourists and two Egyptians.

Security sources in Cairo said Monday police were questioning the Palestinian driver of the tourist bus, suspecting possible collusion between him and the driver of a white Peugeot 505 used to ambush it.

The Peugeot driver was also identified as a Palestinian and both men came from the Rafah area straddling the border with the Israeli-held Gaza strip, the sources said. A Syrian was also sought for questioning.

PAKISTANI THIEVERY LED U.S. TO CUT OFF AID TO AFGHANS

The Bush Administration recently cut off all humanitarian aid to the Afghan resistance because of serious concerns about the way it was pilfered and manipulated by Pakistan's intelligence service, U.S. officials said Monday.

The cutoff, which did not affect military aid, was lifted last month after a plea to U.S. Undersecretary of State Kimmitt by the head of the Pakistani military, Gen. Mirza Aslam Beg, according to interviews with four officials in different U.S. governmental departments.

But the first 2,000 metric tons of wheat sent under the resumed system was not delivered to the Afghans through regular Pakistani channels, but secretly sent to a warehouse operated by the Pakistan's InterServices Intelligence agency, said the officials, who asked not to be identified.

PANAMA IS RESISTING U.S. PRESSURE TO ALTER 'INADEQUATE' BANK LAWS

PANAMA -- Officials of the new Panamanian government are resisting U.S. pressure to change the banking laws that the Americans say have made the country a haven for enormous illicit drug profits before Gen. Noriega was removed from power....

American law-enforcement officials and legislators are concerned that the new government and the country's appetite for foreign investment will actually lead to even greater use of Panamanian financial institutions to conceal illegal drug profits.

In a series of interviews in recent days, local banking regulators, senior Panamanian officials and U.S. officials demonstrated through their comments a growing tension between the two nations over the money-laundering issue. A fight now appears likely in Congress over a proposed $1 billion aid package for Panama.

An extensive review of Panamanian banking records and court documents shows, too, that many senior leaders in the government, while never accused of money laundering, have had strong ties to corrupt banks....

The nation's new president, Guillermo Endara, has for years been a director of a Panamanian bank used extensively by Colombia's Medellin drug traffickers.

Guillermo (Billy) Ford, the Second Vice President and chairman of the banking commission, is a part owner of the Dadeland Bank of Florida, which was named in a court case two years ago as a central financial institution for one of the biggest Medellin launderers, Gonzalo Mora.

U.S. PRESSURE IN JESUIT PROBE SAID TO ALIENATE SALVADORAN OFFICERS

SAN SALVADOR -- U.S. efforts to spur the investigation into the killing of six Jesuit priests have led to a sharp deterioration of relations between American military advisers and the Salvadoran army, with the officers being virtually frozen out of the war effort, senior U.S. and Salvadoran officers say.

Salvadoran and U.S. officials say relations are at a low point because the Salvadoran forces feel the U.S. is overly concerned with the murders and is allowing the armed forces as an institution to be damaged.

"Advisers are now being viewed as spies rather than traitors," one top military source said. "There is a very bad atmosphere."

NICARAGUANS SUFFER OVER DELAYED U.S. AID

With under three weeks to go before Nicaraguans go to the polls, the logjam placed on U.S. aid to the opposition by the ruling Sandinistas has largely been broken.

But although much of the funding has gotten through, several problems remain, according to representatives of the Democratic and Republican institutes responsible for handing over the money....

The National Opposition Union...is still awaiting the release of 54 of 76 vehicles it bought with the U.S. aid....

But the most important problem remaining...is that the Institute for Electoral Promotion and Training, a civic group formed by members of the opposition to check voter lists, train poll watchers and run get-out-the-vote drives, lacks time to check the names of more than a fraction of Nicaragua's 1.7 million registered voters....

A pre-election purge of multiple names and ghost writers is especially important in a country like Nicaragua, where census data is inadequate and the mechanisms to challenge suspect ballots on election day are weak.

COSTA RICA PRESIDENT-ELECT SETS ANTI-DRUG POLICY

SAN JOSE -- President-elect Rafael Angel Calderon Jr. vowed to fight drug trafficking and said his government would have good relations with the U.S. because he is a friend of President Bush.

"(The U.S. and Costa Rica) have always had good relations, and we must increase them now that there are shared ideals of fighting for democracy, freedom and respect for human rights," Calderon said in an interview published Monday with the daily newspaper La Nacion.

Calderon...said he planned "to turn this victory into the victory of an entire people united to fight drug trafficking."

The 41-year-old president-elect gave no details on what measures he planned to take to combat illegal drug activities in Costa Rica. But his vow, made during an impromptu rally in downtown San Jose, drew the largest cheer from his audience of several hundred Costa Rican supporters....

In the interview, Calderon said he expected relations between his government and the U.S. will be "extremely cordial...because I have a personal relationship with President George Bush."

MORE DEFENSE CUTS NEEDED, SENATOR SAYS Budget 'Off The Mark,' Sasser Tells Cheney

The chairman of the Senate Budget Committee Monday warned Defense Secretary Cheney that the Pentagon's 1991 spending plan is "at minimum $10 billion off the mark" at the opening bell of this year's congressional quest to meet deficit reduction targets.

Sen. Sasser told Cheney and Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Powell to "dust off" contingency plans to make deeper cuts in big-ticket weapons programs and to be prepared to bring home more U.S. troops from Europe because Congress is likely to demand as much.

"We've got to find $37 billion [in cuts]," Sasser said, to meet this year's deficit reduction targets. "I don't think there's a chance in the world that Congress is going to give you the kind of budget you have presented here." ...

Republican members of the panel said they were willing to fight for defense programs this year, especially improvements in U.S. strategic forces to match improvements in Soviet nuclear weaponry.

"If the lion is going to lay down with the lamb," Sen. Gramm said, "it would be better if we were the lion."

CHENEY CONCEDES HUGE INVENTORIES

Defense Secretary Cheney said Monday that the Pentagon is still having tremendous difficulties in overseeing its $103 billion inventory of spare parts, inoforms and materiel.

Mr. Cheney told the Senate Budget Committee that there are areas in the Defense Department where "we've got far too much overlapping of responsibilities and jurisdictions" in managing inventories, and that too often there are no clearcut lines of authority when it comes to keeping tabs on supplies....

Mr. Cheney said the Defense Department had instituted management reforms designed to attack the problem.

SOCIAL SECURITY TAX CUT ASSAILED AS 'POISON PILL' Hill Debate Opens On Sharp Partisan Note

The congressional debate over financing the Social Security system began on a highly charged and partisan note in the Senate Finance Committee Monday as Sen. Heinz led an attack on Sen. Moynihan's proposal to cut Social Security payroll taxes.

Calling the New York Democrat's proposal a "sugar-coated poison pill," Heinz compared the Moynihan plan to "the medieval practice of curing a patient of disease by bleeding him to death."

But Moynihan's criticism of the use of the Social Security trust fund surplus to cover up the extent of the country's budget deficit was echoed by Comptroller General Bowsher.

"The use of growing Social Security surpluses to mask the deficit in federal operations amounts to blue smoke and mirrors," Bowsher said at a crowded Finance Committee hearing.

Republicans Attack Moynihan's Social Security Tax Cut

Sen. Moynihan Monday defended his plan to cut Social Security taxes, but Republicans attacked it as a "twin toxic menace" that would bankrupt the retirement fund by 1998.

Moynihan's bill to roll back payroll taxes by $55 billion over the next two years has created a firestorm of controversy on Capitol Hill about what, if anything, to do with the huge and growing Social Security trust fund surplus.

The Bush Administration and Congress have used the surplus...to mask the size of the federal deficit....

Gwendolyn King, who is head of the Social Security agency, repeated the Administration's opposition at a Senate hearing Monday.

"I believe major surgery (on Social Security) at this time would be ill advised," King said. "I don't believe this is the time to go backwards." ...

While several Finance Committee members, including Chairman Bentsen, thanked Moynihan for forcing a debate on the issue, none of the lawmakers at the hearing backed his bill. (Bud Newman, UPI)

U.S. POSTS FIRST TRADE SURPLUS FROM TOURISM

Foreign travelers spent more money in the U.S. than Americans spent abroad last year, marking the first time since record-keeping began that the country enjoyed a surplus in this category of international trade.

The surplus totaled about $450 million, according to figures released Monday by the U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration. Officials there predicted it will grow to $1.5 billion this year, helping further to offset the nation's persistent deficits in trade.

"Tourism today is the number one export of the United States," agency head Rockwell Schnabel told reporters Monday....

Schnabel's agency, arguing that tourism's importance in the economy isn't properly recognized, is pushing the government to devise a comprehensive tourism policy that would devote more to promoting travel here. (John Burgess, Washington Post, D9)

BUSH BASKS IN NATIONWIDE 'POINTS OF LIGHT'

After portraying America's do-gooders for 17 months as "a thousand points of light," President Bush has begun switching on one light at a time.

Each day but Sunday, Mr. Bush names a "Daily Point of Light," praising good deeds that "successfully address our most dire social problems" as examples for others.

He's also trying to snuff the snicker factor while lobbying Congress to earmark $25 million for the Points of Light Foundation.

Mr. Bush seeks light in every state and in communities of all sizes, whose locations are recorded at the White House with numbered white stickpins on a large map. But a miscount, or a late start, means that at this pace Mr. Bush will fall 12 short of finding 1,000 points before his first term ends. (Frank Murray, Washington Times, A1)

'MOTOR VOTER' BILL SPLITS HOUSE GOP

A "motor voter" bill that would force states to register all driver's license applicants to vote, without proof of citizenship, has split the House GOP leadership and outraged many Republicans.

"It would cheapen citizenship and be a slap in the face of all our parents and grandparents who came over to this country and were proud of finally getting their citizenship and being entitled to vote," Rep. Dreier said Monday....

The rift over the bill pits House Minority Whip Gingrich, who supports it, against the Bush Administration, Rep. Michel and such fellow GOP conservatives as Rep. Walker. (Ralph Hallow, Washington Times, A3)

HUD PROBE REQUEST CALLED TOO LIMITED

Attorney General Thornburgh's request that an independent counsel be named to look into the activities of former HUD Secretary Pierce may do little to aid the ongoing HUD scandal investigation, members of a congressional committee said Monday.

Rep. Lantos, who has led the most active House inquiry into alleged mismanagement and abuse at HUD, said "many unanswered questions" remain in the HUD probe and Thornburgh's request is too limited.

"I agree with the attorney general's decision to seek the appointment," Lantos said during a hearing Monday. "However, I strongly disagree with the narrow and limited scope of the independent counsel's jurisdiction as proposed by the attorney general."

REAGAN ORDERED TO GIVE IRAN-CONTRA TESTIMONY Poindexter's Right To Diary Parts Disputed

A federal judge Monday ordered former President Reagan to give videotaped testimony in the Iran-contra trial of John Poindexter, ruling that the former national security adviser has met the heavy legal burden of showing that Reagan's testimony is "material" to his defense.

U.S. District Judge Greene rejected arguments seeking to block Reagan's testimony advanced by lawyers for Reagan and the Justice Department, and said Poindexter had shown that "the evidence of the former President is needed to protect his right to a fair trial, and [Poindexter] will be given an opportunity to secure that evidence."

But the complex legal battle over whether Reagan actually will testify is not over. If Reagan appeals Greene's decision, the issue could delay the scheduled Feb. 20 start of Poindexter's trial.

U.S. WILL ABANDON ROCKY FLATS PLUTONIUM PLANT
Energy Department Wants To Build New Processor
Adjacent To Flawed $215 Million Facility

The Energy Department has decided to abandon efforts to use key portions of a flawed, mothballed U.S. processing plant for plutonium needed in nuclear weapons, and wants instead to construct a new, adjacent facility at an estimated cost of $565 million, according to agency officials and congressional sources.

It is an unexpected twist in what department officials acknowledge has been one of the most embarrassing episodes in the history of the U.S. nuclear weapons program....

The sources said the Energy Department's decision came after new estimates indicated $1 billion will be needed to completely salvage the facility at Rocky Flats, Colo., three times last year's estimate and an untenable expenditure given the need to restore other components of the nuclear weapons complex. GLOBAL WARMING/PRESIDENT

ABC's Diane Sawyer: A cool reception today for President Bush's plans to deal with global warming. Environmentalists say action is needed now to prevent pollution from drastically altering the earth's climate, but at the opening of an international conference in Washington, Mr. Bush's message was, Not so fast -- more study is needed.

ABC's Ann Compton: President Bush did not deliver the speech environmentalists had hoped for.

(President Bush: "We all know that human activities are changing the atmosphere in unexpected and in unprecedented ways. Much remains to be done. Many questions remain to be answered.") Environmentalists were critical of President Bush, remembering his campaign promise to use the "White House Effect" against the Greenhouse Effect.

(Stewart Boyle, Association for the Conservation of Energy: "What was remarkable about the speech today was the fact that he never referred to global warming at all.")

(Brooks Yeager, National Audubon Society: "We were disappointed. The world is calling on the United States for leadership to combat climate change and we're responding with platitudes.")

That due in part to a policy tug-of-war this past weekend between Chief of Staff Sununu and White House science advisers. Sununu acknowledged he changed one draft of the speech which he felt went too far with scientific data he doesn't trust.

(Chief of Staff Sununu, on "This Week with David Brinkley": "There's a little tendency by some of the faceless bureaucrats on the environmental side to try and create a policy in this country that cuts off our use of coal, oil and natural gas.")

Those industries, President Bush said today, should not be sacrificed to save the environment. Even so, environmentalists give President Bush some credit, and hope for commitments to action when he hosts the conference on the environment this spring. (ABC-8)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: ...Today, President Bush took a highly measured approach to global warming, calling for a balance of economic and environmental concerns. Afterward, many environmentalists, however, thought that they had gotten the cold shoulder.

NBC's John Cochran: George Bush, the Environmental President, ran into strong opposition today from George Bush, the champion of free enterprise. They wrestled to a draw. The Environmental President promised aggressive action against global warming, but the Free Enterprise President refused to force industries to reduce oil, gas and coal burning, which many scientists blame for changes in climate.

(President Bush: "We believe that market mechanisms should be applied, and that our policies must be consistent with economic growth and free market principles in all countries.")

The President's even-handed approach to economics and the environment was a disappointment to his audience: scientists alarmed by global warming.

(Rodney Fujita, Environmental Defense Foundation: "The environmental community thought that the Administration was going to take a more aggressive stance on climate change.")

(David Rind, climate scientist: "When Pearl Harbor occurred, we didn't say, Well, we'll only take the sorts of actions that won't affect our economy.")

Bush's go-slow attitude is a defeat for his EPA Director Reilly and a win for Chief of Staff Sununu, who helped persuade Bush that the case against oil, gas and coal pollution is shaky. Sununu says some research even questions whether there is a Greenhouse Effect.... Today, President Bush sounded very different from candidate Bush. During the '88 campaign, Bush said: "Those who think we're powerless to do anything about the Greenhouse Effect are forgetting about the White House Effect. As President, I intend to do something about it." Today, a Bush critic said he hasn't delivered.

(Sen. Wirth: "Well, we haven't seen any White House Effect. We keep -- it used to be a whitewash effect, now we're just sort of a, you know, a timid effect.")

The President says he will take action on global warming if he can be convinced it is a real danger. But that's not enough to reassure environmentalists around the world and here in his own Administration. (NBC-9)

CBS's Bob Schieffer: President Bush delivered a much-ballyhooed speech today outlining his views on the threat of pollution to the world's environment, and almost immediately environmentalists attacked it, saying it proposed too little. They blame that on White House Chief of Staff Sununu.

CBS's Wyatt Andrews: Environmentalists were hoping this would be the speech in which President Bush led the fight against global warming. But instead of a call to action he called for more study.

(President Bush: "So the United States will continue its efforts to improve our understanding of climate change, to seek hard data, and determine how best to meet these tremendous challenges.")

(William Hare, Australian Conservation Foundation: "We were very disappointed about the speech. We were expecting and anticipating a commitment to greenhouse gas reductions and a policy program for the USA to achieve that.")

...A call for more research on global warming is not exactly the aggressive approach Bush seemed to promise when he ran for office.

(Vice President Bush, Aug. 31, 1988: "Those who think we're powerless to do anything about this Greenhouse Effect are forgetting about the White House Effect.")

(Sen. Wirth: "Well, we haven't seen any White House Effect. We keep -- it used to be a whitewash effect, now we're just sort of a, you know, a timid effect.")

The White House is being cautious, in part, to fend off international demand that the developed world cut its oil and gas consumption by 20 percent, an idea the Administration says would cripple industrial output. Gambling with the ecology, then, rather than with the economy, was largely the work of Chief of Staff Sununu, who helped convince the President to change today's speech and tone down American concerns over global warming. To environmentalists, there is a White House Effect; just not the one they thought they were getting. (CBS-7)

SOVIET PARTY PLENUM

ABC's Peter Jennings reports that the world's attention is focused on Moscow once again, because the Soviet Union is rapidly approaching the most important crossroads in its 70-year history of Communist rule. Today and tomorrow, the Central Committee is debating its own future, having heard from Mikhail Gorbachev today that the Party should give up its absolute lock on power, which has always been guaranteed. "The Party must give up the unchallenged right to rule," Mikhail Gorbachev told the Central Committee. "In the future, the Party intends to struggle for the role of ruling body, but do it strictly in the framework of the democratic process, rejecting any kind of legal or political advantage." If the Central Committee approves of his proposals, then Gorbachev wants the next Party Congress to reaffirm his decision as early as this June or July.

Jennings discussed the changes with close Gorbachev adviser Nikolai Shishlin:

Jennings: Does Gorbachev truly believe in a multi-party system?

Shishlin: Oh, that's very difficult to answer.... But he's a realist, and he sees that the multi-party system or whatever exists in the Soviet Union.

Jennings: Are there people standing up at this meeting and saying to Gorbachev, "hold it"?

Shishlin: Maybe. Not today, maybe tomorrow, somebody will say such words. But the majority of the plenum will support Gorbachev.

Jennings: He will get his way?

Shishlin: Yes.

So, Gorbachev's allies are fairly confident he will prevail within the Communist Party because they believe there is no competitor powerful enough to challenge him.

ABC's Jim Laurie reports that Mikhail Gorbachev took bold steps today not because he wanted to, but because he had to. In at least a half dozen republics new popular fronts in opposition to the Communist Party have established power bases. A multi-party system is already a fact of life. For weeks now, the Soviet media have been supporting Gorbachev's case that if the Communist Party is to meet the new challenge, it must be reformed. A major housecleaning of the Communist Party would give Gorbachev a chance to weed out old hard-line or corrupt local leaders and give him a new Party more responsive to his radical reforms. In giving up the notion of monopoly of power, Gorbachev has also been influenced by the disintegration of the Communist Parties of Eastern Europe.

Jennings discusses the Soviet situation with Foreign Ministry spokesman Gennadi Gerasimov:

Jennings: This so-called threat from conservatives to Gorbachev. Is it real or is it imagined?

Gerasimov: It's real, but it's not very big.... They are not real organized, and they do not have a very big following, because people want change, and those who want no change are really in the minority.

Jennings: How deep is the resentment in the Soviet Union, that in Eastern Europe they are so much farther ahead of you on opening up the system?

Gerasimov: They are ahead because they have now a lot of parties and they're struggling against each other, and we want to change our society with the help of the party who started it. That's the difference. The [Communist] Parties there are bankrupt; this Party is not. That's a big difference. (ABC-Lead)

Brokaw: We can only imagine what the old Communist Party hard-liners are thinking tonight in the Soviet Union. Today, at the opening of the Communist Party central Committee, Mikhail Gorbachev made his boldest strike yet: he said it's time for the Communist Party to give up its oppressive ways -- the Communists must compete against other political parties.

NBC's Garrick Utley reports that Gorbachev put it bluntly: "The Party must get rid of everything that ties it to the authoritarian bureaucratic system." Gorbachev also said the Party must give up its monopoly of powers protected by Article Six of the Soviet constitution, and the process he proposes can "result at some stage in political parties, a legal opposition." The Communist Party, he said, will have to compete. Gorbachev also called for a Communist Party congress to be held in early summer to elect a new Central Committee and approve his sweeping proposals. Gorbachev came under heavy criticism from his opponents at today's session, but Nikolai Shishlin, a consultant to the Central Committee and a Gorbachev ally, is confident.

(Shishlin: "Considering the first day of the work of the plenum, I should say I'm quite sure that I know the winner. His name is Gorbachev.")

But Gorbachev's first priority is to clean out his old-line conservative opponents.

Brokaw discusses the Soviet situation with William Hyland, Foreign Affairs editor:

Brokaw: Some of your colleagues...believe that Gorbachev may be able to pull this off, that he can save the Party by transforming it. Do you think that's possible?

Hyland: It's a tremendous gamble, and I'm inclined to think he can't. I think he's sowing the seeds of the destruction of the Communist Party, and indeed, I think he's bringing an end to the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917.... The Soviet Party...in a competition might even emerge as the plurality party. But once you open the door to genuine political competition, I think you will see right-wing and left-wing parties spring up immediately.

Brokaw: What's the effect of all this on the Baltic republics and on Azerbaijan?

Hyland: ...He's trying to save the Soviet state, not the Soviet Party, and by liberalizing the Party and opening the door to political pluralism he's hoping that the Baltic states and others will stay in a loose Soviet federation. He has a chance, I think; they will at least take a look. But I'm persuaded the Lithuanians...will go out.

Brokaw reports that former President Reagan today warned that the Cold War is not yet over. Reagan said we have to wait to see if all these changes are permanent before declaring an end to the Cold War. (NBC-Lead)

CBS's Dan Rather: Mikhail Gorbachev is fighting for his own survival, the survival of the Soviet Communist Party, and for the union of his nation. He's trying to stay out front of revolutionary forces that have already swept through Eastern Europe. Today, Gorbachev pressed his own party to go farther than he may have ever dreamed he would have to: he called for the Communist Party to give up its guarantee of power, to end 72 years of one-party rule. Opening a crucial Party plenum Gorbachev said a multi-party system already exists in fact. With the rise of political movements outside of and opposed to the Communist Party, he told the Central Committee that it must accept reality and now fight for the Party's survival within a democratic process.

Rather reports that Pravda said Gorbachev told coal miners Friday that the Communist Party lays no claim to monopoly and is prepared for dialogue. Gorbachev said the fate of the Party depends on its reformation, and he added that it needs fresh faces in the ruling Politburo. A vote on the new Party platform is expected toward the end of the plenum tomorrow evening. Tomorrow the plenum is to take up the breakaway movement in Lithuania and the overall right of Soviet republics to secede from the Union. (CBS-Lead)

SOVIET GEORGIA

CBS's Tom Fenton reports that the Communist Party of Georgia is under siege from all sides. Demonstrators are occupying Party headquarters. Women are occupying the seat of state government day and night, halting state business. Many Georgians possess small arms in case of a crackdown. The turning point in Georgia's struggle was last April 9th, when the local Communist government called in the Soviet army to break up an independence rally in Tblisi. The soldiers charged into the crowds with sharpened shovels and cannisters of poison gas, killing 20 civilians including 14 women. Since then, the more extreme elements of the nationalist movement have taken over, preaching hatred of Moscow and calling for a boycott of elections next month. Georgia looks like a part of the Soviet Union that Gorbachev has already lost. (CBS-12)

LITHUANIA

ABC's Barry Dunsmore reports that the events in Moscow are having little impact in Vilnius, Lithuania. The papers said whatever happens in Moscow, Lithuanians have made up their mind: they want their independence. Leaders of the reform movement are contemptuous of reports from Moscow that the Communist Central Committee is willing to give up its monopoly on power.

(Rita Rapkus, reform movement: "I think the only thing that is holding the Soviet Union together is that dictatorship of the Communist Party.")

People here say the only way to stop the Lithuanian independence movement now is with tanks. (ABC-2, CBS-11)

EAST GERMAN CABINET

ABC's Peter Jennings reports that East German Prime Minister Modrow appointed eight members of the pro-democracy opposition to his cabinet. There is now no longer a Communist majority in the government. (ABC-3)

ROMANIA

Jennings reports that the Romanian deputy prime minister said today Romania was moving toward multi-part democracy, and that whatever happens as a result of elections scheduled for May there will be no going back to Communist Party domination. (ABC-4)

AIDS/ROMANIA

Jennings reports that a team of AIDS specialists now says that one out of every three sick infants in Romania's hospitals and orphanages is carrying the AIDS virus. (ABC-5)

SOUTH AFRICA

ABC's Ted Koppel reports that sources close to Nelson Mandela say he is insisting on a complete lifting on the state of emergency and on a broader release of political prisoners. Absent that, say the sources, there will be no negotiations.

ABC's Richard Sergay reports that as the South African parliament began debating President de Klerk's plans to start power-sharing talks with blacks, white extremists immediately demanded his resignation. Conservative whites do not have enough votes to force de Klerk to quit. The government is also facing pressure from liberal whites, who say de Klerk is not addressing the fundamental issue of ending white domination.

ABC's Don Kladstrup reports that a protest against high rents became another confrontation between whites and blacks, with many of the demonstrators tear-gassed and several shot and wounded. Black leaders charge that the reconciliation President de Klerk urges is little more than rhetoric. (ABC-6, NBC-7)

Schieffer reports that black and white South Africans rode the same buses as the public transport system was officially desegregated. (CBS-9)

MIDDLE EAST ATTACK

Sawyer: Police in Egypt arrested a Palestinian today who they say may have been one of the attackers who ambushed a busload of Israeli tourists in Egypt yesterday. Two groups, including the Islamic Jihad terrorist organization, have claimed responsibility. The PLO condemned the attack, and Prime Minister Shamir said efforts to bring peace to the region would continue. (ABC-11)

Brokaw reports that President Bush, in a telephone call to Prime Minister Shamir, condemned the attack as an outrageous act of terrorism. (NBC-6, CBS-8)

IRAN-CONTRA/REAGAN

NBC's Jim Miklaszewski reports that federal judge Harold Greene ordered former President Reagan to immediately turn over 33 entries from his personal diaries and to provide videotaped testimony for the John Poindexter trial. Reagan had no immediate comment, but by late today his attorneys filed a motion in federal court in Washington invoking Executive Privilege, refusing to turn over the material. Reagan's office said he would review the order for videotape testimony. The Bush Administration had attempted to block the release of the Reagan diaries for fear the decision would erode Presidential power. But Judge Greene rejected the motion, and accused the Justice Department of stall tactics. The White House had no comment on today's ruling. (NBC-2, ABC-7, CBS-2)

HUD SCANDAL

Schieffer reports that James Hamernick, a former federal housing official in the Reagan Administration, took the Fifth Amendment today when he was called to testify to Congress. (CBS-4)

COLOMBIA DRUG ARREST

Brokaw reports that in Colombia today police arrested a nephew of cocaine cartel boss Pablo Escobar, and authorities say the nephew was in charge of Central American smuggling routes. U.S. authorities want him extradited to stand trial here for money laundering and drug trafficking. (NBC-11)

BCCI

Brokaw reports that a federal judge approved a controversial plea bargain for BCCI, the bank used by Gen. Manuel Noriega which was convicted on money-laundering charges. Under the plea bargain, the bank will continue to do business in this country and pay no fines, but will forfeit $15 million in drug money, and has agreed to cooperate in other cases. (NBC-10)

PRODUCTIVITY

Brokaw reports that the government reported today that American productivity increased only .9 percent last year. That's the worst showing since the 1982 recession year. (NBC-4)

THE BUDGET

A Dubious Budget -- "...Almost everyone is promised something but faces the loss of something else in the Bush budget. Creation of a new savings plan with tax-free interest for middle-income taxpayers plus a renewed effort to cut capital gains taxes are urged to increase investment.... Such incentives work only if other taxes offset the lost revenue.... Neither the President nor Congress wants to face what Darman calls 'the job of fiscal policy correction.' That job includes not only aiming at a truly balanced budget that does not raid Social Security and other trust fund surpluses, but also dealing with hundreds of billions of dollars in what the OMB director termed 'unfunded liabilities.'... For now, President Bush and Congress are side-stepping in opposite directions, neither of which is toward fiscal responsibility." (Tampa Tribune, 1/31)

What Deficit? What Debt? -- "...President Bush's 1991 budget proposal, he said, will bring federal spending into balance by 1993. 'Once it's balanced,' he promised in his State of the Union message, 'we will start paying off the national debt.'... Economically, it's an irrelevant goal: If the economy grows more quickly than the stock of debt, the debt diminishes in significance. But paying off the debt is the sort of long-term goal that might well distract Americans from a far less pleasant short-term reality: The government continues to run an excessive deficit and to devote far too small a share of its resources to the investments necessary for future economic growth. The Administration's latest budget proposals, constrained by the President's opposition to increasing taxes, won't do much to correct that situation." (Journal of Commerce, 2/2)

OMB Should Get Its Figures From CBO -- "...Congress...must by law use the OMB figures...to squeeze the budget down to meet Gramm-Rudman targets. This is one of several reasons that the current budget process is a charade. Consistently...the CBO's deficit projection has come closer to predicting the actual deficit than has the OMB's projection.... The OMB is an arm of the White House and calculates figures that satisfy a President's needs. Accuracy is a secondary consideration. And OMB always uses the most optimistic scenario for economic growth.... The result of using the happiest figures is that the actual deficit usually turns out to be greater than the official, agreed-upon deficit. That has happened each year since Gramm-Rudman went into effect in 1985 -- again, a charade." (Ft. Worth Star-Telegram, 1/28)

Arrest The Cookie Monster -- "...We notice that Budget Director Darman has been the subject of some hostile profiles in the press. That can only mean one thing: Mr. Darman is the bearer of some uncomfortable truths, and a well-spoken harbinger of things to come.... This is a responsible spending proposal. President Bush has contrived a series of measures -- including a capital gains tax cut and a middle- and lower-income savings plan -- that should maintain a reasonable measure of economic growth to sustain existing revenues and reduce the federal deficit. He has also stood fast beside his famous pledge of no new taxes. He has proposed increased expenditures in places where the American people clearly seek concerted federal action...and he has continued the process of cutting the defense budget. This raises a fundamental challenge to Congress: Manage or perish." (Providence Journal-Bulletin, 1/31)

THE PRESIDENT

CENTURY CITY FUNDRAISER

Earlier today I visited Fort Erwin out in Barstow in the desert. I hate seeing all that sand. Reminds me of my last round of golf.

We drove back on Ten, the Santa Monica Freeway. It was a dress rehearsal for the Secret Service. They figure if I can survive that freeway, my trip to Colombia will be a piece of cake.

X These are exciting times we live in. Each night on the evening news you see pictures of oppressed people crying out against those cruel dictators who would deny them the right of self-determination. I wish the residents of Malibu well.

X Each day a new wave of them climbs over the dreaded volleyball net to freedom.

Ich bin ein surfer.

We couldn't have asked for a prettier day. Barbara and I held hands out on our hotel balcony and watched the sunset behind the clouds of malathion. (MAL-AH-THIGH-AHN)

Any visit to Los Angeles can be confusing. I never can remember the correct wine to order with tofu.

You people are so health conscious. Where else can you order an oat bran margarita.

I wish Pete well, although I must confess I'm gonna miss your current Governor. And just when I finally learned how to spell "Deukmejian".

Pete is the junior Senator from California. You know the difference between a junior Senator and a senior Senator? At Christmas, a junior Senator only receives a calendar from Charles Keating.

(FOR SAN FRANCISCO)

In my budget proposal, I've requested a 2.6% cut in Pentagon spending. Of course in San Francisco you don't have to worry about defense. You've got the Forty Niners.

SURVEY OVERVIEW

Southwest Research Associates is pleased to present the results of this survey. This report contains the results of a telephone survey of 400 randomly regenerated telephone numbers from throughout Lubbock County. Responses to the survey were gathered on January 31, through February 1, 1990. As is always the case, responses to a random sample may result in a sample that is slightly at variance with the actual ethnic population of the total audience. For instance, in this case the number of respondents who identify themselves as Hispanic, while closely representative of the U. S. Hispanic population as a whole, is somewhat under-represented of that population in Lubbock county. Effect upon the results is minimal in this case, since a larger than necessary sample was taken. Sample size should result in an accuracy level of plus or minus 4% with a confidence level of 95 percent.

Now turning to a state issue. As you know, a U. S. District Judge in Midland has ruled that judges in Lubbock County as well as several other counties must be elected from single member districts. While the candidate is not required to reside in the district, only voters registered in that district may vote for the candidate. A special session of the legislature has been called to deal with this matter. Let me read you several proposals that are being discussed and you tell me if you would support or oppose them.

- 8) Jim Mattox has proposed that judges be elected on basis of county commission precincts. Would you support or oppose judges being elected based on county commission precincts?

Support	46%
Oppose	32%
No answer	22%

- 9) Governor Clements, Lt. Gov. Hobby and House Speaker Lewis have proposed that judges be appointed under a merit selection plan by the governor and later submit to election to retain their position. Would you support or oppose judges being appointed under a merit selection, then later having to run for election.

Support	45%
Oppose	41%
No answer	14%

- 10) Others have proposed that judges be removed from partisan politics and be elected on a non-partisan ballot. Would you support or oppose the election of judges on a non-partisan ballot?

Support	55%
Oppose	26%
No answer	19%

- 11) The abortion issue continues to be debated with some saying that abortion is not an issue for government to decide, that it is a personal decision for a woman and her doctor. Others argue that the government must protect the life of the unborn. What is your opinion?

Not government issue	66%
Protect life of unborn	28%

- 5) Another idea that is being talked about in Washington has to do with foreign aid. According to some, five countries --- Israel, Egypt, Turkey, Pakistan and the Philippines, receive most of the foreign aid being distributed by the United States. The suggestion has been made by Senator Dole that we cut back on the amount of aid given to these countries and give a portion of that money to the emerging democracies in Eastern Europe. - 7) On the issue of Child Care, there are basically two different ideas on how the government should approach child care. One is to issue grants to the states for child care subsidies and the other is to issue a tax credit to individuals who are paying for child care. Which of these two approaches would you favor, grants to states for child care or tax credits to individuals.

Now that Congress has begun a new session, and President Bush has submitted his budget proposals outlining where he thinks our tax dollars should be spent, we would like to ask your opinion on a few of the issues that will be discussed and voted on during the months ahead.

- 2) First, President Bush has proposed substantial cuts in military spending, including the ending of many weapons systems and the closing of many military bases around the country. Some Congressional leaders have said the President did not cut deeply enough in military spending. What do you think? Should the President have proposed deeper cuts, do you think spending for the military should be greater or do you think the President's approach was about right?

- 4) As you know, the last few years we have built up a surplus in the social security trust fund. Today there is some discussion in Washington on reducing the payroll deduction for social security. This would put social security on a "pay as you go" basis rather than building the fund to cover future needs. Would you favor leaving the social security payroll deduction as it is or would you prefer to cut back on the deduction?

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT RS for

SUBJECT: Reply to President Kaunda's letter to You about Relief of Zambia's Bilateral Debt to the U.S.

Purpose

To reply to President Kaunda's letter to you asking for help with relief of Zambia's official debt owed to the U.S.

Background

On December 10, 1989, President Kaunda wrote to you expressing concern over the extent of Zambia's official bilateral debt owed to the U.S., currently about $250 million. Despite what he describes as "the best efforts of the Zambian people and Government" to repay the debt, Kaunda notes that Zambia's total external debt (to all countries) is over $6.9 billion dollars, and that the size of the debt burden is suffocating Zambian efforts to grow.

Kaunda praises your decision last July to "forgive" African official debt owed to the U.S. but notes, correctly, that Zambia is not yet eligible because it hasn't signed a structural reform agreement with the IMF. (In fact, Zambia had such an agreement with the IMF several years ago, but, in the face of open public demonstrations over belt-tightening, Kaunda scrapped it in 1987.) The key message to Kaunda is that he needs to finalize the IMF negotiations and get a structural reform package into place.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the attached letter at Tab A to Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda.

SUBJECT: Presidential Response to letter from Zambian
President Kenneth Kaunda on Debt Relief

Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda wrote the President on December 10, 1989, expressing concern about the extent of Zambia's bilateral debt owed to the United States and the difficulty paying it off without some form of debt relief would cause.

The proposed reply, on which State and Treasury collaborated, recommends that the President tell Kaunda that Zambia is eligible for U.S. official debt relief, but that Zambia must have a structural adjustment program in operation with the IMF.

Dear Mr. Ambassador:

I have just learned of your decision to return to Panama. I know that, after two years of living in exile in the United States, your return to Panama will be a joyous occasion for you and for all the members of your family.

During your time in the United States, you were tireless and unswerving in the fight against tyranny and in the effort to restore genuine democracy to your country. Your dedication, your selflessness and your inexhaustible energy inspired us all to work harder for the same goal, and you were unstinting in your willingness to give advice and counsel to us as we worked together to advance that common cause.

As President of the United States, I want to express my personal appreciation for your courage and for your wisdom in the struggle. You leave behind many friends here in Washington, and you will surely be missed.

With warmest best wishes to you and the members of your family.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT BS

SUBJECT: Letter of Appreciation for Former Panamanian
Ambassador to the U.S. and Prominent Noriega Foe,
Gabriel Lewis Galindo

Purpose

To provide a letter of appreciation to Gabriel Lewis Galindo, former Panamanian Ambassador to the U.S.

Background

Gabriel Lewis Galindo, former Panamanian Ambassador to the U.S. from March 1977 to June 1978, broke early with Noriega. This caused him to be branded "public enemy number 1" at one point by Noriega, forcing him to flee Panama under a safe conduct pass arranged by the Costa Rican Ambassador. During his period of exile in the United States beginning in mid-1987 through December 1989, Ambassador Lewis was a key player in bringing the Panamanian democratic opposition perspective to the attention of Congress. He was instrumental in maintaining bipartisan Congressional support and worked tirelessly to maintain unity on the part of the Panamanian Civil Crusade movement. His commitment extended to the contribution of personal funds to the cause.

Lewis is now returning to Panama and would very much appreciate a letter from you. We believe that the proposed letter at Tab A, which State Department has approved, would be appropriate.

That you sign the letter at Tab A.

Dear Walter,

Thanks ever so much for your good letter of January 30th. I am a strong believer in the UNCF having worked in various campaigns of theirs since 1948 when I first was signed up by their President, Bill Trent, at Yale.

I am asking our people here to check on the possibility of doing something with the press about the UNCF when we are out there with you. I'll get back to you on this.

Walter, the Will Farishes cannot come to Sunnylands. They have an unalterable conflict in Florida. The Bradys are delighted to accept your invitation. To replace the Farishes, although this is not at all necessary, might I suggest Don and Adele Hall of Kansas City. Don is (was) Chairman of Hallmark, his family's company. He loves golf. Adele, his charming wife was mentioned in Chris Edley's letter to you about those who have helped UNCF the most. They are charming people and close friends of ours. This is just a suggestion and perhaps a little forward of me, but I know you'd love them both. Please be frank.

Our love to Lee.

Rather than a press conference, we could send a message to the United Negro College Fund which applauds the new program. Also, we could put out a release saying the same thing while on the trip, assuming Counsel signs off.

I am assuming that any press conference would quickly turn to other things, which is not what I thought you'd envisioned for the weekend.

Dear Mr. President:

I note that in your "State of the Union" message on January 31st, you will be stressing a national commitment to several goals, including education.

For many years, I have been a vigorous supporter of the United Negro College Fund because long-range, the only lasting solution for the Black problem is education. I believe it imperative that young blacks must have the opportunity of getting into the mainstream of economic life in our country and I am not only sympathetic, but fervently believe that when one segment of our population is deprived, other segments of the population may be impaired.

In recent discussions with Christopher Edley, Chief Executive Officer of the United Negro College Fund, I have encouraged him in undertaking a capital fund drive of sizeable proportions of $250 million and to set it up on the basis of a four-to-one challenge grant in which I have indicated a willingness to provide $50 million in foundation funds for this goal.

It occurs to me that Edley's letter to me of January 27, 1990 sets forth background material that you may want to note.

May I respectfully suggest that when you come to Sunnylands on March 2nd and 3rd that it would be exceedingly helpful to alert the public to this contemplated school program by the calling of a press conference. As a matter of fact, Mr. President, I indicated to Edley, confidentially, that you may be here at Sunnylands on March 3rd and that I would seek your acceptance to get the news of this challenge grant off to a running start.

With all good wishes.

Most sincerely,

The Honorable Walter H. Annenberg

Dear Mr. Ambassador:

Words do not do justice to my feelings of gratitude in the wake of your decision to commit $50 million to the United Negro College Fund's capital campaign as a challenge to corporations, foundations and individuals to make their own commitments toward reaching a goal of $250 million. It is my understanding your gift will be paid out at the annual rate of $5 million for the next ten years. Your extraordinary generosity is indeed a challenge, and an inspiration, to all of us.

When I look back at the history of your involvement with the College Fund, it is clear you have long been in the forefront on the key issue of this campaign: the need to prepare black youth to be productive members of society and active participants in the workplace of the present and the future. In 1983, for example, in your letter to me acknowledging receipt of the report on the first year of the 21st Century Scholars Program, you said: "Nothing is more important than preparing the young for their future responsibility." I am aware from our numerous discussions, as few others are, of your deep concern for not only the most gifted of our youth but also those with more limited talents.

One of the significant roles you have played over the years has been to set an example for others, helping to highlight the importance of the historically black colleges in educating our young people to be part of the mainstream of the American economy. In 1979, recognizing that the UNCF annual campaign in Philadelphia was stagnating, you simultaneously made a challenge grant of $100,000 to that effort and an outright gift of $500,000 to our last capital campaign.

In 1982, you and Mrs. Annenberg served as Honorary Chairmen of our Salute to Leadership Dinner in Washington, D.C. On that occasion we presented you with our Distinguished Leadership Award. And that same year, your lead gift of $1.5 million created the 21st Century Scholars Program to provide undergraduates and graduates the opportunity to pursue their academic studies. Out of your personal regard for the remarkable achievements of the late Barbara M. Watson, you saw a chance to address the problem of the low representation of blacks in international affairs by setting up the Memorial Award in International Relations in 1983 in Ms. Watson's honor. I recall your concern that minority youth not only needed and deserved the opportunity to be educated to perform this service, as Barbara had, but that our nation needed them.

More recently, you acted as National Chairman of the UNCF Parade of Stars Telethon, in 1985. You responded to our need and persuaded friends to provide local leadership so that we could generate more scholarship funds for deserving youth seeking a better life through education. Additionally, you have made yourself available to me and others, such as Adele Hall, for advice and guidance on a range of topics.

This is certainly an outstanding record of concern and support. I mentioned earlier that you have been, and continue to be, an inspiration to many, to the Presidents of the UNCF member institutions, to the UNCF staff and, really, to all Americans. But I must speak personally here. I find this latest manifestation of your abiding interest in the education of black youth galvanizing. In one stroke, you have taken the efforts to launch this campaign to a new level! To say "thank you" does not seem enough, but it comes from the bottom of my heart.

Enclosed is a summary of our proposed media campaign for your review. I will be in touch with you shortly to discuss next steps, especially the plans for the press conference in early March.

Yours sincerely,

Christopher F. Edley

Thank you for your message concerning United States military activity in the Republic of Panama -- Operation Just Cause.

For nearly two years, the United States and nations of Latin America and the Caribbean have worked together to resolve the crisis in Panama. The goals of the United States have been to safeguard the lives of Americans, to support democracy in Panama, to protect the integrity of the Panama Canal Treaties, and to bring General Manuel Noriega to justice.

On December 15, 1989, at the instigation of General Noriega, the illegitimate Panamanian National Assembly declared that a state of war existed with the United States. The very next day, an unarmed U.S. Marine officer was killed, another was wounded, and a Navy officer was brutally beaten and his wife threatened with sexual abuse by Panama Defense Forces personnel. General Noriega's reckless threats and attacks upon Americans in Panama made it clear that the lives and welfare of our citizens living there were increasingly at risk, and the continued safe operation of the Panama Canal would be in serious jeopardy if such lawlessness were to continue.

Under these circumstances, I ordered the deployment of U.S. forces to Panama. Our forces conducted themselves courageously and selflessly in defense of their fellow citizens and in defense of democracy. We accomplished our objectives, including bringing Manuel Noriega to the United States to face the drug-related charges on which he was indicted.

The brave Panamanians elected by the people of Panama last May -- President Guillermo Endara and Vice Presidents Calderon and Ford -- have assumed their rightful leadership roles and have begun to put in place a democratic government. The Panamanian people have expressed their enthusiastic support for America's friendship and help in establishing their democratically elected government. We will continue to assist President Endara as a government is established in Panama that allows freedom, peace, and democracy to flourish.

We will always remember the brave Americans who gave their lives or were wounded in order to see justice done and freedom restored to Panama. The gratitude of our nation will endure, and a democratic Panama will be a lasting tribute to their sacrifice.

Sincerely,

GEORGE BUSH

THE PRESIDENT

February 6, 1990

Dear John,

Barbara and I are heartsick to learn about Maureen. I know how it must hurt. There is so little one can say, except we are thinking of you in this time of great sadness.

Our hearts go out to you.

MILITARY BUDGET/PRESIDENT (Fort Irwin, Calif./Norman Sandler, UPI/adv. 3:55 p.m. EST) -- Amid talks of troop cuts and peace dividends, President Bush defended his military budget Tuesday, pointing to the invasion of Panama as evidence U.S. forces must keep up a post-Cold War guard against "uncertainties and dangers" even in a safer world. On a day that saw 70 years of communism put to a historic test in Moscow, Bush used a display of military might to buttress his argument that as the U.S. moves to adapt its policies to lowered world tensions, doubts and dangers mandate caution. A mock battle staged by Army troops at this sprawling training center in the Mojave Desert -- a made-for-television photo opportunity, Pentagon-style -- served as the backdrop for a charge to the troops that "your work has never been more important." "We see our armed forces smaller but more agile and flexible, well-suited and ready for the demands of likely contingencies," Bush said in a prepared pep talk broadcast by radio to troops in the field. "When I decide we must use military forces to protect American lives and interests, I need to know -- as I did in Panama -- that you are ready and you are ready now."

(Barstow, Calif./Christopher Connell, AP/adv. 3:00 p.m. EST) -- President Bush, trying to muster public support against deep defense cuts, visited an Army training camp in the Mojave Desert Tuesday and said the future still holds "uncertainties and dangers" despite the shift toward democracy across Eastern Europe. Bush, in a radio address prepared for delivery to troops before viewing war games at the National Training Center here at Fort Irwin, said "the stunning performance" of troops in the invasion of Panama demonstrated the wisdom of preparing American forces "to carry out any mission, anytime, anywhere." Bush, already facing demands from Democrats for sharp reductions in Pentagon spending in the wake of the revolutionary shifts in the East bloc, said, "As we enter the 1990s, the United States is shaping its military to meet a changing international environment, one that may be potentially safer: but one that will almost surely have its share of uncertainties and dangers." Bush said he envisioned "our active forces smaller but more agile and flexible."

(Aboard Air Force One, AP) -- President Bush, facing demands from Democrats for steep defense cuts in the wake of the receding Soviet threat in Europe, headed West Tuesday on a three-day trip aimed at boosting support for his go-slow approach to streamlining the Pentagon. "This should be a very good trip emphasizing some of our defense requirements needs and a little politics mixed in," Bush told reporters shortly after Air Force One departed Andrews Air Force Base. Bush plans appearances at fund-raisers for Republican candidates in California, Nebraska and Ohio. "We'll be doing more of that this year," Bush told reporters.

U.S. HOSTAGES/France (Paris/UPI) -- The U.S. has informed France that a presidential pardon for convicted pro-Iranian terrorist Anis Naccache could help win the release of U.S. hostages in Lebanon, the daily newspaper Le Figaro reported Tuesday. The newspaper said President Bush told President Mitterrand in a recent telephone conversation that the Naccache affair was raised during U.S.-Iranian negotiations over the release of nine American hostages from Lebanon. Naccache, who is Lebanese, was convicted and sentenced to life in prison on March 10, 1982, for a 1980 assassination attempt on former Iranian Prime Minister Bakhtiar in France.

ECONOMIC REPORT (Terence Hunt, AP/adv. noon) -- President Bush said Tuesday the U.S. is in "excellent economic health" and will experience "strong, sustained economic growth" for the foreseeable future. Bush offered the rosy assessment in the first annual economic report he has submitted. A summary of the message was released at the White House after Bush signed the document at an Oval Office ceremony. The report broadly spells out the economic principles that Bush said will guide his Administration.... In his report, Bush said, "Our excellent economic health will allow us to build on the successes of the 1980s as we prepare for the next century. I am confident that the United States can enjoy strong, sustained economic growth and use the fruits of that growth to raise living standards, solve longstanding problems, deal with new challenges and make the most of new opportunities," Bush said.

GERMAN REUNIFICATION/U.S. (Prague/AP) -- The Bush Administration Tuesday embraced as a "pretty good" idea a proposal by West German Foreign Minister Genscher for reunification with East Germany. A senior U.S. official traveling with Secretary of State Baker said the French government also seemed taken with Genscher's plan to keep Germany in NATO, but without moving western troops into what is now East Germany.... Baker discussed the fast-moving German situation with French Foreign Minister Dumas at a refueling stop in Shannon, Ireland, and then flew to Prague for talks with leaders of Czechoslovakia's "velvet revolution" from hard-line communism toward democracy. The U.S. official, who spoke with reporters on condition that his name not be used, said, "We think that proposal -- in terms of not having NATO forces move farther east -- is a pretty good one."

U.S./MIDDLE EAST PEACE (Abu Dhabi, United Arab Emirates/Reuter) -- The U.S. remains committed to its existing plans for achieving peace in the Middle East, a senior U.S. official visiting the United Arab Emirates was quoted Tuesday as saying. The official WAM news agency said John Kelly, assistant Secretary of State for Middle East and Southeast Asian affairs, discussed the Middle East and the situation in the Persian Gulf with Emirate leaders Monday. "He affirmed his country's commitment to peace in the Middle East through Secretary of State James Baker's plan," WAM said.

CHINA/FANG (Tokyo/Reuter) -- The release of China's top dissident trapped in the U.S. Embassy in Beijing has been delayed by the West's unwillingness to resume government and commercial loans, Asian diplomats said Tuesday.... "Beijing's bargaining position has been that the West should resume the loans and then Fang [Lizhi] can be allowed to leave China, while the U.S. has said release Fang first and then the loans will be resumed," an Asian diplomat said.... "The loans are still off and the U.S. Congress has passed anti-China legislation, engaging in very strong rhetoric against Beijing. This has made it very difficult internally to release Fang," the diplomat said.

SOVIET REFORMS (Moscow/AP) -- Liberal Communist Party leaders Tuesday attacked Mikhail Gorbachev's daring plan for ending the party's monopoly on power as not radical enough to solve the country's pressing problems, participants said. But Politburo member Yegor Ligachev, a hard-liner, called for a careful review of the Soviet president's proposals, which would fundamentally alter this nation's system of government.

SOUTH AFRICA (Cape Town/Reuter) -- South Africa Tuesday gave its clearest indication yet that it was willing to give up race classification, the foundation of apartheid. Constitutional affairs Minister Gerrit Viljoen, the government's chief negotiator, said the 1950 Population Registration Act would be up for negotiation in proposed talks on a shared future for blacks and whites. The act, which classifies everyone by race at birth, forms the basis of South Africa's 40-year-old system of legislated racial discrimination. "It is accepted that the Population Registration Act will have to lapse together with the present constitution. It has been accepted that the prescribed and racial...definition of groups is not acceptable. But the State President has made it clear that you cannot scrap it at this stage because then the definition of certain building blocks of the present constitution, which we accept will have to go, will then fall away," Viljoen said.

PHILIPPINES/U.S./WORLD BANK (Manila/Reuter) -- The Philippines protested to the U.S. Tuesday for abstaining in a vote at the World Bank on whether to lend Manila $390 million to back energy development. Finance Secretary Jesus Estanislao said he had sent a letter of complaint to U.S. Ambassador Platt saying that the abstention sent bad signals about the country at a bad time.... "Certainly I mind it very much that they're playing around with our economic policy and our economic programs for reasons that are only known to them," Estanislao told reporters.

PHILIPPINE REBELS/U.S. (Manila/Reuter) -- Philippine army rebels trying to overthrow President Aquino said Tuesday they are not enemies of the U.S. and told Washington to stay out of the country's internal conflicts. The rebels, in a statement circulated in military headquarters in Manila, also called on other countries to withdraw their support of the Aquino government, calling it incompetent and corrupt. "Mrs. Aquino will definitely not be able to finish her term.... As for our time frame, just wait and see. It is most quiet before the storm unleashes its full fury," they said.

U.S. PLANES/CRASH (London/UPI) -- Rescue personnel searched Tuesday for the crew of two U.S. Air Force planes that crashed on separate training missions in central Britain, killing one officer and leaving two others missing and feared dead; officials said. Air Force spokesman Capt. Raymond Martell said investigators had yet to establish what caused either crash but investigations had been ordered. He said an F1-11-E bomber based at a Royal Air Force base in Upper Heyford smashed into a wasteland of inlets and sandbars at 5:50 p.m. Monday near the town of Lincoln, 140 miles north of London.... Martell said the second plane, an A-10 Thunderbolt II based at RAP Alconbury in Cambridgeshire, crashed at 9:20 a.m. Tuesday near the Welsh town of Capel-y-ffin, some 150 miles west of London.

2:15 P.M EST/11:15 A.M. PST NEWS UPDATE

DEFENSE BUDGET/ASPIN (AP) -- The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee charged Tuesday that the Bush Administration's $292.1 billion defense budget fails "to match the new political realities at home or abroad." Rep. Aspin said the Administration's argument that it needs a modernized force to get a U.S.-Soviet agreement on reducing strategic weapons no longer holds true. "You can get an arms control agreement without a robust" strategic budget, Aspin said, noting economic pressures in the Soviet Union to reduce defense spending and congressional opposition to the Administration's proposed increase in strategic programs. But Defense Secretary Cheney said that without a strong strategic budget, the U.S. might get a poor agreement that would not serve its best interests.

REUNIFICATION/BAKER (Prague/AP) -- Secretary of State Baker, trying to guide the drive to German reunification, registered his support Tuesday for a plan that would keep the country in NATO but bar Western troops from moving into what is now East Germany. The proposal, advanced by West German Foreign Minister Genscher last week, also would allow Soviet troops to remain in the eastern region -- at least at the outset.... "The process of unification is taking place on the ground right now, and will continue to take place at a quick pace," said a senior official, traveling aboard Baker's plane and commenting only on condition he not be named.

HAVEL/BAKER (Prague/Reuter) -- Czechoslovak President Havel told Secretary of State Baker Tuesday he would like to see total withdrawal of all Soviet and U.S. troops from Europe. After a 90-minute meeting that went on half an hour longer than planned, Baker told reporters: "We talked about the President's proposal regarding CFE. We had very productive discussions and we're looking forward to continuing those in two weeks when President Havel comes to the United States."

GORBACHEV/REFORM (Moscow/Reuter) -- Soviet leader Gorbachev, urging the country toward democracy and an open economy, was reported Tuesday to have won backing from Kremlin colleagues despite a bitter hard-line assault on his reforms. And as a history-making session of the Communist Party's Central Committee moved to a close, a senior Moscow spokesman predicted that it would reinforce Gorbachev's position at the top.... Foreign Ministry spokesman Gerasimov, asked at a briefing how the Central Committee session would affect Gorbachev's position, replied: "Of course it's going to be reinforced." Gerasimov said the Central Committee's debate and a vast pro-democracy rally in the streets of Moscow Sunday during which some 200,000 people called for radical change showed that the Kremlin chief's place at the top was not at issue. There was a mood of optimism among Gorbachev backers, coupled with mounting speculation that the day could end with a reshuffle of the Kremlin leadership or at least the departure of conservative figures from the Central Committee.

GLOBAL WARMING/REILLY (AP) -- President Bush's top environmental adviser said Tuesday the President is "responding very well" to the challenges of global warming despite complaints from environmentalists of inadequate leadership from the White House. William Reilly...defended Bush's speech to a global warming conference Monday, in which the President called for more research before specific commitments are made to reduce so-called "greenhouse" pollution. "The speech that was delivered was first-rate," Reilly told a congressional hearing. He said that while he was not directly involved in writing the speech, "two-thirds to three-fourths" of the suggestions he submitted to the White House were incorporated in the final draft.

CHINA/HUMAN RIGHTS (Reuter) -- The "big chill" of repression in China is deepening despite the lifting of martial law and other signs of conciliation, the human rights group Asia Watch said in a report released Tuesday. Since the Tiananmen Square massacre last June, the report said, Beijing has continued to silence peaceful dissidents by summary arrests, show trials, torture and executions. As many as 30,000 dissidents may have been detained, Asia Watch said. "Although less visible than before, the repression -- the 'big chill' -- nonetheless continues to develop apace, and in certain respects has substantially deepened," according to the report.

BULGARIA/SECRET POLICE (Sofia/Reuter) -- Bulgaria said Tuesday the secret police had been disbanded in a major shake-up of the state security services aimed at helping the country rid itself of its hardline communist past. "The traditional state security structures have been disbanded," Interior Minister Atanas Semerdziev told round-table talks between the government and opposition parties in Sofia. "The law enforcement authorities will become new and modern bodies independent of any political party and guided solely by the interests of the people and the state," the official BTA news agency quoted him as saying.

DRUG CHEMICALS (Los Angeles/AP) -- Federal drug officials are trying to block exports of certain chemicals to 52 Latin American companies because the solvents are being used to process cocaine, a newspaper reported Tuesday. The solvents include methyl ethyl ketone, manufactured primarily by Exxon Corp. and Shell Oil Co., the Los Angeles Times reported, citing unidentified sources. The move was authorized under new legislation and targets about one in five of the companies that were regular importers of U.S. industrial solvents, the newspaper said. Disclosures indicating the extensive role of U.S.-originated chemicals in South American cocaine production were scheduled to be revealed Tuesday in a Senate subcommittee hearing looking into such chemical exports, the Times said.

DEA/SEIZURES (Reuter) -- U.S. authorities seized close to a billion dollars in drug smugglers' assets and impounded 81 tons of cocaine last year in raids that set new records but failed to disrupt the huge U.S. market for illegal drugs. According to the latest statistics of the DEA, drug traffickers lost $973.9 million in cash and assets in 1989 -- more than twice the amount seized three years ago. Seizures of cocaine totalled 81.7 tons, three times the 1986 figure and 43 percent more than in 1988. The DEA statistics list 25,618 arrests, 15,097 in connection with cocaine trafficking, again a record. But the arrests have not resulted in drug shortages and failed to seriously affect an illicit market whose profits rival those of General Motors.

THE WHITE HOUSE
Office of the Press Secretary
(Victorville, California)

For Immediate Release February 6, 1990

REMARKS BY THE PRESIDENT
DURING RADIO ADDRESS TO TROOPS

The National Training Center
Fort Irwin, Barstow, California

12:00 P.M. PST

THE PRESIDENT: Good afternoon, General Bethuren, and good afternoon to the men of the 3rd Brigade, the 9th Infantry Division, Motorized, from Fort Lewis, Washington; the pilots and the airmen of the Tactical Air Command; and the Opposing Force and the Observer Controllers.

It's great to be here at this first stop on a trip that's going to take me to San Francisco tomorrow, and then to the banks of the Missouri in Nebraska and finally to the heartland of Ohio on Thursday. I appreciate the opportunity to witness first hand the rigorous training that has made the American Army the premier land force in the world today. And these realistic battles that you wage here in the Mojave Desert forge tactical expertise, leadership and a fighting spirit. And that's what we need.

Now less an authority than General MacArthur put it this way: "Wars may be fought with weapons, but they are won by men. It is the spirit of the men who follow and of the man who leads that gains the victory." And I might add that: Nowhere was this more true than in Panama.

I'm grateful to Secretary Cheney, and to General Powell and the Joint Chiefs for their brilliant leadership of Operation Just Cause. All Americans are grateful and proud of those courageous and patriotic young Americans who fought with unwavering devotion to liberty. Thanks to them, yet another country is free.

Never before has the importance and power of training been on more prominent display than in Panama. When I ordered the U.S. forces into action there, last December, I didn't have to call my friend, your able Chief -- our able Chief of Staff Carl Vuono to find out whether the Army was ready. I knew that the Army was well-trained; prepared to carry out any mission, anytime, anywhere. And the stunning performance of the Army -- and our other outstanding services -- more than justified my confidence and that of the American people.

Your work here at the NTC reflects the state of training throughout the Army -- demanding, tough. But, whether you are defending along the Whale or attacking up the Valley of Death or speak for all Americans when I say we are pleased to see Chairman Gorbachev's proposals to expand steps toward political pluralism in the Soviet Union. As a free and democratic people, Americans will always welcome measures which promote the growth of democracy. And it's especially encouraging to see anything which might bring the day of true democracy a bit closer for the Soviet people.

As we enter the '90s, the United States is shaping its military to meet a changing international environment, one that may be potentially safer; but one that will almost surely have its share of uncertainties and dangers. We see our active forces smaller but more agile and flexible -- well suited and ready for the demands of likely contingencies. The events of Eastern Europe, and in the Soviet Union, have changed our strategic defense posture. I have proposed an additional reduction of U.S. and Soviet troops in Central and Eastern Europe to a level of 195,000. At the same time, Secretary Cheney has laid out a very reasoned and steadfast approach to reducing military expenditures in the U. S. But it is important not to let these encouraging changes -- political or military -- lull us into a sense of complacency. Nor can we let down our guard against a worldwide threat. The Soviet Union still does maintain formidable forces. Military challenges to democracy persist in every hemisphere. America must always be prepared to fight for freedom and security. When I decide we must use military forces to protect American lives and interests, I need to know -- as I did in Panama -- that you are ready and you are ready now.

Thousands of dedicated Americans are working for peace around the world -- at Livermore Labs, where I'm going to visit tomorrow, to the troops training here at NTC to the worldwide alert crews. And I'll speak to -- that I'll be talking to there at Offutt SAC headquarters on Thursday.

I congratulate each of you on your professional achievements, your personal commitment to the defense of America. As I watch you train with a "We can, we will" attitude, I want to make sure the men and women of Old Reliable, Gold Devils, Mung-Ho, Scout Out, Always First, Task Force Sabre, Active Support, the OPFOR and the OC's all realize how very proud and thankful the American people are. God bless our great country, and thank you, Colonel. And now, back to war.
