CLEAN-AIR PACT ENDS ACID-RAIN IMPASSE
Longtime Adversaries Bridge Differences

Senate leaders and Bush Administration officials Thursday unveiled a compromise on revising the Clean Air Act that bridges differences of historic adversaries and boosts chances for early passage of a Senate bill after a decade of political gridlock.

The package accommodates conflicting positions on such complex issues as reducing smog and the emission of toxic chemicals by industry, but its centerpiece is a last-minute consensus on acid rain....

By establishing a coalition of senators seeking strong environmental controls, the cost-conscious Bush Administration and senators seeking to protect their home-state industrial interests, the bill is considered "filibuster-proof." Its likely passage would heighten pressure for action in the House, where a bill with generally weaker provisions has languished in committee since October.

"Of course, there are disadvantages, but we all have to rise to the occasion and deal with a national and international problem," said Sen. Byrd, who had threatened to filibuster if coal companies and jobs in his state were not adequately protected from acid-rain provisions. "We have to clean up the air. The time has come."

Clean Air Bill Headed For Senate

The controversial Clean Air Act is heading for a Senate showdown next week after the White House and Senate leaders reached agreement on a compromise bill that toughens pollution controls by vehicles, power plants and other businesses.

The compromise, announced Thursday, was hailed by President Bush and Sen. Mitchell, but was criticized by some other senators and environmental groups....

Bush said in Los Angeles Thursday that the compromise was "a very big, forward step. Let's get it over to the House and do something to clean up the air in this country."

Asked about criticism he was reneging on some of his environmental commitments, particularly on global warming, Bush said: "I say they're wrong. You can't play to the extremes."

But environmental groups such as the Sierra Club and the Environmental Defense Fund said the compromise was not strong enough and urged that it be strengthened.

"The bill defers the promise of smog-free cities for 20 years," the Sierra Club said in a statement.

The Clean Air Working Group, which represents 1,950 companies and trade associations, said the bill was better than the earlier versions but might still need some changes.

Clean Air Debate Heads To Senate Floor

A new agreement on sweeping air pollution controls is expected to ease Senate passage of the measure, although the accord with the White House is prompting criticism from environmentalists and industry -- not to mention some senators....

"We have reached agreement on sound and comprehensive legislation that expands and strengthens the clean air laws and have done it in the most cost-effective way possible," declared Sen. Mitchell....

Sen. Dole called the proposal a "giant step forward" in improving federal air pollution laws for the first time in 13 years.

"President Bush is extraordinarily pleased with the agreement. It is a milestone, an enormous step forward," said Roger Porter, the President's chief domestic policy advisor and head of the Administration team that helped negotiate the agreement....

Environmentalists complained that the compromise weakened major portions of the original Senate bill.

"The back-room dealing has generated bad deals for the American people," complained Richard Ayres, chairman of the National Clean Air Coalition....

"The agreement fails to require the controls we need to provide clean air in the nation and in New Jersey," said Sen. Lautenberg....

"It's a better bill, but we'll have to continue the fight for fairness on the Senate floor," said Sen. Simon.

Sen. Byrd said the compromise still threatens thousands of his state's coal miners. He promised to seek additional changes but added, "I'm not going to engage in any filibuster."

Speaking of the difficulties Midwest senators face on the acid rain provision, Sen. Dodd told reporters: "We did not have a choice between the good, the bad and the ugly. We had a choice between the ugly, uglier and ugliest."

HE'S AGAINST ACID RAIN; HE'S ALSO THE ENEMY,
SAY MANY ENVIRONMENTALISTS; HE'S JOHN SUNUNU

...Mr. Sununu's environmental record is a mix of activism on some issues combined with skepticism about many stands taken by environmentalists. Unlike some conservatives, Mr. Sununu accepts the need for government action to protect the environment and has advocated spending public and private funds to meet environmental goals. But he also maintains that efforts to protect the environment shouldn't block economic development and that other government officials often don't demand sufficient scientific proof that environmental proposals are feasible before agreeing to them....

President Bush endorsed Mr. Sununu's environmental views, praising his role in just-completed negotiations with the Senate on a clean-air bill. Mr. Bush said of Mr. Sununu's critics: "They're crazy. I say they're wrong.... I say take a look at this compromise in the landmark clean-air legislation." ...

In the White House, Mr. Sununu has continued advocating steps to battle acid rain....

But Mr. Sununu isn't similarly prepared to combat global warming.... Mr. Sununu argues that combating these gases is a far more costly proposition because it requires cutting use of coal, oil and natural gas and that scientific evidence isn't in to prove the problem is serious enough to justify such radical steps.

BUSH RESOUNDS CAMPAIGN THEMES
In West, President Stresses Popular Issues,
Dodges Troublesome Ones

LOS ANGELES -- He has been in office more than a year, but to watch President Bush scramble around southern California Thursday was to witness a man still campaigning.

He touched on all the hot-button political issues, presenting himself as tough on crime and drugs, friend of police and law enforcement, a protector of the environment, a statesman engaged in high-level diplomacy, a Republican leader summoning the faithful and as heir to former President Ronald Reagan.

He dodged potentially troubling issues, such as what his decision will be about oil drilling off the California coast. Officials said he is deliberately avoiding any mention of the subject because of its political sensitivity....

But there was no mistaking his mission. With his exceptionally high standings in the polls and with world events running in his favor, Bush is politicking in a state that could prove vitally important to his party and future....

This morning, for example, he visited the new high-technology, maximum security North County Correctional Facility here.... There was no mention of Willie Horton....

Speaking to about 1,000 law enforcement officers, Bush declared, "If you're going to be tough on crime, you've got to be tough on the criminals.... No more revolving door." ...A revolving prison gate was the graphic video symbol in one of Bush's 1988 campaign commercials....

Thursday afternoon, Bush paid a courtesy call on Ronald Reagan, icon of California conservatism. While Reagan answered questions about the Nicaraguan elections, again attacking the Sandinistas, Bush just wanted to be photographed. "At this photo op I've elected not to take any questions," Bush said.

Reagan averred, "Oh, I was just sitting there and, yes, he's doing exactly what is right for him. I just have a little more freedom.

Bush To Discuss Trade Issues With Japanese Prime Minister

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush, before concluding a West Coast visit with Japan's Prime Minister Kaifu, is urging businesses to screen job applicants for drug use.

Bush focused on anti-drug themes in a series of Los Angeles-area appearances before heading to Palm Springs for the meeting with Kaifu.

He called on business leaders at the California Chamber of Commerce dinner Thursday night to "help us turn the tables against the dealers, turn them forever."

"So-called casual users and their money keep these merchants of death in business," he said.

People who believe drug use is victimless "need to hear this: you shame yourselves and you shame your country. America now condemns what has too long been condoned. The country has had enough," he declared.

Noting that many businesses already conduct pre-employment drug screening, Bush told the group: "We need to make it very clear, to every American, that if you do drugs, you don't get hired." (Rita Beamish, AP)

BROKAW'S COZY VISIT WITH BUSH

...Handsome and slick as the "Day in the Life of the White House" video was, and despite the wizardly editing it must have taken to boil it down to an hour of air time, we never quite did see President Bush making decisions or issuing orders, at least none of substance. What we saw instead had the unmistakable aroma of a publicity stunt, a George Bush day changed drastically by the fact that cameras happened to record it.

U.S. OFFICIALS WARN OF MORE QUAKE IN SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Federal officials warned Southern Californians Thursday to brace themselves for the possibility in the next few days of an earthquake as strong or stronger than the temblor Wednesday....

"There may be a heightened probability of a large aftershock in the next several days," Dallas Peck, director of the U.S. Geological Survey, told a House panel.

AGENCIES MAKE HOMELESS ELIGIBLE FOR QUAKE AID FEMA And Red Cross Act In California

LOS ANGELES -- The nation's major federal and private emergency relief agencies have agreed to unprecedented financial assistance for the low-income homeless affected by the San Francisco Bay area earthquake last October. The development is expected to alter future urban disaster operations significantly.

Wednesday's 5.5-magnitude quake and aftershocks in Southern California Thursday underlined the seismic threat to the state's economy and social welfare system that the new relief approach is designed to handle.

Officials of FEMA and the American Red Cross continued to refine plans for a shift toward replacement of low-cost housing, expected to be a major casualty in urban disasters.

In part a response to lawsuits and public outcry against traditional disaster funding procedures, the new approach may add as much as $80 million to the effort to house poor people affected by the 7.1-magnitude Loma Prieta quake in the Bay area, disaster officials said.

"This is going to change the way FEMA operates no matter where there is a disaster," said Kenneth Zimmerman, an attorney with the Legal Aid Society of Alameda County who helped to negotiate settlement of a lawsuit against FEMA.

CRIMINAL INDICTMENTS:
TRAINING BIGGER GUNS ON CORPORATIONS

The indictment earlier this week of Exxon Corp. on charges stemming from the Exxon Valdez oil spill and Northrop Corp.'s guilty plea to 34 criminal fraud charges are the latest in a string of criminal investigations and prosecutions to hit some of the best known companies in the U.S.

Corporate executives, leading attorneys and government officials all say that criminal indictments are being used increasingly for white collar transgressions that previously might have gone undetected or treated as civil or administrative issues....

Ira Reiner, the Los Angeles district attorney who has a reputation as an aggressive prosecutor of corporate crime...said: "A fine, no matter how substantial, is simply a cost of doing business for a corporation. But a jail term for executives is different. What we are trying to do is to change the corporate culture." ...

The Justice Department reported recently that it had indicted 101 corporations and individuals and entered 107 pleas and convictions for environmental crimes in fiscal year 1989, more than double the 40 indictments and 37 pleas and convictions in fiscal 1985. Cases last year included those against Ashland Oil Inc., Protex Industries Inc., Ocean Spray Cranberries Inc. and Texaco Inc.

ANALYSTS: GOP COALITION INTACT BUT VULNERABLE

There may be some cracks in the voter coalition that has enabled Republicans to win five of the last six presidential elections, but GOP consultants say they're not worried yet.

They don't think the Democrats will be able to take advantage of a split among GOP factions anytime soon.

At a forum sponsored by the Progressive Policy Institute, six Republican consultants, analysts and political scientists said strains within their party, notably on abortion, may send some voter blocs away mad.

But they said the Democrats are likely to remain a party of liberal positions and candidates, reducing the risk of defections or disinterest among GOP voting blocs.

David Keene, chairman of the American Conservative Union, said "the glue of the movement" was opposition to communism, and as the easing Cold War has made that less important, differences on other points show more clearly....

Kevin Phillips, president of the Americal Political Research Corp., said, "I think that there's a lot of vulnerability in the coalition at this point."

Phillips said some of the emotional, symbolic issues that helped President Bush in 1988, things like the pledge of allegiance and prison furloughs, are echoes of the old Southern strategy he helped fashion more than 20 years ago.

"These issues are beginning to weaken," he said. "The Republican coalition is beginning to fragment on cultural issues."

DEMOCRATS SPLIT OVER PLANS TO CLOSE DONATION LOOPHOLE
Unregulated Money Bolsters State Parties

Proposals to shut down one of the principal fund-raising loopholes of presidential politics have sparked a sharp split within the Democratic party, pitting Sen. Mitchell and others who favor eliminating the loophole against Democratic National Chairman Ron Brown and Democratic state party chairmen....

Critics say the loophole effectively eliminates the federal limit on presidential campaign spending and encourages the political system to rely increasingly on huge individual contributions.

But Democratic officials, while saying they want to clean up the current system, argue the proposal would destroy the central strategy of Brown's chairmanship, his "coordinated campaign" model designed to marshal party resources nationally and concentrate them in key states to swell support for the entire Democratic slate there.

The split within the Democratic ranks is so sensitive that Brown declined to be interviewed for this article....

Other party officials were careful not to criticize either Mitchell or Sen. Boren, who with Mitchell has sponsored comprehensive campaign-finance legislation. But they were sharply critical of outside groups such as Common Cause that are pushing to ban soft money.

SEABROOK PLANT LICENSED AFTER A 17-YEAR STRUGGLE

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission Thursday approved a full-power operating license for the Seabrook, N.H., nuclear power plant nearly 17 years after a group of New England utilities first sought permission to build it.

Unless a federal appeals court grants requests by New Hampshire environmentalists and the state of Massachusetts to block the license, the plant will begin operating no later than March 15.

NOMINEE'S EXPERIENCE QUESTIONED
Law Sets Requirement For Youth Justice Job

...Democrats and Republicans appeared troubled as to whether Robert Sweet...meets the statutory requirement that the Justice Department's Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention be run by someone "experienced in juvenile justice programs."

Some Republicans argued that the meaning of that requirement is not precise and that Sweet is fully qualified because, as Sen. Humphrey put it: "His whole adult life has been centered on youth." Sweet acknowledged that he has little, if any, experience in juvenile justice matters and sought to assure the committee he could succeed because "people tell me I am a fast study."

An aide to Sen. Hatch...said later that the nominee's qualifications are the major issue, adding, "We do expect some votes against (him) but not enough to block the nomination." A Democratic aide tended to agree, saying, "Are there sufficient votes to block him? We probably won't know until next week."

JAPAN SAYS TRADE FRICTION WITH U.S.
IS MOST URGENT PROBLEM

TOKYO -- Resolving bilateral trade problems with the U.S. is the most urgent problem facing Japan, Prime Minister Kaifu told parliament Friday.

On the eve of a U.S.-Japan summit meeting that will center on the trade issue, Kaifu said he would "make maximum efforts to achieve progress" in trade negotiations.

"The single largest policy issue confronting our nation is how to solve trade and economic problems with the United States," he said in his first policy address to the house since becoming prime minister last August.

KAIFU WARNS AGAINST PROTECTIONISM

TOKYO -- Prime Minister Kaifu Friday warned that protectionism threatens the free trade system in a major policy speech to parliament hours before his departure for talks with President Bush in California....

"The world economic order is...at an important watershed," Kaifu said in a speech to both houses of the Diet, or parliament. "The rising pressures of protectionism today threaten the very survival of that free trade system that has sustained our post-war prosperity." ...

Kaifu...avoided making specific promises but pledged to "make every possible effort for progress" in the trade talks aimed at reducing the trade deficit.

BUSH WANTS MOVEMENT ON U.S.-JAPAN TIES

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush said Thursday he's going to deliver some tough talk about U.S.-Japanese trade differences in a two-day summit with Japanese Prime Minister Kaifu.

"We've got to convince him that we've got to move forward with some of the tough problems," Bush told former President Reagan during a brief reunion Thursday afternoon.

Bush...also implied that Washington's reluctance to pressure Kaifu during the Japanese election campaign is a thing of the past.

"It's going to be interesting to meet with Prime Minister Kaifu because he's just solidified his position," he added as reporters listened during the start of his discussions with Reagan. (Michael Gelb, Reuter)

Trade Likely To Be A Bone Of Contention At Palm Springs Summit

The seemingly unmovable U.S. trade deficit with Japan is likely to be an unwelcome guest at a hastily-called, two-day meeting between President Bush and Japanese Prime Minister Kaifu that begins Friday....

Both Bush and Kaifu are trying to play up "the global partnership" between the U.S. and Japan that has become increasingly important....

Bush is being pressed by Congress to exact specific concessions from Kaifu during their meeting, although normally a summit meeting would deal only with broader goals, leaving details to later negotiations.

"Success must be measured in dollars, jobs and economic growth," not in "press releases claiming success," said Rep. Gephardt in a letter he sent to Bush Thursday.

"Japanese trade barriers continue to proliferate.... So it is important that you be as direct as possible with the Japanese prime minister," wrote Sen. Bentsen in his letter to the President.

HOSTAGE TALKS? BUSH SAYS NO, SENDS SIGNAL

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush offered Thursday to undertake public or secret talks if they could free American hostages in the Middle East, but denied knowing of any talks now underway.

While including the standard refusal to trade anything for hostages, Mr. Bush pointedly underlined his signal by renewing an Inauguration Day offer to Iran that "Good will will beget good will," and specified, "Good will means releasing kidnapped prisoners."

He did not say what U.S. good will would mean for Iran.

"Now let me tell you something: If I thought a talk in Geneva would result in letting people go free, I would undertake the talk," Mr. Bush volunteered to reporters. "And if I thought the way to conduct that talk was to do it quietly, I would do it in that manner. If I thought the best way to get the hostages out were to publicly have talks in Geneva, I would do that."

(Frank Murray, Washington Times, A4)

No Hostage Talks Going On, Bush Says

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush categorically denied Thursday that the U.S. is holding direct or indirect talks with Iran or Syria about the release of American hostages in the Middle East.

"There are no talks going on," he said. "I don't spend a day that I don't think about the hostages, but there are no talks going on."

Bush was responding to questions about recent news reports that the U.S. is working through intermediaries in Geneva and elsewhere to win release of the hostages.... The President described the reports as "some of the most ridiculous stories...failing to do anything other than repeat rumors."

He said after seeing one news report he asked National Security Advisor Scowcroft to "work through the system. Are there any talks, have there been any, direct, indirect, in Geneva? And he said no."

Bush said he would be willing to hold such talks if they would lead to release of the captives but "there aren't any" talks "and I'm glad to have this opportunity to be as definitive as possible." (Washington Post, A4)

BUSH AND REAGAN DISAGREE ON DISARMING THE CONTRAS

LOS ANGELES -- President Bush asked Nicaraguan resistance fighters to disarm Thursday, then visited former President Reagan, who said it was too soon for the Contras to give up their guns.

"Don't you think it might be time enough for us to wait and make sure there is a civilian government?" asked Mr. Reagan, whose support for the resistance was a key factor in ousting the Marxist regime of Daniel Ortega.

"Because Sandinistas had their arms and weapons long before any Nicaraguan citizen picked up arms and became the Contras," Mr. Reagan told reporters, who then turned to Mr. Bush and asked for comment.

"I've expressed myself on that," said Mr. Bush, who sent a message through diplomatic channels just hours earlier, asking the fighters to lay down their arms and abide by the cease-fire ordered Wednesday by lame duck President Ortega.

Apparently it was their first public disagreement on national issues.

Nicaraguan President-elect Chamorro also had asked the resistance to demobilize.

"I'm not worried. They will," Mr. Bush told reporters earlier.

SANDINISTAS STEP UP PRESSURE ON NICARAGUAN GOVERNMENT-ELECT

MANAGUA -- Sandinista-controlled labor groups threatened to demand an immediate wage increase from President-elect Chamorro, and government and opposition leaders held transition talks....

High-level government officials, including President Ortega's brother, Defense Minister Humberto Ortega, met Thursday with four representatives of the UNO, said Ernesto Palacios, a spokesman for the UNO. (John Otis, UPI)

TROOPS DESERT SANDINISTA FORCES; OFFICERS STASH ARMS

MANAGUA -- Young soldiers have begun to desert from the Sandinista armed forces before President Ortega relinquishes office April 25, draftees and their relatives said Thursday.

They also said army officers were stashing large quantities of weapons in secret tunnels. Witnesses in Jioagalpa, about 60 miles west of Managua, reported seeing army trucks taking 600 boxes of munitions out of an army depot in Construction Ministry trucks. An army source said they were slated to be hidden at ministry facilities.

SHOCKED SANDINISTA POLICE CHIEF HINTS
HE'LL ACCEPT A TURNOVER

MANAGUA -- In his first public comments since his government's election defeat on Sunday, the hard-line Sandinista who heads Nicaragua's large security apparatus and secret police has indicated that he will be stepping down when the opposition takes power on April 25.

"What other alternatives do I have?" said the official, Tomas Borge Martinez. "I have other important things to do. For me, being Minister of the Interior has never been a calling."

Mr. Borge said he had ordered Sandinista militants to tone down their press and radio campaigns against the results of the election, which gave a landslide margin of more than 14 percentage points to the opposition candidate, Violeta Chamorro. (Mark Uhlig, New York Times, A1)

WEBSTER SEES NO REVIVAL OF SOVIET THREAT
Conflict Continues Between CIA, Defense

CIA Director Webster Thursday said it is highly unlikely that there will ever be a reversal of the collapsing military threat from Soviet and Warsaw Pact forces in Europe, even if Soviet reformer Mikhail Gorbachev is ousted from power and replaced by a repressive hardliner.

In the strongest statement to date by the U.S. intelligence community on a key aspect of U.S. national security calculations, Webster told the House Armed Services Committee that "even if a hardline regime" were to oust Gorbachev and engage in bloody repression of millions of Soviets seeking new freedoms and reforms, such a regime "would have little incentive to engage in major confrontation with the United States" and "would be unlikely to indulge in a major military buildup."

Webster's remarks could have significant impact on the debate over the Bush Administration's proposed $306 billion defense budget for fiscal 1991. Defense Secretary Cheney, in separate testimony to a different congressional panel Thursday, continued to warn that a possible reversal of Soviet liberalization could lead to a resurgent Soviet military threat.

The conflict in their testimony reflects the continuing dispute between CIA and Defense Department intelligence analysts over whether a historical transfer of resources is underway in the Soviet Union from military production to civilian consumer sectors. Webster's testimony, which a knowledgeable official said was approved by Secretary of State Baker, indicates State and CIA share a consensus that Cheney and the Pentagon have not yet joined. BAKER FAVORS 'SHAVING' U.S. AID TO ISRAEL, EGYPT

Secretary of State Baker said Thursday he favored cuts in aid to Israel, Egypt and other major recipients of U.S. funds in order to provide money to assist other countries, including emerging democracies in Eastern Europe and Central America.

Baker, responding to questioning by Rep. Obey, said he would favor "shaving" such aid to large recipients as long as it was done "across-the-board" in a "non-discriminatory manner."

Baker in effect endorsed an option first proposed in January by Sen. Dole to cut aid to Israel and four other nations in order to provide funds for other countries in need....

Baker declined to endorse a specific percentage cut, but said "the only real argument we have with his approach is...it is country-specific," rather than targeting all recipients. (Al Kamen, Washington Post, A18)

BAKER TIES STRINGS TO ASSISTANCE FOR ISRAEL

Secretary of State Baker attached tough conditions Thursday to Washington's support for Israel's efforts to house a huge influx of Jewish immigrants from the Soviet Union.

He said the government of Prime Minister Shamir must pledge to stop settling Israelis in the occupied territories.

Mr. Baker's statement, made to a House appropriations subcommittee, appeared to be a hardening of the Bush Administration's position on the Jewish settlements issue. (Warren Strobel, Washington Times, A9)

ANC PRESSES U.S. CONGRESSMEN ON SANCTIONS

Possible Quayle Visit To South Africa

By Quayle Termed 'Ill-Timed'

LUSAKA, Zambia -- Top officials of the ANC, worried about the prospects of a shift in American policy toward South Africa, urged nine visiting U.S. congressmen Thursday to continue supporting sanctions, and argued against a possible trip to Pretoria by Vice President Quayle or one to Washington by President de Klerk.

Seven Democrats and two Republicans were the first congressmen to meet with ANC leader Nelson Mandela since his release last month after more than 27 years in jail....

Mandela thanked Congress for its "priceless gift" of support over the years that he said had given the ANC "the inspiration to stand on our feet and fight back" against Pretoria's apartheid system....

But he said the ANC faces "the most crucial years" and badly needs financial support from Congress to reestablish itself inside South Africa now that it is no longer required to operate out of its exile headquarters here....

Thabo Mbeki, the ANC foreign affairs secretary, said he heard that President Bush was considering sending Quayle to South Africa after the Vice President attends independence celebrations in neighboring Namibia March 21. "We would consider such a visit ill-timed, premature," Mbeki said.

Mbeki asked the congressmen to use their influence with the White House to get the trip cancelled. He also urged them to try to block any attempt by the Bush Administration to change the IMF's ban on loans for South Africa. (David Ottaway, Washington Post, A25)

CHINA TO REVIVE FULBRIGHT EXCHANGES

BEIJING -- China and the U.S. have agreed in principle to resume Fulbright scholar exchanges, which were disrupted by Beijing after Washington imposed sanctions on China last year, academic specialists said Thursday.

The sources said the agreement is expected to be announced within a few days.

Meanwhile, members of an organization promoting U.S.-China exchanges from the state of Washington reported agreement here on what would be the largest U.S.-Chinese trade conference, to be held in Seattle in October.

The agreements on the Fulbright program and the trade conference are two exceptions to the largely stagnant state of U.S. relations with China....

A U.S. official said recently that relations are expected to deteriorate further in the coming months over human rights and economic issues. (Daniel Southerland, Washington Post, A25)

WORLD OUTPUT OF NARCOTICS SOARS, CONGRESS TOLD
Annual State Department Report Notes Undermining
Of Law Enforcement Efforts

Worldwide production of coca, marijuana and opium soared to record levels last year and drug traffickers undermined U.S.-backed law enforcement efforts by corrupting police and other officials in a growing number of countries, according to an annual State Department narcotics report released Thursday....

"It's becoming very difficult to convince the American people we're on the right track," said Rep. Lawrence Smith (D.-Fla.), chairman of the House Foreign Affairs task force on drugs during a hearing on the report. "It seems to me, notwithstanding every single effort we have made, we are slipping backward."

But Melvyn Levitsky, assistant secretary of state for international narcotics affairs, said the report showed a "mixed" picture that included a number of successes, most notably the disruption of the powerful Medellin cocaine cartel. "No country has a perfect record and no country has a completely bad record," he said. (Michael Isikoff, Washington Post, A24)

Network News Summary for Thursday Evening, March 1

CLEAN AIR COMPROMISE

ABC's PETER JENNINGS: We begin tonight with the air that one out of every two Americans breathes every day -- bad air, unhealthy air. In Washington today, the Bush Administration and the leadership in the Senate compromised on a new Clean Air Act. There hasn't been a new act since 1977. There's never been a truly effective one. Given the pressure from industry, the politicians said once again today that a compromise was the best they could do. George Bush, the Environmental President, didn't make many new environmentalist friends today.

ABC's SHEILAH KAST: Senate and White House negotiators met for weeks behind closed doors, often late into the night.

Democratic leader Mitchell was desperate to find a compromise that would save the Clean Air Bill from being talked to death by senators complaining about the cost. Today, negotiators said they found a way.

(SEN. MITCHELL: "The compromise bill is sound and comprehensive legislation that dramatically expands and strengthens the Clean Air law, and does it in the most cost-efficient manner possible.")

The proposal would force automakers to cut tailpipe emissions starting in 1993. But the compromise eliminated an automatic second round of emissions cuts 10 years later. To curb acid rain, the compromise would require Midwestern utilities to cut 10 million tons from their smokestack emissions. Those which cut more than required would get pollution allowances they could sell to utilities not meeting the standards. These compromises and others may have satisfied the Senate leadership, but they were attacked from all sides. Environmentalists were particularly outraged by what they considered the watered-down plan for auto emissions.

(SEN. WIRTH: "The second round to make automobiles cleaner was clearly vigorously opposed by Detroit, and they won.")

On the other side, senators from coal-producing states say the expense of reducing smokestack emissions will mean job losses and higher utility rates. There will be intense floor fights. But Mitchell and his negotiating colleagues believe they have raised the chances a new Clean Air Bill will be passed.

JENNINGS: It may be only coincidence, but when the Clean Air compromise was reached in Washington, President Bush was in Los Angeles, where every two out of three days the air fails to meet the federal clean air standards.

ABC's BRIT HUME: The President's Clean Air Bill is the centerpiece of his environmental program.

(TV Coverage: President Bush, Chief of Staff Sununu walking toward reporters.)

But the White House was worried that the Senate version of the bill would prove so expensive the President would have to oppose it. So he was both pleased and relieved at the compromise.

(PRESIDENT BUSH: "It's a very big, forward step, and I am very proud of the team, in the Congress and in the Administration, that achieved these results.")

HUME's report continues:

Mr. Bush dismissed the criticisms of environmental groups who had accused the Administration of weakening the legislation.

(PRESIDENT BUSH: "Look, I've learned something. You're never going to keep the extremes happy. I'm not going to shut down this country. But I am going to help clean up the air.")

He also brushed aside media reports, including one last night on this broadcast of a high-level split on the environment pitting Chief of Staff Sununu, among others, against EPA Administrator Reilly.

(PRESIDENT BUSH: "Our EPA chief is doing a great job, my Chief of Staff is doing a great job, and, you know, this always trying to get on the inside baseball stuff; the American people are not interested in that.")

The President would prefer to present the public a united front, like the one he and his predecessor displayed at a photo-opportunity this afternoon.

(TV Coverage: President Bush, former President Reagan seated together.)

But the conflicts within the Administration over the environment are likely to continue. That's because cleanup efforts cost money, which the Administration thinks it also needs for such things as the deficit, the drug war, and, yes, defense. (ABC-Lead)

NBC's TOM BROKAW: No environmental issue affects more of us than air pollution: how we live, how we get from one place to another, where we work. So, whenever someone tries to do something about air pollution, we're all affected in one way or another. Well, tonight the Senate and the White House have struck what they believe is a breakthrough agreement on a new Clean Air Bill, one of the most important environmental struggles of the year.

NBC's HENRY CHAMP: Senators and Administration officials were lavish with self-praise that after three and a half weeks of closed-door meetings they had a compromise Clean Air Bill.

(SEN. MITCHELL: "We will press forward for the earliest possible enactment of what I believe will be landmark environmental legislation.")

And there was praise from the President, traveling in California.

(PRESIDENT BUSH: "It's a very big, forward step, and I am very proud of the team, in the Congress and in the Administration, that achieved these results.")

The sweeping bill attacks smokestack pollution, acid rain caused by power plants, automobile pollution, and toxic chemical release. It would require the use of alternate fuels in smog-hidden cities. The two sticking points were acid rain and auto emissions. The compromise eased a financial burden on Midwest utilities who would spend the most on acid-rain cleanup, and auto manufacturers won weaker emission standards. Even before the press conference ended there were signs of unraveling. Sen. Byrd, from coal-producing West Virginia, was determined to protect jobs that will be lost as the new laws attack high-sulfur coal production.

(SEN. BYRD: "I'm not a signatory. I'm still concerned about job losses and economic dislocation.")

Sen. Lautenberg said he can't vote for a Clean Air Bill that is no improvement on current standards.

(SEN. LAUTENBERG: "The President said he wanted to be an Environmental President. He said it on the shores of New Jersey. But what I saw in these days of discussion and negotiation was 'just say no.'")

CHAMP continues: And environmental groups were disappointed with the fight against big-city smog.

(WILLIAM AYRES, Clean Air Coalition: "We could be in a position in the year 2010 where air pollution emissions from cars were just as high as they are today.")

There has been no new Clean Air legislation for 13 years. This new compromise bill will face a tough fight in the Senate that will have to be fought all over again in the House before it becomes law. (NBC-Lead)

CLEAN AIR

CBS's LINDA TAIRA reports on the clean air agreement.

(SEN. MITCHELL: "Under this agreement, there will be significant improvement in the quality of the American air, a requirement far more comprehensive and stringent than under current law.")

(EPA ADMINISTRATOR REILLY: "The long stalemate that has characterized the clean air debate throughout most of the last 10 years has been broken.")

Critics fumed the Administration could have tried even harder.

(SEN. LAUTENBERG: "What I saw in these days of discussion and negotiation was: Just say no.")

Environmentalists claimed the President tried to weaken the clean air effort by catering to business and industry.

(RICHARD AYRES, National Clean Air Coalition: "We have a very popular President spending his popularity on behalf of the polluters.")

(PRESIDENT BUSH: "I say they're crazy. I say they're wrong. You can't play to the extremes.") (CBS-7)

OFFSHORE DRILLING

NBC's DON OLIVER: President Bush is under increasing pressure to announce his long-awaited plans for offshore oil drilling. In California today, he did not discuss the subject, but the delay has created a battle within his Administration. The Department of Commerce wants Monterey Bay declared an ocean sanctuary, off-limits to oil and gas exploration.

(BRIAN GORMAN, Commerce Department: "The Monterey Sanctuary is indeed special. Geologically and oceanographically, it's an unusual area indeed.")

But the Energy and Interior Departments, which are more pro-development, have managed to hold up the sanctuary plan.

(DAVID O'NEAL, Interior Dept.: "We're waiting for the President to make his announcements about his policy on the outer continental shelf development.")

After 13 years of wrangling, environmentalists in Congress thought they had a deal to protect Monterey Bay as an ocean sanctuary. The oil industry has lobbied the Bush Administration, urging that certain portions of Monterey Bay be excluded from the sanctuary proposal. Environmentalists fear one area of interest is near beaches where rare elephant seals mate and give birth. They say prevailing currents could carry spilled oil to this area. Scientists and politicians believe oil or gas production would be a threat to the underwater life.

(REP. PANETTA: "Mr. President, if the Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary is not sensitive, then what is?")

The delays have set the sanctuary plans back at least six months. (NBC-2)

ENVIRONMENT/HOLLYWOOD

ABC's BARRY SERAFIN reports that environmentalism on all kinds of issues is sweeping Hollywood. Behind the scenes, a Hollywood group called EMA, the Environmental Media Association, flew in EPA officials to tell cast members, writers and producers about real-life cases, like one involving the dumping of hazardous chemicals.

(JAMES STROCK, EPA Assistant Administrator: "A toxic cloud is what emerged from this, a literal toxic cloud.")

GIL GERARD, Actor: "How would you deal with that toxic cloud, and what type of people would you send in?"

STROCK: "You may well have to have federal people come in, EPA people, even the moonsuit, the famous moonsuit, to come in and work their way into it.")

The celebrities say the entertainment is in the environmental battle to stay. (ABC-12)

SEABROOK

RATHER reports the Seabrook nuclear power plant was granted a federal license to generate commercial electricity. But the political chain reaction is already underway with demonstrations at the facility today and opponents promising a court fight to keep Seabrook from ever starting up its reactors. (NBC-3, CBS-8)

LEBANON/HOSTAGES

CBS's DAN RATHER: President Bush insisted today he will do everything he can to win the release of American hostages in Lebanon, but he flatly denied a series of unconfirmed reports that he and his Administration are once again involved in secret talks trying to deal with Iran. Mr. Bush called the reports -- quote -- "ridiculous." Lesley Stahl is traveling with the politically-campaigning Mr. Bush in California.

CBS's LESLEY STAHL: It was a flat-out, unequivocal denial by the President. (PRESIDENT BUSH to reporters: "I don't spend a day that I don't think about the hostages, but there are no secret talks going on.")

But Mr. Bush sent a strong signal that he is willing, if not eager, to hold such talks.

(PRESIDENT: "If I thought a talk in Geneva would result in letting people go free, I would undertake the talks. And if I thought the way to conduct that talk was to do it quietly, I would do it in that manner. If I thought the best way to get the hostages out were to publicly have talks in Geneva, I would do that.")

It was ironic that the subject came up on the same day Mr. Bush visited former President Reagan, whose own secret dealings with Iran led to the arms-for-hostages scandal.

(TV Coverage: President Bush meeting with the former president.)

Eight Americans are still in captivity, including the longest held: AP reporter Terry Anderson, taken in Lebanon nearly five years ago. His sister, Peggy Say, returned today from a trip to Syria with new hopes that her brother and the others will be released soon.

(PEGGY SAY: "I was reassured, traveling through Europe and the Middle East and Africa, that my government is doing what it should be doing in a positive way to bring this to an end.")

STAHL continues: Just last week, the influential Lebanese Shiite leader, Sheikh Fadlallah, and Iranian President Rafsanjani both called for the closing of the file of the hostages. Bush Administration officials admit they've been engaged in a broad diplomatic effort to pressure Iran through third parties, mainly heads of Middle Eastern states. If there is any movement, a more likely reason is the collapse of Communism in Eastern Europe, which used to fund and sponsor radical elements in the Mideast. The Administration is anxious to dampen any new wave of optimism. They say they've had no sign of an imminent hostage release. (CBS-Lead)

BROKAW reports a senior Administration official tells NBC that Syria's foreign minister will travel to Iran in a few days to press for the release of the hostages. The source says Syria appears to be sincere and serious in this effort. For his part, President Bush denied reports that secret talks are underway between this country and Iran. (NBC-9)

MIDEAST/BAKER

RATHER reports Secretary Baker said the U.S. has done all it can in the Mideast peace process and the next move is up to Israel. Israel's top ministers are due to meet tomorrow in response to a U.S. plan for peace talks with the Palestinians. Baker also told Congress he could support cuts in U.S. aid to Israel and Egypt if other countries take similar cuts so that money can be shipped into emerging democracies. (CBS-2)

SOVIET MILITARY

CBS's DAVID MARTIN: Even if Mikhail Gorbachev were ousted by hardliners in the Kremlin, the Soviet Union would be unlikely to revert to its old Cold War ways. That's what the nation's chief intelligence officer told the House Armed Services Committee.

(CIA DIRECTOR WEBSTER: "Even if a hardline regime were able to retain power in Moscow, it would have little incentive to engage in major confrontations with the United States. New leaders would be largely preoccupied with the country's urgent domestic problems and would be unlikely to indulge in a major military buildup.")

(REP. ASPIN: "I think this is a really significant statement. It's a significant statement because I think it's going to have a fundamental effect on the defense debate, not just this year but in the years coming ahead.")

Webster's testimony, which represents not just his opinion but that of the entire intelligence community, undercuts one of the principal arguments used over and over by Secretary Cheney to justify going slow in cutting defense -- namely that Gorbachev's new thinking may not be forever. Just today, for instance, in a statement prepared for a House committee, Cheney said, "We cannot rule out the possibility that a future leadership in the Soviet Union could reverse military course decisively."

(ASPIN: "It's really a fundamental difference between what we're hearing in the Pentagon and what we're hearing here from the Director of Central Intelligence. I don't think they're doing a very good job in the Pentagon, really, of keeping up with what's going on.")

The Defense Department, of course, must always plan for the worst case. But if Cheney continues to plan for threats which the CIA says are unlikely, he may have an increasingly hard time defending the Pentagon budget and his own credibility on Capitol Hill. (CBS-4)

NICARAGUA

BROKAW reports there is an unexpected development tonight: In Northern Nicaragua, soldiers have begun to desert the army.

BROKAW interviews DANIEL ORTEGA about whether the Sandinistas will give up control of the army to the new government:

ORTEGA: When she becomes president of this country, she will have all of the powers established by law. But there is no doubt that the situation of the safety and security of the citizens and the country will also be determined by the attitude assumed by the contras. We have called and Mrs. Chamorro has called upon the United States to immediately demobilize and disarm the contras. The contras have no reason to exist any longer. So we will reach April 25th under more favorable conditions.

BROKAW: But if the contras do not disband by the time of her swearing-in ceremony, will the Sandinista party give up control of the army?

ORTEGA: It is that the army is not under the control of the Sandinista party. The army defends national interests, the interests of the people, and the security of all citizens.

BROKAW: Were you stunned by the size of your defeat?

ORTEGA: Since we decided to have elections, we knew we were running the risk of losing them. Now the people had to vote with a gun pointing at their head, which was the policy of the United States government. And the people were told, well, if you vote for the Sandinista Front you're going to get an embargo and war. But we stood up to the challenge under these unfavorable conditions. (NBC-8)

DRUGS/STATE DEPT.

JENNINGS: There was a gloomy assessment today from the State Department on the world drug trade. The report says worldwide production of illegal drugs reached record levels last year, and it says efforts to stop smuggling were hindered by corruption in a number of countries in Southeast Asia, Latin America and the Middle East. (ABC-3)

DRUGS/NEW HAMPSHIRE POLICE

ABC's JOE BERGANTINO reports that when state troopers in New Hampshire stop a motorist and suspect he might be a drug user, they take his license and chemically analyze it, looking for traces of cocaine on the assumption that drug users often use the hard edge of their licenses to divide cocaine into lines for snorting. If troopers get a positive chemical reaction they search the car, and only if drugs are found is anyone arrested. However, many substances, including Solarcaine and common cold remedies, can cause the same chemical reaction. Only a second test in a laboratory can confirm the presence of cocaine. The roadside testing is being challenged in court as being too unreliable. (ABC-4)

TRADE SUMMIT

JENNINGS: There is a lot of attention being paid this week to what is being called the Trade Summit. It will take place tomorrow and Saturday in California between President Bush and Japanese Prime Minister Kaifu. We've asked two of our correspondents, ABC's BILL GREENWOOD and ABC's BILL REDEKER, to lay out what it is that each country would really like the talks to accomplish.

GREENWOOD reports that many Americans see only one answer:

(BILL BROCK, former U.S. Trade Rep.: "The Japanese do have to open up their market. The question is, do Japanese really prefer to buy Japanese? It's almost unpatriotic to buy an imported finished good.")

What President Bush will ask for is a fundamental change in the way Japan does business; an end to monopolies that would be illegal in this country; new standards to give American products equal access to Japan's distribution center; and lower tariffs to make the price of U.S. products more competitive. But many in Congress say it will take more than new talks to change the old traditions.

(SEN. BAUCUS: "Countries do not open up on their own. It takes a little outside pressure, a little outside extra urging, before a country does open up.")

The Senate Finance Committee met today to consider sanctions against Japan. But a letter from Trade Representative Hills prompted a delay. She's negotiating on behalf of the U.S. lumber, space and supercomputer industries. If Japan does not agree to new trade policies by mid-June, Congress was told the Administration is prepared to impose sanctions on its own. (ABC-6)

REDEKER reports that what Japan wants is for Americans to stop blaming Japan for problems only the U.S. can correct. In the last two years, the Japanese point out, American exports to Japan have risen 53 percent, and the trade deficit has declined 13 percent, proving that Japanese trade barriers are coming down. To make real progress on the trade deficit, Japan wants U.S. business to copy the Japanese practice of investing profits in new equipment and facilities. Twenty percent of Japan's GNP is reinvested; America invests only about half that amount. And Japan recommends Americans be thrifty, like they are. They save 15 percent of their earnings compared to 4 percent in the U.S.

(MAKOTO KURODA, Japanese Economic Foundation: "If we are being blamed as if we are responsible for the U.S. deficit, we simply respond that no, it is not our making. That is your making.")

The Japanese are eager to resolve the trade dispute. If not, they fear an all-out trade war could erupt, damaging both economies. (ABC-7)

S. AFRICAN SANCTIONS

BROKAW reports there was a forceful message from Nelson Mandela to 10 members of the U.S. Congress today. Mandela told the delegation the U.S. must continue its economic sanctions against South Africa despite recent reforms. He called the sanctions a tremendous achievement. (NBC-10)

JENNINGS reports a South African newspaper reported today that despite the economic sanctions which all of black Africa has championed, there are trade ties between the South Africans and almost every black nation -- about $2 billion in trade a year. (ABC-8)

HEALTH INSURANCE

CBS's SUSAN SPENCER reports the controversial plan the Pepper Commission will vote on tomorrow is a $66.2 billion package which would transform health care coverage in this country. The proposals deal both with long-term care and health insurance for the 37 million Americans without it. The plan would require that within three years all businesses with more than 100 employees provide health care coverage. Smaller businesses would be phased in more gradually with tax incentives to offset costs. Medicaid would become a program of the past, merged into a new public program with broader coverage and tighter cost containment. The package would also provide coverage for everyone for the first three months spent in a nursing home. After that, there are provisions to protect people from having to sell all their assets to pay. And the plan would establish a new program to care for the severely disabled at home. That too would be universal. Despite its appeal, some commission members say the plan hasn't a prayer without White House support.

(REP. STARK: "The President's instructed the Republicans not to support the plan because it would have to have taxes. And if you're not going to have a plan that pays for these benefits, you're not going to have a plan.") Supporters will argue tomorrow that for most Americans health care today is an urgent concern and that it must have priority. (CBS-6)

CHILD LABOR

NBC's ANDREA MITCHELL reports from Florida that children of farm workers miss more school and have a higher dropout rate than any other group. Their parents leave them in the orange groves to earn a fraction of the minimum wage. The problem is getting worse in most farm states. Last year there were five times as many violations of federal child labor laws as a decade ago. Child labor advocates say that's because inspections were cut back dramatically during the Reagan years. Federal law says children are not supposed to work on farm equipment or with chemicals. People in the field say those hazards are present every day. Farm children have the worst injury rate of all American workers, and very high disease and mortality rates. The Labor Department will not add more inspectors to back up promises of tougher enforcement. Asked about the situation, the department says it will launch a public awareness campaign, videos and public service announcements.

(WILLIAM BROOKS, Assistant Secretary of Labor: "I'm not sure exactly the specifics, but our vision is that we're going to let the public know what child labor laws are about.")

In California, where farm labor activists won much tougher laws to protect children than the federal government requires, growers say the added restrictions have not hurt business. There is little pressure in other states to fill the vacuum left by the lack of federal enforcement.

(NBC-12)

ABORTION

ABC's JOHN MARTIN reports that abortion opponents are concentrating on four states in trying to pass laws which will be challenged in the Supreme Court, possibly leading to the overturning of Roe v. Wade. In Utah, legislators kept the bill from a vote, discussing it informally behind closed doors. In Alabama, a similar bill is facing a filibuster from lawmakers who do not want to take a public stand.

White House News Summary -- Friday, March 2, 1990 -- B-9

MARTIN continues: In Idaho, the House is supposed to vote next week on a similar bill. The Governor, who supports restrictions, refuses to say whether he will sign it. Last night in Minnesota, the senate health committee defeated the bill in a tie vote. What both sides of the abortion debate want is for all four states to force legislators to stand and be counted on the issue so they can be targeted for defeat. What the legislators want is to be left alone. (ABC-10)

CALIF. QUAKE

BROKAW reports that today, dozens of aftershocks after yesterday's 5.5 earthquake rumbled through southern California. Damage is expected to run the tens of millions of dollars. (NBC-4)

CENSUS/COUNTING HOMELESS

CBS's BRUCE MORTON reports the Census Bureau says it wants to count the homeless, but some homeless advocates say it doesn't. The census will count people living in shelters, and will visit some places where the homeless sleep, but will the census takers find the people in the shadows? No one knows how many shadow people there are. (CBS-12)

U.S. MEDIAN AGE

JENNINGS reports that the Census Bureau reports there are now 79 million Baby Boomers, and that's pushed up the median age in the U.S. from 30 ten years ago to about 32 today. (ABC-5)

EASTERN STRIKE

JENNINGS reports that a bankruptcy judge has ruled that Texas Air, Eastern Airline's parent company, unfairly drained assets from Eastern without paying full value. Texas Air will now pay Eastern $280 million.

ABC's JOHN MCKENZIE reports that when Eastern machinists went on strike, pilots and flight attendants walked out in sympathy, vowing to bring Eastern to a halt and Frank Lorenzo to his knees. They haven't. Today, the airline has restored almost 80 percent of its flights and hired non-union replacements to maintain and fly the planes. Now, only the machinists remain on strike, and many have had to start whole new jobs under much lower pay. (ABC-2)

SHUTTLE ATLANTIS

RATHER reports the crew of Atlantis reportedly deployed the latest in a series of new and expensive spy satellites to watch over the Soviet Union. This one satellite alone cost almost $1 billion. (CBS-3)

News From the Hill

SENATE FLOOR: Community service bill approved.

The Senate late yesterday passed, 78-19, a bill (S 1430) that would establish a national program for volunteer community service.

S 1430, sponsored by Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., would authorize $125 million in fiscal 1991 to provide living allowances, vouchers and health insurance as incentives for people to perform volunteer community services.

The funds would be allocated through block grants and would be used to develop volunteer programs in schools and colleges. A "Points of Light Initiative Foundation" would also be established to encourage more volunteerism.

Final passage of the bill was delayed by heated debate over a "sense of the Senate" amendment by Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., to salute Violeta Chamorro's recent election as president of Nicaragua and to call for the Sandinistas to relinquish all political power.

Wallop finally pulled the amendment but said he would try to pass similar legislation next week.

Neither the House nor the Senate will be in session today.

CLEAN AIR negotiations yield compromise in Senate.

Senate leaders reached agreement with the White House yesterday on a new version of clean air legislation. The compromise is designed to address criticism by the White House and some senators that the bill (S 1630) before the Senate is too costly for U.S. industries to implement.

Majority Leader George J. Mitchell, D-Maine, said in a statement yesterday the agreement encompassed "virtually all of the major areas of the act."

Overall, the compromise weakens some of S 1630's toughest controls on smog, auto emissions and toxic air pollution. But the agreement does include a second round of motor vehicle curbs that had been opposed by the administration and a program to require the use of alternative, cleaner fuels in the nation's most polluted cities, not in S 1630.

The compromise bill will be offered as a substitute when the Senate resumes action on S 1630, now slated for Monday.

CARIBBEAN BASIN initiative moves to Senate floor.

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday approved, by voice vote, a permanent extension of the Caribbean Basin Initiative without resolving disagreements on sugar and certain other goods now denied the initiative's benefits.

Finance Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, repeatedly resisted attempts to load the bill (S 504) with provisions — such as an overall quota for sugar imports — that might prevent its reaching the floor under a unanimous consent agreement.

The committee also did not take up legislation by Max Baucus, D-Mont., intended to accelerate and toughen trade retaliation against Japan for its restrictions on imported wood products.

Citing a letter he had received from U.S. Trade Representative Carla A. Hills assuring him that U.S. negotiators would give wood products greater emphasis in continued negotiations, Baucus said he would hold off on offering his measure.

The committee also passed by voice vote an amendment to 1974 restrictions on trade with communist countries, known as Jackson-Vanik.

The Jackson-Vanik law denies normal trade status, called "most favored nation" status, to countries restricting emigration.

The amendment makes a technical correction requiring a joint resolution rather than a concurrent resolution for approving the extension of most-favored-nation status.

A joint resolution would also be required for disapproving a presidential waiver of Jackson-Vanik.

The technical corrections are designed to cure any possible constitutional obstacles to waiving the Jackson-Vanik law.

CLEAN AIR research programs win subcommittee's approval.

The House Science Natural Resources Subcommittee yesterday approved draft legislation authorizing more than $100 million annually for clean air research projects.

Subcommittee members approved amendments authorizing research in the reduction of carbon dioxide emissions from motor vehicles and in pollution from tire incinerators.

The full committee plans to mark up the measure next Wednesday. House leaders eventually intend to combine the research measure with the comprehensive overhaul (HR 3030) of the Clean Air Act.

The subcommittee delayed action until next Thursday on HR 1530, which would authorize a national program to improve indoor air quality.

JUDICIAL IMMUNITY bill approved by Senate subcommittee.

The Senate Judiciary Courts Subcommittee yesterday approved a bill (S 590) that would give state and federal judges immunity from being sued by anyone who disagreed with a judge's ruling.

Approved by voice vote, the measure would reverse a 1984 Supreme Court decision upholding the claim of a Virginia plaintiff who sued a magistrate for alleged violations of the Civil Rights Act.

The judiciary subcommittee also approved, by voice vote, a bill (S 982) that would allow radiation victims to sue government contractors involved in atomic weapons testing.

OIL SHALE claims bill still unresolved in Senate Energy.

The Senate Energy Committee tried but failed once again to mark up an oil shale lands claims bill (S 30) yesterday.

Committee Chairman J. Bennett Johnston, D-La., told the two senators who hold opposing views on the measure — ranking Republican James A. McClure, Idaho, and Tim Wirth, D-Colo. — to reach a compromise on the bill and present the committee with a substitute to be marked up next Wednesday.

S 30 would set out procedures for resolving claims to more than 250,000 acres of federal oil shale land in three Western states. The Interior Department set off a furor in 1986 when it transferred limited title to 82,000 acres of the oil shale land to claimants for $2.50 an acre, some of which was resold to major oil companies for millions of dollars.

The measure, sponsored by Wirth, would cut off eligibility for claiming title to the land as of Jan. 25, 1989, the date the measure was introduced.

Critics of the measure, mostly Western Republicans such as McClure, argue that governmental denial of a claimant's right to the land would prompt additional court suits. Marathon Oil Co. sued the Interior Department Oct. 19 in the U.S. District Court in Colorado for holding up the processing of the oil shale claims.

FOUR NATIONS miss State Department anti-drug certification.

Iran, Syria, Burma and Afghanistan failed to win State Department certification that they have fully cooperated with U.S. drug-fighting efforts, according to a department report released to a House narcotics panel yesterday.

Countries must earn the certification in order to receive their full share of U.S. foreign aid. Those who fail to gain it will lose half their U.S. foreign aid.

The State Department certified 20 of 24 nations it examined for its International Narcotics Control Strategy Report, the committee said. Lebanon was not certified, but the department decided to waive certification and continue providing foreign aid to that country for national security reasons.

Congress has 45 legislative days to pass legislation disapproving the certification list.

FOREIGN AFFAIRS Committee seeks $2 billion more in foreign aid.

The House Foreign Affairs Committee yesterday suggested that President Bush's proposal for foreign aid programs be increased by $2 billion in fiscal 1991.

Bush has proposed a foreign aid budget of $18.8 billion, but Chairman Dante B. Fascell, D-Fla., said that should be increased to $20.8 billion.

In a letter to the House Budget Committee, Fascell said that the increased amount would be needed to extend foreign aid to Eastern Europe, Panama, Nicaragua and other potential emerging democracies. He also said that the United States would have other expenditures in fiscal 1991, such as contributing to U.N. peace-keeping programs.

The increase for foreign aid for new democracies is also seen as an effort to prevent reductions in aid to major U.S. allies, such as Israel, Egypt and Pakistan.

SKINNER DEFENDS DOT budget before Senate panel.

Transportation Secretary Samuel K. Skinner drew laudatory personal comments from a Senate Appropriations subcommittee yesterday but heard criticism of the administration's proposals to trim expenditures for Amtrak and mass transit systems.

Skinner won praise for the department's tough airline safety rules and highway and vehicle research projects.

The administration's fiscal 1991 budget proposal would raise the Transportation Department's budget by 8.9 percent, to $26.6 billion. However, it also calls for a reduction of $1.2 billion in subsidies to Amtrak and mass transit systems in cities with one million or more in population.

Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., chairman of the Transportation Subcommittee, told Skinner that he had performed well in his first year as transportation secretary but was "disappointed" with proposed budget cuts for Amtrak and mass transit systems.

Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., said Amtrak serves 36 percent of the passengers in the New York-Washington corridor and needs additional support to increase its ridership even more.

But Skinner argued that local and state governments should be encouraged to take more responsibility for developing and building transportation systems, instead of relying on the federal government.

BAKER URGES end to foreign aid earmarks by Congress.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III pressed Congress yesterday to stop earmarking foreign assistance funds, saying that better management and accountability are needed to maintain a sound U.S. foreign policy.

Calling for "a new code of conduct" on foreign aid, Baker told the House Appropriations Foreign Operations Subcommittee that congressional earmarks for various countries should be eliminated or cut across the board.

In recent years, Congress has earmarked — set funds aside for specific countries — about 80 percent of two major military and economic aid programs, leaving the administration with little flexibility in determining where the aid should go.

Doing away with earmarks would be more fair than Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole's, R-Kan., proposal to cut aid to Israel and four other major U.S. aid recipients to provide more aid to Eastern Europe, Baker said.

Subcommittee Chairman David R. Obey, D-Wis., said, "I don't think you are going to see Congress give up its right to make judgments on its own."

He suggested that the administration cut funds for military bases in Portugal, Greece and Turkey, in light of the realignment of the Warsaw Pact governments.

WEBSTER SEES little chance for reversal of European upheaval.

The wave of democratic reform sweeping Eastern Europe is probably irreversible even if Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev were overthrown, CIA Director William H. Webster told the House Armed Services Committee yesterday.

"As these upheavals continue to gain momentum they will be progressively more difficult to suppress," Webster told the panel. "In fact, the changes are probably already irreversible in several critical respects."

Webster said there was little chance the Soviet Union could resume its domination of Eastern Europe now that its Marxist-Leninist ideology had been rejected in favor of moves in those countries toward democracy and free market economies.

Webster said these factors had significantly reduced the military threat to the United States and its NATO allies.

Clarification: In testimony to a task force of the House Banking Committee Feb. 28, Treasury Under Secretary David C. Mulford spoke in reference to a Senate measure (S 2028) that would institute a system of "reciprocal national treatment" for foreign banks operating in the United States.

This concept, which has been adopted by the 12-nation European Community to take effect at the end of 1992, differs significantly from the usual connotation of "reciprocity," in which a country treats foreign banks in the same way that its banks are treated abroad.

Under "reciprocal national treatment," a foreign country's banks would be granted the same powers as domestic banks — national treatment — provided that the foreign country likewise afforded national treatment to all banks, foreign and domestic.

The Monitor incorrectly reported that Mulford indicated that the United States was considering an endorsement of "reciprocity." Rather, Mulford said a policy of "reciprocal national treatment" might provide leverage in negotiations with countries, such as Japan, whose practices are deemed not to constitute national treatment. ■

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

March 2, 1990

Dear Stephen:

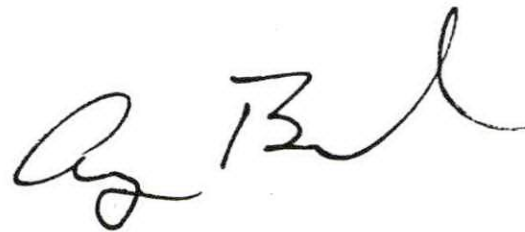

Thanks so much for that very thoughtful letter of February 22 which I just received and read today.

I am enclosing copies of letters that were sent to your sister Melanie and your father a few days ago. I think they say it all.

Please know that I appreciate your writing to me directly about this most distressing matter.

Barbara joins me in sending our warmest best wishes,

Most sincerely,

Mr. Stephen D. Strake

The Honorable George H. W. Bush
President of the United States
The White House
Washington D. C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

I am writing this letter to express my sentiments concerning an article that was published on the front page of The Houston Chronicle today entitled "Bush draws reigns on summit here". This article was quite disheartening to me, primarily due to the fact that it concerned your feelings toward George W. Strake Jr. and his ability to chair the international economic summit which you so graciously chose to be in our hometown of Houston. My main reason for being upset is that he has worked his heart out for you and the Republican party and secondly, he just happens to be my Dad. The question of politics should not be a factor here, and unfortunately it seems to be a major issue.

You and my Dad come from similar backgrounds, both grew up in the oil business, both have been dedicated to the good of the Republican Party of Texas and the United States of America and both are devoted to family and God. He is a tireless worker and a proven leader, as evidenced by his chairmanship of the Republican Party of Texas. I can honestly say that you will not be "embarrassed" by your choice to have him as chairman of the economic summit. Your addition of Mr. Kenneth Lay as co-chairman of the event was an excellent decision. My Dad and Mr. Lay are working well together and I am sure they will each contribute to the success of the summit.

On July 12, 1990, I am assured that you will set aside these feelings because we will all be proud to hold our heads high for Houston, the United States and most importantly our feelings towards our fellow man.

Sincerely,

Stephen D. Strake

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

February 28, 1990

Dear Melanie:

Thank you for your heartfelt letter of February 22.

I was distressed when I saw that mischevious story in the Chronicle. Your Dad and I have had differences in the political arena. I guess the major difference was the importance, or lack of importance, of the regional primary. He expressed his opinion to me, and I have expressed mine to him. And, sure, as a Texan running for the Presidency, I would love to have had his endorsement, but I understood his position perfectly.

But the main point, Melanie, is that your Dad and I have something in common that overrides these minor differences. Neither of us bears grudges.

I have been in the political arena for a long time, and I hate it when a good man gets hurt. Believe me, I would not do anything to hurt your Father, nor would I permit anyone around me to do that.

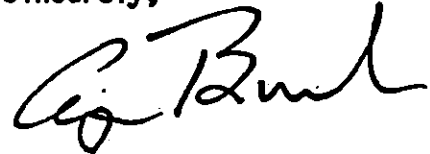

As I understand it, your Dad is continuing to do that which Kathy Whitmire asked him to do. And further, I understand he is working closely with Fred Malek and Ken Lay -- people that the U.S. Government asked to get involved in this very important Economic Summit. I am delighted your Dad is helping, and I regret very much that horrible story.

One of the bad things about politics is that ugly things are often written about good people (if you don't believe me, read "Doonesbury!").

I wrote the enclosed letter to your Dad, Melanie, and I can't tell you how much I appreciate your rising to his defense and weighing in with me personally -- from the heart -- as you did.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in cursive script, appearing to read "Geo Bush".

P.S. I have tried to find the nameless White House staffer who talked to the Chronicle, But I have learned over 25 years in politics that that hunt will probably be fruitless. Let me just say that whoever spoke to the Chronicle was not speaking for me.

President George Herbert Walker Bush
United States of America
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

This morning, as I was reading the morning edition of the Houston Chronicle, I came across the main headline/article on the front page. It was very disheartening! I am one of George Strake's three daughters and, thus I knew the story concerning your recent decision with the Summit Host Committee before it became headline news.

As you very well know, family is first and that is exactly why I feel compelled to write you this letter. I realize from my experience with politics, that it is highly unlikely you will ever actually read this letter.

Mr. President, I would think you would have understood and agreed with my father's decision not to endorse anyone for the 1988 Republican Presidential Primary. As you know, at that time, Texans were still getting used to idea of having unity and momentum in the Republican Party. In his position as State Chairman, it could have been detrimental to endorse any candidate before the primary.

Sir, believe me, my father has always supported you and respected you and he will indeed be a tremendous asset to you and this country as co-chairmman of the 1990 Summit Host Committee. One quote in the article reads that you wanted "one of your own" involved with the Host Committee. I find it unfortunate and wrong that you did not already see that in George W. Strake, Jr.

He has given much of his life, just as you have, to this country. It seems truly unjust to go to the extent which you and your staff have gone to against my father's behalf.

Houston looks forward to the Summit with great anticipation and we thank you for your decision to bring it here. In retrospect, George Strake has a very strong following in this community. He is a man of character, strength and honesty and I truly believe the article, ironically and unknowingly, sheds light on all of those qualities.

February 22, 1990

I felt it important to write these words to you. I do hope it finds it's way into your hands somehow. Dad has always told all of us, from the very day he first ventured into politics, to have a short memory and a tough hide. I certainly believe these are words for all of us to live by!

Sincerely,

Melanie S. Meeks

Dear George:

I received the most wonderful letter from your Melanie. I wrote her the attached. It says it all from my end, except I want you to know how deeply offended and angry I was when I read the Chronicle story. You are a good man, and if I have inadvertently caused hurt to you in any way, I sincerely apologize.

My warm best wishes.

Sincerely,

Secret Service Fires on Man After He Parachutes Near President's Hotel

By MICHAEL FLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

(LOS ANGELES AP) A Secret Service agent opened fire on a sky diver who parachuted into the parking lot of President George Bush's hotel and sped away in a car, police said.

Bush was staying at the Century Plaza Hotel during the Thursday morning episode that ended with the arrest of Charles Sweeney, 47, of Santa Clarita.

Sweeney, arrested at his home hours after the incident, was booked for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon on a law officer and freed on $3,000 bail, said police Lt. Al Moen.

Police and the Secret Service wouldn't comment on what motivated the sky diver.

Sweeney did not immediately return a telephone call. The sky diver hopped from a 36-story building under construction near the hotel about 6 a.m., said across the street and landed in the hotel parking lot, Moen said.

A police officer on security detail for the president's stay saw Sweeney land and alerted other officers and Secret Service agents.

The parachutist then scooped up his parachute and ran to a waiting car, which he drove in circles at a high rate of speed, Moen said.

The driver passed near a Secret Service officer who opened fire. The lieutenant said.

"I don't know whether the car was hit or not," Moen said. The driver was not wounded.

A police cruiser tried to seal off the lot, Moen said, but it soon became apparent that he was closing in on the officer at a high rate so the officer accelerated out of the way and the suspect was able to get away.

Detectives tracked Sweeney to Santa Clarita, about 30 miles from downtown Los Angeles.

DEPARTURE FROM SANTA ANA BOWL THROUGH KAIFU ARRIVAL

March 2, 1990

Bush greeted the Japanese Prime Minister in a brisk, 10-minute arrival ceremony at Palm Springs Regional Airport. Kaifu flew into Los Angeles on a Japan Airline 747, then transferred to a U.S. Air Force C-9 for the trip to Palm Springs. The President, with an Asian-looking female interpreter, greeted Kaifu at the aircraft steps and then escorted him through a drawn-up 25-man U.S. Armed Forces Honor Guard. As the anthems of the two nations were played by an Air Force Band, Kaifu and Bush stood stiffly to attention. A Japanese flag flew in the brisk breeze to Bush's left; an American flag was to Kaifu's right. There were no speeches. When the anthems ended, Bush turned to Kaifu, smiling, and shook hands. Then the two leaders walked to the President's limousine. Before entering the car, Kaifu strode over the shake hands with Brent Scowcroft.

When Bush arrived, he was greeted by Palm Springs Mayor Sonny Bono; Bono and the President disappeared into the Business Air Terminal for the 10-minute wait for Kaifu.

The flight from Tustin Marine Corps Air Station to Palm Springs was uneventful. Fitzwater came back to say that he will telephone the Press Center with a readout after the first meeting ends at about 5:15 p.m. Questioned about a rumor that Kaifu would not hold a news conference following the meetings, Fitzwater replied, "We will. We're fearless."

Joining Bush in Los Angeles were Secretary of State Baker, Secretary of the Treasury Brady, Secretary of Commerce Mosbacher, and Special Trade Representative Hills. Mrs. Sununu also joined. Also onboard were Scowcroft and Sununu.

As he left the stage at the Santa Ana Bowl, Bush stopped very briefly to shake hands with some of the martial arts performers. There were no crowds around the motorcade route. One road crew did not even look up as the motorcade swept by, but the entire staff and most of the clientele of Chelsea's Cafe in Tustin rushed out to watch the procession go by.

POOL REPORT # 5

CENTURY CITY TO SANTA ANA

March 2, 1990

The bottom line: No Presidential words. Just Presidential movements. Motorcade from Century City to Santa Monica Airport uneventful, though a few shopkeepers came out to watch the motorcade. Helicopter ride to Tustin Marine Helicopter Air Station similarly uneventful, although a few good men and their families were on hand to welcome the President. Tumbling out of Marine One were, along with usual suspect, Marlin Fitzwater and Sig Rogich, Chief of Staff and Mrs. John Sununu. Motorcade to Santa Ana Bowl, which usually holds football and soccer matches, was also uneventful (could this be a trend?). On arrival at the Bowl, pooler Frank Sesno cornered Sununu and asked him if he had read the Wall Street Journal article about him. His reply, barely heard over the strains of the mariachi bands: "They're coming closer to my true metier." Private time at Santa Ana Bowl, Dave Demarest disclosed, was for photo sessions. Demarest was asked if he had approved the line in Bush's L.A. speech that "big busts won't be enough" to win the war against drugs. He first claimed this was a Bush ad lib. When your pool pointed out that it was in the advance text, he looked it up, laughed as if seeing the double entendre for the first time and said, "I guess so."

FROM PRISON THROUGH BUSH'S RETURN TO THE HOTEL AT 3:15 PM

Los Angeles, California

March 1, 1990

The helicopter trip and motorcade from the prison to Jimmy's Restaurant was uneventful. The pool was not allowed in the restaurant. We were told it was a lunch for 20 couples who had given $25,000 each to be distributed to Republican Gubernatorial candidates. We were not given names of those attending the luncheon.

After the lunch, Bush was driven to the Fox Plaza, a high rise office building a block down the street from Century Plaza. When the pool was ushered into Reagan's office, they were sitting on a pair of white sofas arranged in a corner in front of a window. A transcript of the Reagan/Bush conversation overheard by the pool, and their responses to several questions, is being made available.

Basically, the questions and responses were on Iranian hostages, whether the Contras should lay down their arms, and Bush's meeting with the Japanese Prime Minister tomorrow and Saturday.

The first questions were directed at Reagan, and Bush just sat quietly watching him respond. Reagan clearly was the center of attention as the 45-minute meeting began.

The short motorcade back to the Century Plaza was uneventful.

POOL REPORT # 7
TRAVEL POOL H: KAIFU ARRIVAL THROUGH FIRST BILATERAL
THROUGH ARRIVAL AT ANNENBERG RESIDENCE
Palm Springs, California
March 2, 1990

Your last pooler should have noted that Sonny Bono was accompanied by his wife who did not appear to have crested 30-years-old. Fashion detail: She was wearing a Donna Karan suit and a very expensive Chanel bag.

The motorcade arrived at Morningside Country Club in Rancho Mirage without incident. We traveled along streets named for Bob Hope, Dinah Shore and Frank Sinatra, most of which were bordered by very high hedges that didn't permit you to see the homes behind them. One note about this country club -- a lot of people maintained residences there; all of the garages have a special little door for their golf carts.

The pool was positioned in something called the "Gentlemen's Lounge" in the clubhouse. At 4:00 sharp Secretary Baker strolled through on his way to inspect the President's lounge where he met with his opposite number Foreign Minister Taro Nakayama. At 4:02 Bush and Baker emerged together with Prime Minister Kaifu. The two men sat in two white leather club chairs flanked by their interpreters and aides seated on two leather couches. Mr. Bush said to Mr. Kaifu, "It's pretty, isn't it? This is my first time ...." Apparently he was responding to an observation by Mr. Kaifu. Mr. Bush was asked by the pool whether he expected any progress. He said, "I'm going to answer all questions tomorrow -- full press conference." We were then thrown out.

We then gathered in the North Dining Room where the table was laid with 10 chairs on each side. The Japanese delegation had their backs to the windows, which had a beautiful view of the mountains. The U.S. side faced the windows. Left to right, the U.S. delegation was: Charles Dallara, Assistant Treasury Secretary for International Affairs; Fitzwater; Ambassador Armacost; Scowcroft; Brady; the President; Baker; Sununu; Solomon; and a Dr. Jackson who was an interpreter as well as a notetaker (I believe he works for the NSC). On the Japanese side, participants were: Kaifu; Nakayama; Ambassador to the U.S. Ryohei Murata; Hisashi Owada; Tatsuro Arima; Koichiro Matsuura; Masaki Orita; and a notetaker and an interpreter, whose names I didn't get.

The tables were set with floral centerpieces including tiger lilies, freesia and roses, and bottles of Artesia water -- mineral water which hails from San Antonio.

At about 4:30 the delegations came in minus the two heads of state. They followed at about 4:45. They took their places, shook hands across the tables in response to pleas from photographers from both countries. These are the only words we could hear the President utter.

"I told the Prime Minister that we view this as quite a significant gesture of friendship between our countries. The Prime Minister, between his address to the Diet and then having

PRESIDENT'S TRIP/DRUGS (Los Angeles/Rita Beamish, AP) -- President Bush said today the glamorization of drug use in popular culture is "fading fast" and urged television producers to show how illegal drugs destroy lives. Bush's anti-drug speech was interrupted when a man in the ballroom audience of TV industry members leaped up and shouted, "Why don't you ever talk about AIDS? Why don't you lead the country on AIDS?" Bush, smiling slightly, stopped speaking and looked at the man as he continued shouting from his table and was joined by a second protester. Some in the audience shouted for them to sit down, and the two submitted to hotel security people who briskly led them from the room. As they left, Bush said his administration has increased federal funds "to an all-time high," for AIDS programs "to try to help people who are concerned, and we will continue." He then said, "I've come a long way in my own political maturity. This guy's intervention doesn't bother me one little bit and I'm glad we live in a country where we can all speak up even if it takes advantage of the hospitality of you all." ...He called on the academy to make TV "a force for positive change" through anti-drug education.... [The president then went to Santa Ana for an anti-drug rally.] [adv. 3:40 p.m. EST] Bush said people around the country "in thousands of town are standing up to make the same courageous choice: drug-free neighborhoods, drug-free schools, drug-free kids." "We have seen some scattered but hopeful new signs of the progress against the horror of drugs," Bush said in remarks for the Santa Ana rally, recounting examples of communities that banded together to drive out drug pushers. "The days of the drug lord may not be over yet but their days are numbered," he said.

NICARAGUA/CONTRAS (Managua/Reuter) -- Nicaragua's leftist Sandinista government, stepping up pressure to have U.S.-backed Contra rebels disband, said Friday it was up to the country's new government to demand that Washington disarm them. An editorial in the official Sandinista newspaper Barricada said President-elect Violeta Chamorro's National Opposition Union...enjoyed privileged relations with Washington. "UNO has an obligation to demand that the White House dismantle that military force, created, financed and directed by the United States," Barricada said.

EL SALVADOR/FMLN (San Salvador/Reuter) -- Leftist rebels defended their armed struggle Friday and threatened to intensify it if the government failed to take serious steps toward democratic changes in El Salvador. The FMLN guerrilla coalition also brushed off suggestions that they have been left stranded by the electoral defeat of their long-time Sandinista allies in Nicaragua. In a statement, they said the Salvadoran authorities were underestimating their strength if they considered that without Sandinista support the destruction of the FMLN was just "a question of time." "While there is no democracy the FMLN struggle continues being as legitimate as it was 10 years ago," the guerrillas said. "Rather than having illusions about the swift annihilation of the FMLN, the Salvadoran government ought to consider the necessary elements to achieve democracy through negotiation," the statement continued.

SPACE/VICE PRESIDENT (AP) -- Before carrying out President Bush's proposal for a base on the Moon and a manned mission to Mars, the space agency needs to study new technologies and eliminate "unacceptable risks to the crew," the National Research Council said Friday. In a report requested by Vice President Quayle, the council said the exploration plan by NASA "addresses a reasonable set of technological and strategic approaches, but not all of the technically credible approaches have been analyzed."

USS IOWA REPORT (AP) -- The Navy's inquiry into the USS Iowa disaster failed to prove its contention that Gunner's Mate Clayton Hartwig probably set off the explosion that killed himself and 46 other crewmen, a congressional panel said today. "By the standard of this subcommittee -- and the standards that we think should have been applied in the Navy's investigation -- there is only a hypothesis, and a tenuous one at that," said the report by the House Armed Services investigations subcommittee.

ISRAEL/U.S./SOVIET IMMIGRATION (Reuter) -- The Bush administration Friday offered Israel guaranteed loans to help resettle Soviet Jews in an effort to calm Israeli anger over tough words by Secretary Baker and rescue Middle East peace efforts.... In an abrupt reversal Friday, spokeswoman Tutwiler said Washington would support giving Israel the loan guarantees if Israel provided assurances about the use of the money similar to those it already provides regarding its regular $3 billion in annual U.S. aid. "The good news, which should be viewed as good news...(is) we were no longer reviewing this, that we were prepared to support it, provide that we had some types of assurances," Tutwiler said. Asked if an assurance that Israel would not use the $400 million to build housing in the occupied [territories] would be acceptable, Tutwiler said: "We would view that as a step in the [right] direction and as a positive."

SOVIET IMMIGRATION/ISRAEL (Jerusalem/Reuter) -- Officials close to Prime Minister Shamir said Friday the increasing U.S. pressure on Israel had reduced the chances it would agree to begin peace talks with Palestinians. Secretary Baker said Thursday he was waiting for an Israeli decision on peace talks and sought a guarantee from the Jewish state to halt the settlement of Soviet Jews in the occupied territories. "The message we got from Baker is very, very counter-productive and we can't accept it," said Yossi Olmert, the Shamir-appointed head of the Government Press Office.... "The prime minister is fighting in order to save the peace process," Olmert said. "He doesn't need that kind of message at a time like that." A highly placed official close to the prime minister's office who was asked not to be named told Reuters: "It's not conducive to continue with the process."

SOVIET IMMIGRATION/PALESTINIANS (Jerusalem/Reuter) -- Palestinians said Friday that Secretary Baker's efforts to freeze Jewish settlement in the occupied territories did not go far enough. Although Israeli officials were angered at Baker's position on settlements in [the territories], Palestinians wanted all immigration linked to an Israeli commitment to withdraw from the occupied territories. "Immigration must be linked to a true peace process. Land for peace must be achieved before we accept immigration," said Saeb Erekat, editorial writer for the mass-circulation Al-Quds newspaper.

KGB DEFECTOR (AP) -- The Soviet Union in the late 1970s had two sources inside the State Department capable of providing information on U.S. policy and negotiating positions, a former KGB officer said today. Victor Ivanovich Sheymov also said he is confident the Soviet spy agency was bent on assassinating Pope John Paul II when its chief, Yuri Andropov, later general secretary of the Communist Party, sent a cable directing agents in Poland to "obtain all the information possible on how to get physically close to the pope." "In KGB slang it was clearly indicated that there was only one reason to get close to a person and that was to assassinate him, kill him," said Sheymov.

COLOMBIA (Bogota/UPI) -- The Medellin cocaine cartel is preparing a new offensive on the nation by contracting with two British mercenaries who allegedly trained drug cartel death squads in the late 1980s, it was reported Friday. The national newspaper El Tiempo, citing a security police file, also reported that cartel chief Pablo Escobar in January contacted hit men Henry Perez and Fidel Castano, alleged masterminds behind a series of anti-communist massacres in 1988 that killed hundreds of peasants. A security police spokesman refused to comment on the report.

EDUCATION (UPI) -- Major congressional proposals to improve the teaching profession are either unnecessary or duplicate programs already begun by the Bush administration, a top education official told a Senate panel Friday. The legislation backed by key Senate Democrats would "authorize a host of already tried, retread programs that offer no coherent vision of how we might address the very important issue of the professional development of teachers," said Dr. Leonard Haynes, assistant secretary for postsecondary education.

HEALTH CARE COMMISSION (UPI) -- A bipartisan congressional commission Friday narrowly approved a $65 billion to $70 billion plan designed to provide health insurance for all Americans through a mixture of public and private coverage. The 15-member Pepper Commission, made up of key health care players in Congress and three members appointed by President Reagan, also endorsed by a wider margin a proposal to cover the costs of long-term nursing home care. The plans were approved over the opposition of White House officials as well as the protests of some commission members who complained that the panel had not figured out how to pay for the expanded health coverage. "The problem is a shortage of money, not a shortage of ideas on how to spend the money. This is just full of useful ideas," said Rep. Gradison. "All it's going to do is raise a lot of false hopes and dash them." "Where the commission fails is to figure out a fair way to pay for the plan," said Rep. Stark. "It's dead," he said. "It's a dodo bird." But supporters hailed the plan as a starting point for future action and said financing could be worked out later. Sen. Kennedy said, "We're not the Finance Committee or the Ways and Means Committee."

PIERCE/INDEPENDENT COUNSEL (AP) -- Former federal judge Arlin Adams was appointed today to investigate allegations that former HUD Secretary Pierce and top aides illegally steered government rent subsidies to politically connected developers.... The appointment had been sought by Attorney General Thornburgh following a 90-day preliminary inquiry into the allegations by the Justice Department's public integrity section. "We're glad that an independent counsel has been finally appointed and the investigation can proceed," said Robert Plotkin, a lawyer for Pierce. "We have every reason to expect that Judge Adams will conduct the investigation in a fair and impartial manner."

ACADEMY OF TELEVISION ARTS AND SCIENCES (Los Angeles/UPI-adv. 8:45 a.m. PST) -- With a tip of the hat to Bugs Bunny and the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, President Bush saluted the television industry Friday for using the power of its medium "as a force for positive change" in discouraging the use of illegal drugs. "Thank goodness the days when popular culture glorified and glamorized drug use are fading," Bush said in prepared remarks to members of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences. "Public opinion is turning around." Before an audience of producers, writers and actors, Bush lauded Hollywood for using "the tremendous power" of their oft-criticized medium to focus on "some of our nation's most serious problems, whether it's hunger, homelessness or drug abuse." In a departure from complaints heard from Washington in past years about the images of drug use displayed in films and television, Bush welcomed the increasing integration of anti-drug themes into regular programming, particularly shows directed at children. Endorsing an upcoming academy production titled "Cartoon All-Stars to the Rescue," Bush said, "Never before in cartoon history have Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck worked with the Teenage Ninja Turtles, the Muppets, the Smurfs and all the other stars of the cartoon world."

(Los Angeles/Rita Beamish, AP-adv 11:45 a.m. EST) -- President Bush said Friday the glamorization of drug use in popular culture is "fading fast" and urged television producers to show how illegal drugs destroy lives. A day after he urged business people to screen job applicants for drug use, Bush called on the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences to make TV "a force for positive change" through anti-drug education. The President praised an upcoming cartoon program called "Cartoon All-Stars to the Rescue," in which several cartoon producers collaborated on a story about a boy who says no to drugs. "Never before in cartoon history have Bugs Bunny and Daffy Duck worked with the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, the Muppets, the Smurfs and all the other stars of the cartoon world," Bush told a breakfast meeting of the academy before heading to Santa Ana for an anti-drug rally.... "Thank goodness the days when popular culture glorified and glamorized drug use are fading fast," Bush said. "I'm not asking you to compromise your art" by portraying "a fantasy world where drugs don't exist," he told the television academy members. Rather, he said, he was entreating them "to show in the real world how drugs destroy."

(Los Angeles/Rita Beamish, AP) -- ...Bush's anti-drug speech was interrupted when a man in the ballroom audience of TV industry members leaped up and shouted, "Why don't you ever talk about AIDS? Why don't you lead the country on AIDS?" Bush, smiling slightly, stopped speaking and looked at the man as he continued shouting from his table and was joined by a second protester. Some in the audience shouted for them to sit down, and the two submitted to hotel security people who briskly led them from the room. As they left, Bush said his Administration has increased federal funds "to an all time high" for AIDS programs "to try to help people who are concerned, and we will continue." He then said, "I've come a long way in my own political maturity. This guy's intervention doesn't bother me one little bit and I'm glad we live in a country where we can all speak up even if it takes advantage of the hospitality of you all."

KAIFU (Tokyo/Reuter) -- One of Japanese Prime Minister Kaifu's party rivals challenged him Friday to rebut a charge he took more cash than he has admitted from Recruit, the company at the center of the stocks for favors scandal. Kaifu has already denied the report. Separately Friday, Kaifu's newly appointed Labor Minister revealed he had received cash from recruit, despite Kaifu's efforts earlier this week to cleanse his party. But Michio Watanabe -- a former finance minister who heads a rival faction in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party and is seen as coveting Kaifu's job -- was reported to have urged Kaifu to go much further. The daily Asahi Shimbun said Watanabe, in the taping of a television show, commented, "A weekly magazine has reported that the prime minister himself was supplied with undeclared money from the Recruit Company." He said, "Unless he clears up (the affair), (Kaifu) will be made a liar and the LDP as a whole will face trouble. Politicians are not gods and dirt can stick to them," he was reported to have said.

JAPAN (Tokyo/UPI) -- Paced by an accelerated growth of imports, Japan's current account balance in January posted the first deficit in six years, the Finance Ministry announced Friday. The ministry said in a preliminary report that the current account balance, covering both merchandise and service trade, showed a $636 million deficit, a turnaround from the $3.82 billion surplus in December and that of $2.50 billion a year ago. The trade balance in January shrank sharply to $1.08 billion from $6.30 billion in December and $4.88 billion in January 1989, the ministry said. "Improvement of the trade imbalance accelerated at a faster pace than expected and it is important to maintain this trend," said a ministry spokesman.

CONTRAS/U.S. ENVOY (Tegucigalpa/Reuter) -- U.S. special envoy Harry Shlaudeman will begin talks Friday in Tegucigalpa with U.S.-backed Contra rebels to discuss disbanding their Honduran camps, a U.S. Embassy spokesman said. "Mr. Shlaudeman is here to meet with leaders of the Nicaraguan Resistance to discuss their reintegration into Nicaraguan society," a U.S. diplomat told Reuter.... Shlaudeman, who arrived in Tegucigalpa late Thursday, is leading the talks at the request of President Bush, the embassy spokesman said.

ANDEAN PRODUCTS (Reuter) -- The U.S. will consider granting duty-free access to 129 products from four Andean-region nations in an effort to bolster the economies of the nations while they combat drug cartels, the government announced Friday. "This Administration will work hard to identify the opportunities by which (the duty-free access) can help promote legitimate, sustainable growth in the Andean region," U.S. Trade Representative Hills said in a release. "This underscores the U.S. commitment to help the Andean nations develop long-term economic alternatives to the production and trafficking of illegal drugs," she said.

POLISH PRIME MINISTER (Warsaw/Reuter) -- Poland announced Friday that Prime Minister Mazowiecki will visit Washington this month and try to persuade President Bush to accept Poland's participation in talks on German unification. Announcing the visit, the government spokeswoman Malgorzata Niezabitowska told reporters the three other big powers who will attend the unification talks with the two Germanys -- Britain, France and the Soviet Union -- now supported Polish participation. "Because of the fact that the positions of these countries are evolving, we hope that the U.S. position will change and a particular occasion for that could be the visit (by Mazowiecki) to the United States," she said.

NATO/GERMANY (Brussels/UPI) -- Proposals on the NATO role of a unified Germany are "artificial" because they do not address the big picture of European unity, the Czechoslovak foreign minister said Friday, the eve of his first NATO visit. Foreign Minister Jiri Dienstbier was asked about a compromise proposal to keep a united Germany within NATO but bar NATO troops from the present territory of East Germany. "I think all the proposed solutions are artificial," he said. "All solutions have to be viewed from the perspective of European unity," he told a news conference at headquarters of the 12-nation EC. "We should use the unification of Germany as a step to speeding up the process."

HUNGARY (Budapest/Reuter) -- U.S. Democratic Party leaders criticized preparations for Hungarian elections Friday, saying the government was not doing enough to publicize voting procedures. Hungary's first free national multiparty elections since 1945 will be held March 25 and April 8 after more than four decades of communist rule. Speaking after meeting opposition parties, Nathan Landow, Maryland's Democratic Party chairman, said, "There was general consensus at these talks that the government has made inadequate efforts to inform voters about their rights and electoral procedures."

SECURITIES MARKETS (AP) -- The slide of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. into bankruptcy court is not an indication that U.S. securities markets are unsound, the chairman of the SEC said Friday. "Drexel was unduly concentrated among large securities firms in high-yield securities and that concentration proved to be fatal when these securities became unmarketable and unpledgeable," Chairman Breeden told a Senate hearing. Drexel's insolvency "should not be taken as an indication that U.S. securities markets, or other major participants in those markets are financially unsound," he testified before the Senate Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Committee.

NEW HOMES SALES (AP) -- Sales of new homes plummeted 7.1 percent in January to the lowest level in nearly a year, as both mortgage rates and prices continued to climb, the government said Friday. The Commerce Department said new single-family homes were sold at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 589,000 units in January after falling 8.4 percent in December. December sales originally were reported to have dropped 9.6 percent. It was the worst performance since sales fell to 556,000 homes on an annual basis last March.

ETHIOPIA (Addis Ababa/Reuter) -- Ethiopia voiced an urgent appeal Friday for foreign aid, saying 4.5 million people faced starvation in its war-torn north, five years after some 1 million people perished there.... Ethiopia's high new figure included half a million people displaced from the rebel occupied province of Tigray and 400,000 inhabitants of Asmara, Ethiopia's second city, which has been recently cut off from the Red Sea port of Masawa. Yilma Tadesse, the head of Ethiopia's Relief and Rehabilitation Commission, spoke as he was briefing U.N. Undersecretary-General Abdul-Rahim Farah about northern Ethiopia.

POPE/SOVIET UNION (Headline News) -- There are allegations Friday the Soviet Union once planned to assassinate Pope John Paul II. A former KGB official tells the Washington Post the Kremlin wanted information on the pope in 1979, he said, said a murder plot could be formulated. When the pope was shot in 1981, many intelligence officials believed the Soviet Union was behind it, but that was never firmly established. ###
