GORBACHEV SAYS HE MAY CEASE AS PARTY CHIEF IN A FEW DAYS

MOSCOW -- Soviet leader Gorbachev said Wednesday he may cease to be Communist Party chief in a few days.

Gorbachev...said in up to 10 or 12 days there could be another party general secretary....

It was not clear from his words whether Gorbachev was threatening to quit or meant that he might be removed as party chief at a crucial Soviet Communist Party Congress next month.

Gorbachev, listening to debate at the second day of the Russian Communist Party Conference, intervened to say delegates should have a well-founded reason before criticizing the Soviet Communist Party chief and president of the country. "I think some comrades are treating the general secretary and president very casually," Gorbachev said.

"It is not a question of me. Tomorrow or in 10 or 12 days there could be another general secretary, chairman of the party. To make a condemnation and still to make accusations you have got to know and understand a lot." (Reuter)

RUSSIAN COMMUNISTS VOTE TO FORM OWN COMMUNIST PARTY

MOSCOW -- Communists in the Russian Federation, the Soviet Union's biggest republic, voted overwhelmingly at a conference Wednesday to found their own communist party in the framework of the Soviet party.

The conference voted 2,316 to 171 to turn their meeting in the Kremlin into the founding congress of the Communist Party of the Russian Federation. The delegates stood and applauded the move. (Reuter)

WHITE HOUSE MULLS PARTICIPATION IN EFFORT TO SHORE UP SOVIET ECONOMY

The Bush Administration is reluctantly considering U.S. participation in a multibillion-dollar international effort to save the Soviet economy from a crash that could undermine Mikhail Gorbachev and harm Eastern Europe.

The National Security Council is debating the conditions under which the U.S. might take part in such a rescue plan, which France and West Germany are pushing. The allies foresee it totaling about $20 billion over one or two years.... The White House is planning to settle on a U.S. position in time for the July 9 economic summit in Houston....

American officials familiar with the international deliberations caution that President Bush hasn't decided whether the U.S. will join such a rescue effort. They add that no Western plan is likely to be adopted in detail at the summit or to begin operating soon thereafter. Instead, the heads of the seven largest industrial nations are likely to order lower-level officials to work out a program for adoption later.

(Walter Mossberg & Gerald Seib, Wall Street Journal, A3)

MORE AID SOUGHT FOR SOVIETS

PARIS -- President Mitterrand will ask the U.S. and the five other major industrial democracies to consider extending financial and technical aid to the Soviet Union at the Group of Seven summit meeting in Houston in July, the French leader disclosed Tuesday.

Mitterrand's endorsement of direct Western aid to President Gorbachev's beleaguered government will receive strong support from West Germany at the Houston summit meeting and will not be opposed by the Bush Administration, which is showing new flexibility on providing economic help to the Soviets, according to diplomatic sources.

European officials now believe that the Bush Administration has dropped its negative attitude on direct aid to Moscow. Secretary Baker reportedly encouraged the foreign ministers of the EC in a meeting in Brussels last month to consider offering financial help to Moscow even though Washington is unlikely to join them in doing so because of opposition in Congress.

GORBACHEV DEFENDS REFORMS AS HISTORIC

MOSCOW -- President Gorbachev defended himself Tuesday against public attacks that his reforms "are to blame for everything" and said that the political transformation of the Soviet Union since he came to power in 1985 is "comparable to the most radical events in world history."

Speaking on the opening day of the founding congress of the new Russian Communist Party, Gorbachev also attacked...Yegor Ligachev, who has been complaining that the current reforms are in danger of "restoring" a capitalist economic system.... "The market came with the dawn of civilization and is not the invention of capitalism," Gorbachev said. "If the market leads to the improvement of people's daily lives, then there is no contradiction with socialism."

(David Remnick, Washington Post, A31)

EMBATTLED GORBACHEV BACKS RUSSIA PARTY

MOSCOW -- Bowing to pressure in the Soviet Union's biggest republic, President Gorbachev endorsed Tuesday the formation of a separate Russian Communist Party but warned that increasing disharmony could disrupt the Communist system.

Sources close to Gorbachev described the Russian Party conference that opened Tuesday as the first of a series of major and possible decisive battles that Gorbachev will join against party conservatives in the next three weeks.

Gorbachev gave formal backing Tuesday to the Russian offshoot but said it should not challenge the central party's authority. He promised that as part of his reform program, the national party "will be turned from an administrative body, imposing its will on society, into a political organization that will uphold its right to political leadership only in free competition with other sociopolitical forces." His comments and policies drew considerable criticism from conservative delegates, including a call from a Siberian party chief, Alexander Melnikov, for the president to resign because he "is sliding toward the cult of personality."

LITHUANIA POSTPONES RESPONSE TO SOVIETS

MOSCOW -- Lithuanian legislators are divided over a compromise plan to suspend their declaration of independence in order to bring negotiations on the issue with Moscow and no decision is expected until early next week.

Lithuanian President Landsbergis urged members of the republic's legislature Tuesday to spend the weekend discussing the Kremlin's recent proposal with voters and then to reconvene for the decision. He proposed, "if it is technically feasible," a republic-wide opinion poll on the moratorium proposal.

BRITAIN SETS DEEP CUTS IN DEFENSE SPENDING Government Cites Collapse Of Warsaw Pact

LONDON -- Britain has announced its deepest defense cuts in more than a decade and canceled a $1.1 billion order for new jet fighters in the government's first attempt to harvest a "peace dividend" and come to terms with the end of the Cold War.

While Prime Minister Thatcher has continued in speeches to sound the most hawkish notes of any Western leader, Defense Ministry officials have been quietly working to find ways to retool Britain's strategic doctrine at a time when the government is under pressure to increase expenditures on health, education and local tax relief.

U.S.-JAPAN SECURITY PACT MAY BE HISTORY

TOKYO -- As former Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe left here Tuesday for celebrations marking the 30th anniversary of Japan's security pact with the U.S., argument flared anew over whether the treaty should be scrapped in light of an apparently receding Soviet military threat....

"The raison d'etre of the treaty, that Japan would provide the front line of defense for the American-led postwar order in Asia against expanding communism, has collapsed," said Shintaro Ishihara, a ruling Liberal Democratic Party deputy in the Japanese Diet. The treaty is therefore "gradually losing its significance and will eventually become obsolete," he said.

SOUTH AFRICAN COMMUNIST PARTY GOES PUBLIC

JOHANNESBURG -- The shadowy South African Communist Party, after 40 years of underground life, announced Tuesday that it is going public and relaunching itself as a legal organization starting next month.

Joe Slovo, the party's general secretary, told a press conference here that the party leadership had decided to celebrate the occasion by holding a mass rally in the black township of Soweto outside Johannesburg on July 29 at which time the party's secretive leadership would be partly disclosed.

BUSH, DEMOCRATS PONDER $50 MILLION FOR ANC

The Bush Administration met Tuesday with several Democratic congressmen to talk about their proposal to give up to $50 million to the African National Congress, whose leader of near-mythic proportions, Nelson Mandela, arrives in New York Wednesday for a trip across America.

Organizers of Mandela's U.S. tour told the Administration Tuesday that the U.S. government ought to give the ANC the money to build a political party within South Africa....

An Administration official said the White House, State Department and the pro-ANC congressmen are discussing the plan to provide direct aid to the avowedly Marxist organization. The official said the Administration was forced into the negotiations by Democratic congressmen....

An Administration official said the $10 million [Congress recently added to the $32 million the Administration sought in fiscal 1990 for aid to South Africa] would probably be divided among the ANC, the USIA, the National Endowment for Democracy and other agencies. The official said the Administration does not plan to give $50 million to the ANC.

MANDELA TO BEGIN U.S. TOUR WITH HERO'S WELCOME IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK -- Nelson Mandela arrives in the U.S. Wednesday assured of a welcome worthy of a superhero but not the political pledge he wants most from the world's most powerful nation.

...As aides and associates stressed Tuesday, what Mandela wants more than cheers and good wishes is a pledge from President Bush to keep up economic pressure against South Africa in the form of sanctions until the white-ruled country dismantles apartheid.

Randall Robinson..., executive director of TransAfrica, told reporters that when the Mandela trip was first conceived, "it was never meant to be any glitzy tour of the United States" but a serious discussion with Bush and other leaders on what the U.S. could do to destroy apartheid.

Robinson said the Administration -- White House Chief of Staff Sununu in particular -- had put up trial balloons that it wants to end sanctions. He said it would be disastrous if Bush relented and relaxed the economic pressure....

Signals from the White House indicated that Bush planned to give Mandela a warm welcome worthy of a world leader and that the U.S. was not going to relax sanctions. (Arthur Spiegelman, Reuter)

EXPERTS SAY SANCTIONS WORKED ONLY PARTIALLY TO KEEP PRESSURE ON S. AFRICA

On his triumphal visit to the U.S. this week, Nelson Mandela will be imploring America to keep the pressure on by maintaining the sanctions Congress imposed on South Africa almost four years ago.

Have the sanctions worked?

Yes, but only partially, and not without pain for South Africans -- black and white -- and American business, experts agree.... Arguments for sanctions must be weighed against evidence that they penalize South African blacks at least as much as whites, and that they penalize U.S. corporations disproportionately, some interviewed said....

"One impact of disinvestment has been to concentrate economic power even more tightly in the hands of a white business oligarchy," the U.N. Center on Transnational Corporations said last September. "The new owners have frequently proved less responsive to worker demands than the (Western corporations) they replaced." In addition, the U.N. agency said, South Africa found new trade partners to replace much of what it lost from nations honoring sanctions.

MILITARY DELAYED RAID ON BORDER DRUG TUNNEL

The joint Customs Service-military mission that last month unearthed an elaborate drug-smugglers' tunnel on the U.S.-Mexican border was launched only after an urgent request for the action had been held up in the Pentagon bureaucracy for six weeks, The Los Angeles Times has learned.

The delay, during which shipments of cocaine apparently continued to pour through the passage into Arizona, is typical of problems that have hamstrung a high-profile Administration effort to help interdict drugs along the border.

Active-duty military response is so slow that the Border Patrol and other agencies now turn to state National Guard units when they need assistance quickly, according to U.S. officials involved in counternarcotics efforts.

"They announce that drugs are a major national security threat and then this takes six weeks?" one incredulous official asked. "What the heck is going on here?"

Other Administration officials defended as necessary the laborious procedures that require the Joint Chiefs of Staff to approve virtually every mission conducted by the new Joint Task Force Six in the sensitive border region.

REPORT: CASTRO WANTS TO MEET BUSH IN TOKYO

TOKYO -- Cuban President Castro has informally asked Japan to help him arrange a meeting with President Bush in a bid to improve relations between the two Cold War foes, a published report said Wednesday.

The daily Asahi Shimbun, quoting unidentified sources in the government and the ruling LDP, said Castro asked Japan to act as a mediator, provided both leaders attend the Nov. 16 enthronement of Emperor Akihito in Tokyo.

The newspaper said the Bush Administration's reaction has been cool and the President's attendance at the enthronement has not been decided yet. A White House spokesman contacted Tuesday night said he knew nothing of the report and had no comment on it.

CHAMORRO SAID TO BE CONCERNED OVER ARMS SHIPMENTS TO SALVADOR

NEW YORK -- Nicaraguan President Chamorro has expressed concern to Salvadoran and U.S. officials that shipments of arms continue to pass through her country to the leftist guerrillas in El Salvador, the New York Times reported Wednesday.

The newspaper quoted an unnamed senior State Department official as saying that Chamorro brought up the arms shipments in a conversation Monday with Secretary Baker. The meeting was held in Antigua, Guatemala, at the end of a three-day meeting of Central American leaders, the paper said.

A senior State Department official who attended the meeting said Chamorro indicated that small arms were still being sent to the rebels of the FMLN..., the newspaper reported. The Times quoted the official as saying Chamorro must better identify who is responsible for the arms shipments.

SALVADORAN REBELS INSIST ON MILITARY CUTS TO BRING PEACE

OAXTEPEC, Mexico -- Opening a new round of peace talks, Salvadoran rebel leaders are sticking to their longstanding demands that the rightist government slash its military and rid the ranks of alleged death squad leaders.

Speaking to reporters before Tuesday's opening session, guerrilla commander Shafik Handal called the issue of a reduced Salvadoran military "the Gordian knot that needs cutting to bring peace to our country."

Col. Mauricio Vargas, spokesman for the government of President Cristiani, declined comment on Handal's statement.

CONGRESS CONSIDERS CHINA TARIFF HIKES

Legislation to hike tariffs sharply on Chinese goods next year unless China broadly improves its human rights policies is drawing support in Congress.

The legislation reflects a recognition in Congress that there are not enough votes to override President Bush and impose higher tariffs on Chinese goods this year.

The bill's chief sponsor, Rep. Pease, calls it "a middle course" between reacting weakly to the Chinese government's repressive policies and boosting tariffs this year.

The bill would give China a year to "reverse its pattern of gross violations of internationally recognized human rights" and to terminate both martial law throughout the country and aid to the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia.... If the President found that China met those conditions but Congress disagreed, Congress would have to override the President, for the higher tariffs to be imposed. About 20 House members have joined Pease in co-sponsoring the bill.... Another group of congressmen, led by Rep. Pelosi, is pressing for similar legislation.

Congressional Fight Looms On Trade Policy With China

Congressional critics of President Bush's decision last month to extend favorable tariff status for China are gearing up to mount a legislative challenge to the move.

Bush's move to maintain the status quo...could well be the most contentious trade issue playing out on the Hill in coming months, according to congressional aides, but a decision to undo it will not come easily because economic sanctions invariably cause pain on both sides....

Tuesday, the House Ways and Means Committee's trade subcommittee heard testimony from both sides on the issue.... Condemning White House policy, Rep. Frank told the panel: "The Chinese appear to have been wholly unimpressed by President Bush's approach.... They ate all the President's carrots and we have nothing to show for it."

But Rep. Matsui said that some of his constituents felt that a hard line was unlikely to work on the current Chinese leadership.

SECOND OF THREE CHINESE DISSIDENTS RELEASED

BEIJING -- The second of three Chinese dissidents detained by police before the anniversary of last year's crackdown on the democracy movement has been freed, friends said Wednesday, but the whereabouts of the third remained unclear.

Gao Xin...telephoned at least two friends Tuesday to say he had been released, telling a similar tale as that of activist Zhou Duo, who was freed Sunday.... No one reported actually having seen Gao.

CLAYTON YEUTTER GETTING TOUGH ON TRADE

There's a professional wrestler by the name of Jim "Hacksaw" Duggan who carries an American flag in one hand and a two-by-four in the other....

The image of ol' Hacksaw comes to mind after two recent outbursts by Secretary Yeutter.

One such outburst came after Japanese leaders accused Yeutter of meddling in their "internal policies." ...He noted that in his former position of U.S. Trade Rep. he twice rejected calls for U.S. retaliation against Japan because of its restrictive rice-import policies....

Yeutter's other outburst was directed at the European Community. If the EC doesn't eliminate trade-distorting farm subsidies, Yeutter said, he would consider having the U.S. sell huge amounts of grain on world markets at cut-rate prices....

In the lingo of Hacksaw Duggan, Yeutter is telling the Japanese and Western Europeans that, "I don't like the way you're acting. It's time I taught you a lesson."

ISRAELI ARAB'S POEMS BRING HOUSE ARREST
Writer Denies Works Incited Violence

JERUSALEM -- A judge ordered an Israeli Arab poet placed under house arrest Tuesday on charges of incitement in his writings in one of the strongest measures taken against an Arab intellectual inside Israel in recent years.

Shafik Habib, 49, an Israeli citizen, was arrested after the Army confiscated a collection of his poems from a Palestinian in Ramallah, in the occupied West Bank. Authorities charged that the poems, written in Arabic, called for attacks on Israel with stones, firebombs and ammunition. Habib denied the charges....

Arab writers and politicians said the action was one of the most drastic by Israeli authorities against an Arab citizen in recent years.

FLAG AMENDMENT SENT TO HOUSE FLOOR

A deeply divided House Judiciary Committee Tuesday cleared the way for the full House to vote on a constitutional amendment banning flag desecration, and Democratic leaders said they would reject Republican requests for a delay and push for a vote Thursday in hopes of killing the measure.

After a long and emotional debate, the Judiciary Committee voted 19 to 17 to send the proposed amendment to the floor of the House without a formal recommendation. Attempts to move it to the floor with either a favorable or unfavorable recommendation were narrowly defeated. The committee action came as Democrats in both the House and Senate expressed growing confidence they can defeat the proposal, which requires a two-thirds vote in both chambers....

Republican supporters of the amendment pressed for a three-day delay that would put off a House vote until Tuesday. But opponents said the move was an effort to buy time so that veterans groups and others backing the change could intensify their lobbying. Both Speaker Foley and House Rules Committee Chairman Moakley insisted the vote will come Thursday.

(Tom Kenworthy, Washington Post, A14)

Flag-Burning Vote Looks Close, Critics Push For Quick Action

A constitutional amendment against burning the American flag is speeding toward a House floor vote, with critics saying "the momentum is with us" and backers grumbling about too much haste.

"It's going to be close," Rep. Brooks said Tuesday.... "It would be close this week, it will be close next week." Speaker Foley agreed.... Brooks said the 19-17 vote by which the panel sent the measure to the floor -- with no recommendation for or against -- was a sign that the final outcome also would be by a narrow margin.... "The momentum is with us.... We're picking up a vote here and a vote there," said Rep. Don Edwards, a leading critic.

BUSH PLANS NEGOTIATIONS ON CIVIL RIGHTS MEASURE

The White House Tuesday began arranging a series of negotiating sessions with Senate Democrats on the Civil Rights Act of 1990 but warned that the process of reaching agreement "could take weeks." President Bush met Tuesday with 18 Republican senators in a session devoted primarily to the measure.... According to officials at the White House session, Bush received a range of appeals from senators urging him to work out a compromise so he could sign legislation that would not be a "quota bill." Officials said Sen. Dole told the group, which included Attorney General Thornburgh and key Senate Republicans involved in the legislation, that Democrats are attempting to rush the White House into a compromise and do not have the strong majority support in the Senate they are claiming. Dole also said it was unlikely, if not impossible, that the measure would come up during the visit here of ANC leader Mandela.... Democratic officials said Tuesday no decision has been made on scheduling the bill for Senate debate.

CONFEREES AGREE ON PORTIONS OF CHILD-CARE LEGISLATION

Congressional conferees reached agreement Tuesday on major portions of a $1.85 billion child-care bill amid the first signs the White House may be willing to compromise on the legislation.

Sen. Dodd, a principal sponsor of the child-care legislation, said conferees for the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee and the House Education and Labor Committee resolved all differences on their portion of the bill except how the money would be allocated to various programs.... Dodd said the Senate agreed to a House proposal to expand the Head Start program and to create new school-based programs to take care of "latch-key" children before and after school hours.... In a bow to the White House, the conferees agreed to drop proposals for the creation of various child-care advisory councils....

White House Chief of Staff Sununu Tuesday sent a letter to Rep. Goodling indicating for the first time that the Bush Administration might be willing to go along with some form of legislation along the lines of the Democratic child-care proposal provided spending is limited to $15 billion over the next five years. Democratic sources among the conferees said they considered the letter to be a significant move by the White House.

WHITE HOUSE ATTACKS DEMOCRATS' S&L ROLE

In a rare partisan attack with personal overtones, the Bush Administration accused Democrats Tuesday of playing "a big role" in the collapse of the savings and loan industry and warned that if the Democrats try to make a political issue of the thrift scandal, "We're ready to play."

White House press secretary Fitzwater led the Administration strike, saying there were "some disturbing signs" of Democratic attempts to exploit the issue politically and warning that "this plays both ways."

Fitzwater's comments set off an uproar in Congress, where members of both parties have been reporting that the thrift crisis is a growing concern among angry constituents who are beginning to learn the cost of the thrift collapse and complain that taxpayers should not be forced to bear the brunt of the costs of the cleanup. The unexpected White House assault also came as House Democrats questioned regulators about the federal government's decision during the 1988 presidential campaign to delay closing of a Colorado thrift whose board of directors included President Bush's son, Neil....

Democratic House leaders have been debating whether and how to put the [S&L] issue to political use, officials said Tuesday. A senior Republican source, meanwhile, said the White House and GOP "are not only not going to let them have this issue, we might just make it our issue." The official cited not only well-known Democrats involved in thrift scandals but a string of lesser-known Democrats, suggesting a serious opposition research effort by Republicans. "You've suddenly got Democrats around the country trying to wrap the S&Ls around the Republicans," said GOP pollster Bill McInturff. "I don't think it's stuck, but it's a good and helpful thing to make sure that everyone's fingerprints are on the murder weapon." (Ann Devroy & Helen Dewar, Washington Post, A1)

White House Returns Fire In S&L Argument

The White House Tuesday singled out several Democratic congressmen for blame in the savings and loan debacle and also blamed the party for pushing up bailout costs in the worst banking crisis since the Great Depression.

White House officials also denied a Democratic congressman's accusation that President Bush was shielding his son Neil from prosecution in the Silverado S&L failure....

"A big part of the problem here is that in the dead of night a few years ago the Democrats pushed through [legislation] raising the limits to $100,000 per person," said [White House Press Secretary Fitzwater], citing the ceiling for which each account is insured. "In retrospect, we think it helped lead to a lot of the problems here." ...

DEMOCRATS RELEASE CHARGE THAT BUSH SON BROKE LAW IN SILVERADO CASE

The savings and loan scandal took a political turn Tuesday, as Democrats on Capitol Hill released an allegation that President Bush's son "willfully violated" the law in the collapse of a Denver thrift, and the White House charged that Democrats shared blame for the thrift disaster.

Rep. Annunzio unveiled Tuesday a draft document from federal regulators, apparently written last winter when regulators were trying to ban Neil Bush from the savings and loan industry for life. Since that time, regulators have decided to pursue a less serious charge against him.

The draft said, "The Office of Thrift Supervision is of the opinion that...(four executives and) Neil Bush...willfully violated applicable laws, rules, or regulations, or engaged or participated in unsafe or unsound practices in connection with the management of Silverado Banking thrift...or willfully breached their fiduciary duty to Silverado Banking." The document also said that because of Bush and the other four executives, "Silverado Banking suffered substantial financial loss or other damage as a result of (their) conduct, or (they) received financial gain by reason of such conduct." ...

The draft document was released at a hearing of the banking committee at which a Denver developer said he was just being generous in loaning Neil Bush $100,000 that was not repaid.

OTS Charges Neil Bush 'Breached Responsibility'

A House Banking Committee member Tuesday released a government document charging that President Bush's son Neil "willfully breached his fiduciary responsibility" while a director of Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan.

Rep. Annunzio had planned to keep the document under wraps because the agency that had written it, the OTS, had declared it confidential, a committee staff member said.

But as the committee resumed its hearings into Silverado's 1988 collapse, another member, Rep. Parris, asked that the OTS document be placed in the official record of the hearings, thus making it public....

OTS officials have consistently refused to discuss the Bush matter. Annunzio's release of the notice represented the first public release of official charges against him. The notice was prepared in advance of OTS's effort to permanently bar Bush from the banking industry. That effort failed because Bush refused to sign a prohibition order. The agency is now pursuing a lesser sanction against him.

EX-REGULATOR: SILVERADO CLOSING WAS DELAYED

A former savings and loan regulator testified Tuesday under oath that officials in Washington ordered him to wait for two months in 1988 -- until after Election Day -- before closing a failing Colorado thrift where President Bush's son Neil had been a director.

The delay was ordered despite a request by field supervisors that action should be taken in October, said Kermit Mowbray, former president of the Federal Home Loan Bank in Topeka, Kan....

Mowbray, who was subpoenaed to testify by the House Banking Committee after he refused to appear voluntarily, said he cannot remember who at the federal thrift regulatory agency in Washington placed the telephone call giving the order on Silverado.

DEMOCRATS EXPECT BUSH BUDGET PROPOSAL

Democratic participants in budget talks said Tuesday that they expect the Bush Administration to make a new proposal Wednesday that could make or break the 5-week-old effort to reach bipartisan agreement on a deficit reduction package.

It then should be possible to tell whether an accord can be reached by the end of the month, several participants said....

With the negotiating phase at hand..., Democratic lawmakers said they assumed that the next step would be for OMB Director Darman to put forward an offer to get the bargaining process moving.

"We understand and hope we'll have a proposal from the President," said Sen. Fowler after Sen. Domenici predicted that serious negotiations would begin this afternoon.

Rep. Panetta...said a Darman proposal would have to reflect the serious nature of the fiscal crisis facing the country.

White House To Make First Offer At Budget Talks

The Bush Administration is ready to open bargaining at slow-moving budget negotiations with Congress by presenting its own plan for paring next year's deficit, participants in the talks say.

One official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the White House would offer a plan cutting the fiscal 1991 budget gap by close to $50 billion at Wednesday's session.

But Sen. Packwood, a Republican negotiator, said he believed the Administration would present a plan similar to the budget President Bush unveiled in January. (Alan Fram, AP)

Budget Negotiators Reluctant To Make First Move On Taxes

Sometime this week -- perhaps Wednesday evening, or Thursday -- Administration and congressional budget negotiators will finish their exhaustive seminar on the state of federal spending and face the black hole.

The black hole...is the policy void created by the chronic inability of Congress and the Administration to raise taxes or cut spending. Day by day, it sucks in the future....

"We are going to look at each other, and each side is going to wait on bended knee for the other to make a proposal," said a key Republican aide attending the meetings....

What are the chances [for an agreement]? "At this point," said Sen. Gramm, "I wouldn't take an even bet."

SENATE SENDS WARNING ON USE OF SOCIAL SECURITY IN BUDGET

The Senate Tuesday served notice it will not approve a debt ceiling increase needed this summer unless Congress acts to stop using the huge Social Security surplus to mask the size of the federal deficit.

The proposal, sponsored by Sen. Heinz, was approved 96 to 2 as part of a pending housing bill, with only conservative Sens. Armstrong and Wallop in opposition.

If enacted, it could force Congress to raise the official deficit figure for fiscal 1991 by $50 billion and to rewrite budget targets under the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-balancing law.

"When it comes to condoning a continuing charade, we have been caught red-handed," Heinz said....

In a related event Tuesday, Secretary Cheney told White House and congressional budget negotiators that a five-year, 25 percent cut in military forces would result in little spending savings in the short term or the long term.

CHENEY BUDGET STIRS DEMOCRATIC SKEPTICS

Secretary Cheney Tuesday unveiled his most specific plans to date for how he may shrink the armed forces, but ran up against complaints from congressional Democrats who contend the figures do not work.

Cheney and congressional leaders met again on Capitol Hill in a "budget summit" looking for a package of budget cuts and revenues.... The defense secretary, however, stood firm on the Bush Administration's request for $303 billion in 1991 Pentagon spending....

"Nobody has put a new proposal on the table yet. Nobody's made any major concessions yet," Cheney said....

One of Cheney's chief critics, Rep. Aspin, disputed the secretary's [defense] figures.

HOUSE BEGINS APPROVING 1991 SPENDING

House Democrats frustrated by a stalemate with President Bush over budget cuts and taxes are starting to appropriate spending for next year, beginning with $20.8 billion for energy and water projects.

Ignoring the absence of an overall budget accord, the White House voted 355-59 Tuesday to raise by $350 million what Bush would spend in fiscal 1991 to clean up the nation's atomic weapons complex. The House vote also would launch 25 water projects opposed by the Administration.

"What the House has done is to flaunt or doom the (budget) summit," said Rep. Frenzel, as several efforts to cut the spending were defeated. "This is something that is going to get this house in great trouble." ...

Democrats, admitting that cuts will have to be made later, said one reason to start acting on spending bills is to put pressure on the Administration.

"If we do not proceed, that would be the worst way to deal with the budget summit," said Rep. Panetta. "In a vacuum in which we do nothing, no pressure will be brought to get action."

House Votes To Withhold Funds For Nuclear Power Plant

The House voted 413 to 7 Tuesday to withhold funds for a plutonium reprocessing plant at Rocky Flats, Colo., until the Administration completes a comprehensive long-term plan for rehabilitating its nuclear weapons program.

The restrictions, contained in an amendment to the fiscal 1991 energy and water appropriations bill, were offered by Rep. Skaggs and amount to a compromise with the Administration....

The main bill, the first appropriations measure to reach the floor this year, passed on a vote of 355 to 59 late Tuesday.

BALANCED BUDGET QUEST ADVANCES

Conservative supporters of a proposed constitutional amendment requiring a balanced budget succeeded Tuesday in their long-running quest to bring the issue to the full House for a vote.

Using a rarely successful procedure, supporters of the proposal overcame opposition by the House's Democratic leadership and are now guaranteed a vote no later than next month.

"They can't prevent this now," said Rep. Craig, one of the measure's sponsors.

DINKINS ADVISES MAYORS TO SEEK 'PEACE DIVIDEND'

CHICAGO -- New York Mayor Dinkins Tuesday rejected advice from Washington and urged his fellow urban leaders to actively pursue reallocation of a "peace dividend" that he predicted will result from defense spending cuts.

Dinkins' call for increased federal spending for the cities came 24 hours after Rep. Rostenkowski stunned members of the U.S. Conference of Mayors by bluntly predicting no new federal money will be forthcoming....

Dinkins (said) that, contrary to Rostenkowski's assertion, the size of the thrift bailout proves that the federal government has the money to spare. Dinkins maintained it is being spent incorrectly.

GOP SENATORS WANT TO STOP FEDERAL JUDGES FROM ORDERING TAX HIKES

Away from the tumult of efforts to ban flag desecration by a constitutional amendment, senators are considering another change in the Constitution that would touch on a pillar of the American system of government: the separation of powers.

Two groups of Republican senators have proposed a constitutional amendment and a law that would prohibit federal judges from ordering tax increases, leaving that function the exclusive province of the legislative branch....

"In this country, judges don't tax," Sen. Danforth, author of the proposed amendment, testified Tuesday before the Senate Judiciary Committee's subcommittee on the Constitution....

But Washington lawyer Patricia Brannan...warned that if judges' powers were curtailed, state and local governments would begin claiming that they could not rectify constitutional rights violations, such as racial discrimination, because it would require a tax hike.

HUD/EVICTION POLICY

The Department of Housing and Urban Development plans to press forward with a 23-city plan to evict public housing tenants suspected of drug sales despite a court ruling this week by a Richmond, VA, federal judge requiring hearings prior to evictions.

A HUD official, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Tuesday the Richmond decision would not affect other cities and that HUD plans to go ahead with surprise evictions in a number of cities next week.

ACTIVISTS BLOCK STREETS TO DISRUPT AIDS CONFERENCE

SAN FRANCISCO -- In the first of many protests planned to disrupt the 6th International AIDS Conference, hundreds of gay activists blocked the city's streets at rush hour Tuesday afternoon to demonstrate their opposition to U.S. immigration policies that discriminate against people with the AIDS virus.

Marching through downtown to an Immigration and Naturalization Service office, activists began a week of protest that some say could turn violent....

"We hope this will be a week without violence," said Kevin Farrell, a spokesman for the AIDS Coalition to Unleash Power.... "No violence will be started, continued or condoned by any ACTUP organization."

Despite those assurances, tensions are high in the city and San Francisco police were on full alert as thousands of delegates arrived for the AIDS conference. In addition tens of thousands are expected to protest and celebrate Gay and Lesbian and Pride Week.

As AIDS Meeting Opens, Strife Is Feared

As the world's largest AIDS conference opens Wednesday, organizers are worried that the event will be remembered, like the Chicago Democratic National Convention of 1968, for all the wrong reasons -- disruptions, physical mayhem, police overreaction and public backlash against people with AIDS....

Rene Durazzo of the San Francisco AIDS Foundation said violence "could virtually break out any time, any place" in the next five days at the Sixth International AIDS Conference. The chances of a demonstration turning violent, by plan or by mishap, are 50-50, Durazzo said.

Those chances will not be improved, a conference spokesman said Tuesday, by President Bush's presence at a fund-raising dinner Wednesday night for Sen. Helms in Charlotte, N.C., at the very hour he had been invited to open the [conference]....

"I hope it wasn't a deliberate move," Dana Van Gorder, the conference's chief spokesman, said. "Hopefully it's coincidental. If it isn't, it seems that it would warrant a little bit of assurance from the President that Jesse Helms will not be dictating the nation's response to the epidemic as opposed to the 12,000 medical experts sitting on the opposite coast."

700,000 HAVE AIDS, HEALTH AGENCY CLAIMS

GENEVA -- The World Health Agency warned Tuesday that the number of AIDS cases worldwide is almost three times higher than the 260,000 officially reported victims.

FLORIDA ASKS JUDGE TO LET STATE FURTHER REGULATE ABORTION CLINICS

FORT LAUDERDALE -- State officials asked a federal judge in Fort Lauderdale on Tuesday to lift a ban on further regulation of abortion clinics, citing AIDS as a growing threat to women and health-care workers.

But pro-choice activists and clinic operators said the request was covering up a hidden agenda of Gov. Martinez, who is seeking re-election. The real purpose behind the request, they said, is not the safety of women, but rather an effort to make it more difficult to operate clinics and to get safe, inexpensive abortions.

NEA BILL WITH NO RESTRICTIONS SENT TO HOUSE; MAJOR BATTLE EXPECTED

Legislation extending the life of the National Endowment for the Arts for five years with no restrictions on its grant-making process was sent to the floor of the House Tuesday, setting the stage for a full-scale fight over the embattled agency.

"It's going to be a horrific, horrendous battle," said a congressional staffer.

Democrats and Republicans on the House Education and Labor Committee agreed not to offer any amendments to the bill, which consists of the Bush Administration's original reauthorization proposal, until it is taken up on the House floor sometime in mid-July.... "The committee has chosen this course not because it is the path of least resistance but because it will provide all members of the House the best opportunity for a meaningful and thoughtful consideration of this difficult, complex and critically important matter," said Rep. Pat Williams.

(Stephen Salisbury, Knight-Ridder)

House Panel Sends NEA Bill To Floor

The House Education and Labor Committee made no changes Tuesday to a bill that would reauthorize the National Endowment for the Arts without restrictions, instead sending the bill to the House floor for expected political fireworks and major revamping.

"The intent is not to escape the issue, but to let everyone in the House vote on the issue," said Rep. Paul Henry....

Senior Administration officials said the White House was pleased that the NEA funding bill was sent to the House floor unchanged.

"This is what the Republicans on the Hill want to happen, which is hold off in committee so we get a chance for our members to vote on the floor," said a senior Administration official. "There will be an open enough rule that the different factions within the party will at least get a shot at the bill, so this is fine."

(Major Garrett, Washington Times, A1)

NEA/House

The controversy over obscenity, censorship and the federal funding of the arts is headed for a stormy confrontation on the House floor next month after a committee decided Tuesday that this was one problem it just wouldn't touch.

By a voice vote, the members of the House Education and Labor Committee left it up to all 435 House members to decide whether an Administration bill continuing the life of the NEA for the next five years should include restrictions on funding art that might be considered objectionable....

"NEA has the best track record of any federal agency in the last 25 years," Rep. Fred "Gopher" Grandy told the committee. "HUD would kill for a record like this."

But Rep. Pat Williams, a liberal..., predicted that for all his opposition to limiting the agency, "the chances are less than 50-50 that the bill will pass the House without restrictions." ...

Tuesday, after learning of the committee vote, Rep. Rohrabacher said he was working on further restrictions to bar funds for any obscene work. (Myron Waldman, Newsday)

EPA CHIEF WILL RECOMMEND VETO IF JOBS AID PROVISION STANDS

William Reilly, administrator of the EPA, says he will recommend that President Bush veto clean air legislation if the final bill contains a jobs protection amendment when it reaches the White House.

"I consider it bad environmental policy, bad social policy and bad economic policy," Reilly said Tuesday in discussing a provision that would assist workers who lose their jobs because of the tougher air pollution requirements. (AP)

BUSH ADMINISTRATION EXPECTED TO DECLARE SPOTTED OWL A THREATENED SPECIES

Concluding a review process that in the past has been corrupted by political influence, the Bush Administration plans to announce this week its decision on whether to protect the northern spotted owl by declaring it a threatened species.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, part of the Interior Department, is expected to conclude that the owl is threatened with extinction throughout its dwindling old-forest habitat in the Pacific Northwest, according to congressional and Administration sources.

"The decision is going to be to list the bird; there is no question about that," said an aide to Sen. Hatfield.

INTERIOR SECRETARY SAYS DALLAS WORKERS DIDN'T BREAK LAW

Secretary Lujan said Tuesday that an investigation of misconduct charges involving the department's Dallas office indicated that some employees were "partying pretty heavily" but did not break the law.

Lujan said he was displeased by the inspector general's report of employee behavior in the Dallas office of the Minerals Management Service. But he said he was convinced that no criminal wrongdoing occurred.

"The Justice Department said there was no violation of law. But that doesn't mean there was no violation of personal conduct," Lujan said. "I think it was a bunch of guys away from home partying and partying pretty heavily."

PERCENTAGE OF BLACK HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES
CLOSE TO WHITES', COMMERCE SAYS

The percentage of black high school graduates rose in the decade between 1978 and 1988 to approach the percentage rate of whites, according to a U.S. Commerce Department report.

An analysis of national census data indicates that in 1988, 75 percent of blacks and 82 percent of whites, aged 18 to 24, graduated from high school, compared with 68 percent for blacks and 83 percent for whites 10 years earlier.

The data indicated no change in the graduation or dropout rate for Hispanics during the same period, the report said.

HISPANIC DROPOUT RATE EXCEEDS BLACKS, WHITES

More blacks are finishing high school but fewer are going to college, says a Census Bureau report issued Tuesday.

The report, which compares 1988 with 1978, also points out that Hispanics continue to drop out of high school at a much higher rate than either black or white students.

CAMPAIGN FINANCE PLAN DRAWING FIRE IN HOUSE

The chairman of a Democratic task force on campaign finance reform has proposed changes in the law regulating political action committee contributions that even some Democrats charge will do little to reduce the influence of PACs on congressional campaigns.

However, Speaker Foley said Tuesday that he supports the proposal by the task force chairman, Rep. Swift. The two Democratic leaders plan to meet this week to discuss Swift's campaign finance package, which includes a broad array of changes involving PACs, voluntary campaign spending limits, "soft money," independent expenditures and other financing issues.

Swift began circulating his proposal last week and it is already drawing fire, both from outside advocates of more sweeping revisions in campaign financing and from House Democrats who fear their party will lose the high ground on campaign finance reform if they don't push for greater restrictions on PACs.

PANEL EXPECTED TO REBUKE REP. FRANK
3 Republicans On Ethics Committee May Oppose Mild Sanction

After weeks of deadlock, the House ethics committee is preparing to override the objections of Republicans who favor a stronger punishment and issue only a mild rebuke to Rep. Frank for his relationship with a male prostitute, according to two members of the panel.

As many as three Republicans on the committee could vote against the decision to send Frank a letter reproofing his conduct when the panel meets next Tuesday, according to the lawmakers, who asked not to be identified. (Tom Kenworthy, Washington Post, A12)

BARRY USED DRUGS FREQUENTLY, LEWIS TESTIFIES

Convicted drug dealer Charles Lewis testified Tuesday that he used cocaine and crack with D.C. Mayor Barry almost nonstop on two trips the mayor took to the Virgin Islands, and that Barry arrived at Lewis's hotel room at a downtown Washington Ramada Inn in December 1988 with crack, ready to smoke it....

Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Roberts said Tuesday that the event triggered the investigation and ensuing criminal case against Barry.... In a dramatic opening statement, Roberts said that the government will try to prove that Barry was a longtime abuser of hard drugs who hypocritically denounced drugs while he was "putting dope up his nose."

GEPHARDT CELEBRATES ONE YEAR ON TOP WITH GROWING ENDORSEMENTS

For House Majority Leader Gephardt, the self-styled "king of meetings," perhaps the ultimate test in bridging differences was two days in Panama in January with Rep. Gingrich....

"I got a chance to see him in a way that Republicans don't usually get to do," Gingrich recalled in an interview last week. "From that point on, I concluded that he was a very intense student of the business of government.... I came back from the Panama trip, and I said to the White House...that there were genuine grounds of national interest where they'd find common purpose."

One year after Gephardt's election to the job as majority leader, he's riding a surprising wave of praise that runs from as far right as Gingrich through the mainstream of his party and -- in recent weeks, at least -- on to the White House of President Bush.

FLAG

ABC's Peter Jennings: We begin tonight with the issue that has taken over the political debate in Washington -- not how to reduce the deficit, not how or where to cut the military budget, but where to stand on flag-burning and how not to be trampled in the process. The proposed constitutional amendment to prohibit desecration of the flag cleared one more hurdle today on its way to full debate in the House of Representatives. The issue now is when will the full House debate it.

ABC's Jim Wooten: To get to the House floor the volatile amendment had to get through this House committee, Judiciary, whose irascible chairman, Democrat Brooks of Texas, had always been dead-set against it. Today, he said, he changed his mind.

(Rep. Brooks: "I believe it's appropriate and necessary for us to proceed through the means of advancing the constitutional amendment before us today.")

And it was his vote that quashed a move to send the amendment to the floor with an unfavorable recommendation. That was a defeat for those who, like Democrat Glickman of Kansas, view it as an assault on the Bill of Rights.

(Rep. Glickman: "We should not move to save the symbol by undermining that which it symbolizes.")

And Democrat Schroeder of Colorado objected to the political exploitation of the amendment.

(Rep. Schroeder: "And I have been absolutely appalled by the statements of politicians about, 'Here it is, here it is. Vote for the amendment. This is your asbestos underwear for the year. Buy this and you are home free. You've got a ticket to re-election.'") Then she and most of the other Democrats killed a motion to give the amendment a favorable recommendation. That angered Republicans like Gekas of Pennsylvania.

(Rep. Gekas: "The American people want this to happen and they want it to happen now.")

So finally after hours of haggling Chairman Brooks had his way. The committee's recommendation to the full House: no recommendation at all. The question now is when will the House vote on the amendment. Those who oppose it want to do it this week, Thursday afternoon, because they think they've got the votes to kill it. Those who are for the amendment would like a delay to give members one more weekend to feel the political pressure at home.

Jennings: On the day the Supreme Court struck down a flag-protection law last week, Sen. Dole suggested that a new constitutional flag amendment would inspire plenty of political commercials. He wasn't kidding.

ABC's Cokie Roberts: As members of Congress see the patriotic fervor for the flag amendment, the veterans groups vociferously endorsing it, they start imagining those same pictures captured in a 30-second campaign commercial.

Roberts continues: And it makes voting against the amendment look like a scary proposition.

(Sen. Dole: "When you vote against it, you go home, I think you're going to hear from a lot of people. It would make a good 30-second spot.")

Fear of the 30-second political ad reached new heights after the 1988 presidential campaign when Republicans successfully conveyed an image of the Democratic candidate as soft on crime and soft on defense. Now no one wants to be soft on the flag.

(Rep. Matsui: "I don't think there's any question that on this the 30-second TV commercial and the damage it could do to a candidate during an election year is what's motivating members to vote for the constitutional amendment.")

Opponents of the flag amendment are trying to turn the tables to show the supporters as political weaklings cowed by commercials.

(Sen. Kennedy: "Stirred by fears of sound bites and 30-second spots, senators who should know better are expressing willingness to sacrifice the Bill of Rights.")

Supporters of the flag amendment counter it's fair game.

(Rep. Gingrich: "Everybody who's in this business by now should be a mature adult about the fact that the television news has invented the nine-second sound bite and television advertising invented the 30-second commercial, and you better learn to live with them.")

Members of Congress have learned to live with the 30-second spots by running scared and voting scared. Even though most get re-elected they still try to duck the tough issues for fear of how they'll play in half a minute.

(ABC-Lead, NBC-8, CBS-5)

S&L

Jennings: There was an effort today to turn the tables on another political issue: Who is to really blame for the colossal S&L disaster. The finger has often been pointed at Republicans because President Reagan was such a champion of deregulation. As that argument goes, it was deregulation that let the S&Ls gamble away billions of dollars. Today the Bush Administration tried to get off the hook by blaming the Democrats.

ABC's Brit Hume:

[TV COVERAGE of the President sitting with congressional leaders in the Cabinet Room.]

At his weekly meeting with Republican leaders this morning the President was warned by Senate GOP leader Dole that the Democrats are trying to make the S&L crisis and bailout a major political issue. The Administration hardly needed to be told that with yet another hearing underway in the House on the failed Colorado S&L where the President's son, Neil, was a director, and has been accused of conflict of interest. And on the House floor, where the Democratic leadership has passed out political talking points on the issue, another in a series of Democratic speeches accusing the Administration of negligence in prosecuting S&L operators. The speeches go like this.

(Rep. Wise: "With this Administration on savings and loans the taxpayer calls 911 and has been put on hold for a year.")

At the White House right after that meeting with GOP leaders, Press Secretary Fitzwater counterattacked.

Hume continues: "I'm saying the Democrats have a big role in it," he said, mentioning a number of Democrats. "Take a look at all of them. If they want to make this a political issue we'll be glad to do it." This afternoon one of the Democrats Fitzwater mentioned said the Administration is trying to intimidate members of Congress.

(Sen. Kerrey: "If you get too critical on this thing we might have some things on you. We might leak some information to the press on you as well. We might have something down in our files here on you, senator.")

(Sen. Dole: "I applaud Mr. Fitzwater and I hope he keeps it up.") You might get the idea that something important has happened to change the atmosphere on this issue, which the Administration and Congress were cooperating to resolve only months ago. Well, the cost of the thrift bailout has gotten higher, but the main thing seems to be that the fall congressional election has gotten closer.

(ABC-2)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: Another hot political issue, the S&L scandal - something that affects every American. Congressional Democrats and the White House now have started playing the blame game. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater today issued an unusually strong warning to Democrats saying they are as much to blame as anyone. The Democrats fired back, one saying that George Bush doesn't want to do much about the problem. Another called Bush the S&L President.

Brokaw talks with NBC's John Cochran:

Brokaw: Does this response from Marlin Fitzwater mean that the Democrats are getting close on this issue?

Cochran: It does. For a long time now there's been an unspoken agreement among Democrats and Republicans that if they start attacking each other, blaming each other for the S&L fiasco, then everyone, both sides, will get hurt. But over the last week the Democrats have gone on the attack. In fact, today the House Democratic leadership was issuing so-called talking points to its members urging Democrats to go after the President, accuse him of, for example, foot dragging in prosecuting cases of S&L fraud. Here at the White House Sen. Dole told President Bush the Democrats will definitely use this as a big campaign issue this fall in the congressional races. A short time later, Marlin Fitzwater walked out and said if the Democrats want to play hardball the White House will do the same. He accused the Democrats of playing a major role in the S&L fiasco.

(NBC-9)

CBS's Dan Rather: There was some scrambling by President Bush, those around him and in Congress this day on the S&L deregulation, mismanagement and corruption mess now costing taxpayers billions for a bailout. The scrambling wasn't over a solution or about punishing the guilty, but about who gets the blame in this election year.

CBS's Wyatt Andrews: The Democrats think they have finally found the key issue that might help put a dent in the President's 70 percent popularity rating.

Andrews continues: Today it became clear they think the S&L bailout issue is that issue, and that to the Democrats taxpayer outrage over the estimated $3 to $500 billion cost of that bailout can be exploited. Democrats left a strategy session today armed with a six-page list of political talking points on the bailout, and then went on the attack in both the Senate and House. One key tactic is to accuse the President of concealing from taxpayers the bailout's true cost.

(Rep. Lawrence Smith: "Mr. Bush has tried to hide the size of the problem he helped create, consistently underestimating the cost to the taxpayer, then striving to keep the bailout off budget.")

Another tactic, paint the Republicans as the party that will raise taxes to bail out rich or criminal investors.

(Sen. Pryor: "I cannot go home and explain to those people in a town hall meeting why these crooks are not in jail and why the American taxpayer is going to have to pay for their yacht, their Jaguar, their mansion, their villa, their Mercedes. I can't explain it.")

(Sen. Dole: "There's plenty of blame to go around, and to stand up on the floor and attack the President may be good sport, but we're not -- you know, on this side we're going to defend our President.")

The politics are also personal. One House member today charged that savings regulators haven't been aggressive enough in investigating possible wrongdoing by Neil Bush, the President's son and former director of a failed Colorado thrift.

(Rep. Annunzio: "Are the taxpayers going to have to pick up the billion-dollar tab without even knowing whether Neil Bush was right or wrong? Mr. Chairman, why hasn't there been further action on this case?")

The White House seemed to have seen all of this coming and today went on its own offensive. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater attacked the Democrats for passing those laws that deregulated the thrifts in the first place, and now in Washington this has become a finger-pointing contest with taxes on the table that both sides believe they must win.

AIDS

Jennings: Hundreds of people around the country today, many of them AIDS activists, took to the streets to protest a 1987 immigration law barring people with the AIDS virus from entering the U.S. The demonstrators, some of whom were arrested, timed their demonstrations to coincide with the sixth International AIDS Conference opening tomorrow in San Francisco, opening without many participants who are vehemently opposed to the restrictions on travel.

ABC's George Strait reports that the International Red Cross, the World Health Organization, and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control all feel the U.S. immigration policy discourages people from getting tested for fear they won't be allowed into the U.S. The President says he can't change the law. But Congress says he has broad discretionary powers to eliminate the prohibition against people infected with the AIDS virus from coming into this country - powers his own health advisers have urged him to use.

Strait continues:

(James Mason, U.S. Assistant Secretary For Public Health: "It is frustrating. We are very disappointed -- it's an embarrassment. We and a few other very backward nations are the ones that are discriminating in terms of immigration policy against people with HIV infection.")

In the face of boycotts, more than 100 of the governments and organizations scheduled to come to this conference, the Administration did grant a 10-day waiver for participants infected with HIV. But for most, that's not enough.

(Rep. Waxman: "What the Bush Administration has done is made a political call based on the advice of their political advisers rather than their health advisers.")

The immigration policy, not news about the epidemic, threatens to become a focal point of the conference, which on its eve 50 governments and organizations are still planning to boycott.

Jennings: The situation on the eve of this conference is regarded as so volatile that Secretary of Health Sullivan will be helicoptered in, and some federal health officials will be given Secret Service escorts.

GUN CONTROL

Brokaw: Once again tonight, guns -- who gets them and what they do with them. That massacre in Jacksonville, FL, has reignited the controversy -- eight people shot to death, five wounded by a man with a violent past in a state with the most wide open gun laws in the country in a state with the highest crime rate in the country.

Brokaw talks with Marion Hammer or the NRA and Florida state congressman Ron Silver about gun control.
(NBC-Lead)

BARRY

Rather: The jury heard opening arguments today in the criminal trial of Washington, D.C. Mayor Marion Barry on cocaine and perjury charges. Barry maintains that he is the victim of illegal government entrapment and selective prosecution. The Barry case highlights a growing controversy about drug crime in this country, law enforcement priorities, and racial stereotypes.

(CBS-Lead, ABC-3, NBC-2)

DRUGS WAR/RACE

CBS's Richard Roth reports that soldiers in the war on drugs are mostly white, their prisoners almost always black. In America's big cities most of those arrested for cocaine crimes are black and poor. Yet the surprising fact is authorities estimate 80 percent of all cocaine users are white and typically well-off. Whites have become the almost invisible enemy in the war on drugs, less likely to be arrested for drug crimes based on their rate of use and when arrested less likely to serve time in jail.

(Reggie Walton, National Drug Control Policy: "Clearly there's a significant drug problem in non-minority communities. But the problem unfortunately manifests itself in its worst sense in minority communities.")

Roth continues: And there's a reason. More than 70 percent of the federal anti-drug effort is in law enforcement, not treatment or prevention. And most law enforcement goes where drug dealing is most open -- not to offices or suburban enclaves, but to the streets, like the streets of Chicago's west side. Police say it's not racism. But the focus on street crime has skewed the statistics. Nationally blacks account for an estimated 12 percent of drug use. In Chicago, blacks account for 75 percent of drug arrests. It's made skin color a cause for suspicion, according to teenagers who say the war on drugs targets them every day. The problem, in other words, isn't only in the image, but also in a strategy for fighting the drug war that divides the battlefield into black and white. (CBS-2)

ECONOMY

Jennings: In economic news today, no let-up for the slump in the housing industry. Construction of new homes dropped 1.4 percent last month, and that is the lowest level in eight years. (ABC-5, CBS-11)

ROMANIA

Jennings reports that in Bucharest tomorrow no American officials will be on hand when President Iliescu is sworn into office. U.S. diplomats will boycott the ceremonies to protest the way the government put down opposition demonstrations last week. (ABC-7)

SOVIET REFORM

Jennings: Appearing before the Russian Communist Party today President Gorbachev gave a ringing defense of his economic and political reforms, but his critics in this, the largest Soviet republic, were not much impressed. They were all over him again.

ABC's Jim Laurie reports that the Soviet leadership paid its respects today to the party's founder at Lenin's tomb. But as the communists staged a dress rehearsal for next month's national Communist Party Congress, they might well have been mourning the loss of the party as it once was. At the Russian conference, Mikhail Gorbachev was fighting both to reform the party and hold it together. Two seats away sat Boris Yeltsin. But among delegates, party conservatives -- not reformers -- seemed in the majority. They attacked Gorbachev for pursuing contradictory policies, one saying, "We are surrendering our leading position in society without a fight." One hard-liner even demanded Gorbachev resign as party chief. Gorbachev reportedly offered angrily to resign, a move that was quickly rejected, but the incident again underscored the danger that disgruntled conservatives present to all his efforts to reform the Communist Party. (ABC-8, NBC-3)

SOUTH AFRICA

Jennings: Official change in South Africa today. Parliament repealed a law which for 37 years had racially segregated hospitals, libraries, town halls and other public facilities. Today's action, which was proposed last November by President de Klerk, was called a small step by the black ANC. (ABC-6, CBS-9)

TERRORIST SUSPECT

Jennings: Yet another suspected terrorist wanted in West Germany has been arrested in East Germany. A suspect in the 1981 bombing of a U.S. air base in West Germany, Henning Bier [phonetic], was arrested yesterday. He is the ninth suspected member of the Red Army faction to be taken into custody in the last two weeks. It is believed they were given protection by the old East German secret police. With the change in relations between East and West Germany, the protection is apparently gone. (ABC-9)

FUZZY TECHNOLOGY

ABC's Bill Redecker reports that Japan is producing machines that think and act like humans. The brain is a tiny computer chip that uses a new technology with a contradictory sounding name, Fuzzy Logic. In simple terms Fuzzy Logic is a branch of computer mathematics that simulate the uncertainties found in everyday life. Most computers can make either yes or no decisions. Everything is either black or white. Fuzzy Logic goes beyond that, recognizing shades of gray. In household appliances it enables machines to automatically adjust to even the slightest changes as they occur. A Fuzzy Logic air conditioner senses how many people are in a room, cools it down five times faster than a conventional model, and uses 24 percent less electricity. The only thing really fuzzy about the technology is that it was created in America but then ignored by American manufacturers. NASA has just completed tests that show Fuzzy Logic computers could make the Space Shuttle not only more reliable, but also 30 percent more fuel-efficient. (ABC-11)

GENERIC DRUGS

Rather: The former director of the FDA's generic drug division, Marvin Seife, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Baltimore today. Charges, two counts of lying about his dealings with generic drug makers. This is the latest outgrowth of a two-year investigation into FDA regulation, or lack of it, in guaranteeing the quality and safety of generic drugs. (CBS-7)

FLAG

Democrats, Stand Your Ground -- "...Just as voters reject the GOP's threat to tamper with the Constitution, they should insist that the Democratic Party stand fast in an uncompromising defense of the Bill of Rights.... Hold firm, Democrats: Don't debase your party's civil-libertarian tradition by weighing any compromise with the Republicans' cynicism. The voters will remember, and reward, candidates of both parties who affirm that the sacred Bill of Rights should remain unchanged as it guards citizens' freedoms."

(Cleveland Plain Dealer, 6/18)

Hands Off The Bill Of Rights -- "...America has gone for more than 200 years without tampering with the Bill of Rights. Take a step on that slippery slope now, and there's no telling what will be targeted next. Sure, it's contemptible that a few jerks abuse their constitutional freedom. But that shouldn't stampede Washington into an unnecessary, potentially harmful act. Congress should let passions cool. And keep its hands off the Bill of Rights."

(New York Daily News, 6/13)

Lift Every Voice To Savor Freedom -- "...The prospects for politicizing this issue through a lengthy verbal battle in Congress are inestimable.... All Americans who value their rights should discourage such a course. The issue is no longer flag destruction. As Sen. Mitchell put it: 'The question before us is whether or not after 200 years, the American Bill of Rights -- the most concise, the most eloquent, the most effective statement of individual liberty in all of human history -- is to be changed.' Indeed, the nation's greatest concern should be the calculated limitation of rights for political reasons, and not their abuse."

(Milwaukee Sentinel, 6/13)

Bush Is Caught Again On His Campaign Hook -- "...[President Bush] is clear-eyed enough to know that this amendment doesn't really touch on any real problem the nation faces, and he's pragmatic enough to be mainly concerned about real problems. But he campaigned for president in defense of the flag.... A ban on flag-burning is like -- well, like waving a red flag in front of protesters. They love publicity. A ban heightens it. Or if some should really be frightened by a ban, they could paint dirty slogans on the flag and wave it or wear it. Then what do we do? Ban objectionable writing on the flag? Ban the American flag from being worn by certain people? The flag stands for liberties and grand values. Patriotism is advanced more by respecting and living and defending those values than by playing into the hands of a few protesters who want an idol to burn."

(Dayton Daily News, 6/13)

The Flag-Burning Mess -- "...Had the court ruled correctly in the first place, the flag-burners and all others would have been protected in speaking whatever they wish -- but burning the flag would have properly remained against the law.... No one should be misled by those who claim this is somehow an attack upon the First Amendment. It is not. It would not change the real meaning of the First Amendment one bit. 'Freedom of speech' would remain. The proposed constitutional amendment would only allow prohibition of disrespectful flag-burning." (Chattanooga News-Free Press, 6/12)

No Amendment Need Apply -- "...This strikes us as a needlessly divisive and time-consuming issue for Congress and the states to ponder this season, bound up as it will be in election-year politics. And the President should be careful about attaching his prestige to such ambiguous prospects. The fact that a tiny handful of cranks and malcontents might provoke their fellow citizens should not provoke us into exaggerated action. We Americans tend to revere our flag, and are happy to pledge our allegiance to it 'and to the republic for which it stands.' Why give those who hold our ideals in contempt the satisfaction of attention?"

(Providence Journal, 6/13)

Flag Burning -- Bush Is Missing An Opportunity -- "...If Americans aren't free to express disgust with their government, they aren't free at all. It's a substantial disappointment, therefore, that President Bush intends to pursue a constitutional amendment to outlaw flag-burning.... Freedom of expression is essential to government of the people, by the people and for the people. If President Bush turned around and used the power of the presidency to underscore that point, he would advance the cause of freedom no small distance. The news that the President of the U.S. is subservient to its citizens -- and strongly defends their right to insult his government -- would get the point across nicely. Gorbachev and the Chinese would find that a tough act to follow."

(Charleston Daily Mail, 6/12)

Flag Games -- "...President Bush has now made himself the first American president in some years to stand firmly and explicitly in favor of limiting the right to free political expression -- for burning a flag or wearing it on the seat of your pants constitutes expression just as picketing or other symbolic actions do.... As one White House official generously explained to a reporter, Mr. Bush 'is not going to demagogue on this. That's what he's got Dole for.'... But Mr. Bush seems to be making rapid progress in the demagoguery department without senatorial assistance."

(Washington Post, 6/14)

Bush, Congress Can Best Protect Flag By Leaving It Alone -- "...Those with the fortitude to resist a constitutional amendment will display the true patriotism, which is dedication to this nation's most sacred principles of freedom. Those who climb on President Bush's bandwagon know only shallow allegiance to a piece of cloth. The nation, the Constitution and Old Glory deserve a Congress of courage which will do its patriotic duty by rejecting Bush's misguided effort to improve on the Bill of Rights."

News From the Hill

HOUSE FLOOR: First appropriations bill considered.

The House yesterday took up a $21 billion energy and water development spending bill (HR 5019) for fiscal 1991 that would fund Department of Energy (DOE) nuclear energy and weapons and renewable energy research programs, the federal power marketing administrations and a variety of government irrigation and flood control projects.

The bill calls for a 66 percent increase for DOE efforts to decontaminate the areas surrounding government nuclear weapons facilities.

The House rejected, 98-314, an amendment by Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., that would have reduced the bill's total spending level to the fiscal 1990 level, which was $18.7 billion. The amendment would have enacted an across-the-board cut of 10.5 percent in all discretionary accounts in the bill.

An amendment by James H. Scheuer, D-N.Y., accepted by voice vote, would raise from $300,000 to $1.3 million the bill's earmark for DOE's program to reduce, and eventually eliminate, U.S. exports of weapons-grade uranium for use in overseas reactors by developing fuels with lower enrichment levels.

Late yesterday, the House was still considering amendments to the spending bill.

SENATE FLOOR: Housing bill negotiators seek compromise.

The Senate continued work on an omnibus housing bill (S 566), while key senators and administration officials met privately during most of the day to work out a compromise.

The administration opposes several key features of the three-year, $58 billion measure. The negotiators were hoping to work out an agreement covering administration objections that the bill places too much emphasis on construction, rather than rehabilitation of housing. The administration also favors more targeting of funds to the very poor and wants changes to improve the health of the Federal Housing Administration. One change sought by the administration would raise the minimum downpayment for an FHA-backed loan by $900.

In floor action on the bill, senators acted on a number of non-controversial amendments, including one that would provide public housing authorities additional funds to help tenants pay summer cooling bills.

The Senate backed an amendment unrelated to the housing bill by John Heinz, R-Pa., that would require the Senate to deal with the Social Security budget this summer.

The amendment, approved 96-2, will prevent the Senate from considering an increase in the debt limit if Congress has not acted on legislation to remove Social Security from the budget for purposes of calculating the deficit.

Treasury officials predict that Congress will have to act to raise the debt ceiling before it begins its August recess.

BUDGET TALKS continue with first discussion of revenues.

White House and congressional budget negotiators discussed revenues yesterday although no specific proposals were put on the table. Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., told reporters, "My hope is tomorrow afternoon we'll start serious negotiations."

The senator added that he would put forward a deficit-reduction proposal if no one else does.

Sen. Wyche Fowler Jr., D-Ga., said, "We hope we will have a proposal from the president of the United States. We await that decision."

Earlier in the day, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney outlined the budgetary impact of a 25 percent cut in the nation's

Today

Floor Action: The Senate will continue work on a three-year housing authorization bill (S 566). The House schedule calls for action on the fiscal 1991 appropriations bill (HR 5021) for the departments of Commerce, Justice, State, the judiciary and related agencies.

Labor-HHS Funding: The annual fight over whether federal funds should be used to pay for abortions for poor women gets under way as a House Appropriations subcommittee marks up a $176.7 billion measure for labor, health and education programs.

The Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education Subcommittee's bill would boost funding $20 billion over spending for this year.

Subcommittee Chairman William H. Natcher, D-Ky., has fought hard against loosening present restrictions on using federal money to fund abortions. But the shift in abortion politics since last year's Webster v. Reproductive Health Services Supreme Court decision that gave states more latitude in restricting abortions has brought the issue to center stage of Natcher's bill.

While Natcher's language barring federal funds for abortions unless the mother's life is endangered should easily survive today's markup, it will surely come under attack when the bill reaches the floor.

Securities Bills: Two bills aimed at cracking down on abuses in the securities markets will be considered by a House Energy and Commerce subcommittee.

The Telecommunications and Finance Subcommittee will mark up a bill (HR 4497) aimed at tighter regulation of the "penny stock" market and a measure (HR 975) to give the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) greater power military force. Figures prepared by Cheney showed that such a cut in force structure would reduce overall military spending by about 10 percent in inflation-adjusted dollars over the next five years.

That is close to what President Bush's January budget proposal called for, and some Democrats — notably House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis. — complained that the cuts should be closer to 18 percent to 27 percent.

Aspin, in a memo released late Monday, accused the defense secretary of devising a "mismatch" study that doesn't achieve much savings. "The good news was that Cheney would entertain such a cut," Aspin said in his memo. "The bad news was that he believes it can be done while cutting the defense budget by only 10 percent over the same period."

Aspin sent the memo to Majority Leader Richard A. Gephardt, D-Mo., and House Budget Committee Chairman Leon Panetta, D-Calif., two of the most important Democrats in the budget negotiations.

CHILD-CARE conference marginally closer to completion.

Members of one of two sub-conferences on the massive child-care bill (HR 3) announced yesterday they have largely completed their work.

But the negotiators, largely representing the House Education and Senate Labor panels, still had two important issues to resolve. And the second group of conferees, representing the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees, still had much work to do on their portion of the bill. No meeting of that subgroup is scheduled.

During yesterday's session, the conferees agreed to authorize $1.875 billion in fiscal 1991 to expand Head Start, for school-based day care and for payments to day-care providers and parents.

But conferees did not agree on how the funds should be allocated among the three major programs. The negotiators also left unresolved the issue of whether school districts should be required to share some of their money with non-school providers that would contract with the school districts.

TRADE CONFERENCE still unresolved; chairmen to meet.

Conferees met for a short time yesterday on legislation (HR 1594) that would renew and extend trade laws giving special treatment to Caribbean Basin nations. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, and House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., announced that they would meet together with their respective staffs to try to resolve some of the major sticking points in the conference before calling back the conferees.

One major unresolved issue includes how much and what types of ethanol products will be allowed to enter the United States duty free. Members from midwestern states, where ethanol feedstock grains are also produced, are opposed to duty-free treatment for Caribbean nations.

House conferees tentatively agreed to drop a sugar provision that is in their bill but not in the Senate version. Regarding the sugar provisions, Ways and Means Trade Subcommittee Chairman Sam M. Gibbons, D-Fla., told the Senate negotiators, "We dropped a pretty big bag of chips — about enough to cover everything else in the bill."

FLAG-BURNING amendment approved with no recommendation.

The House Judiciary Committee yesterday approved a proposed constitutional amendment to ban burning of the American flag, sending the resolution (H J Res 350) to the House floor without making a recommendation for or against it.

Five Democrats joined 14 Republicans in the 19-17 committee vote to move the proposed amendment to the floor. The full House could vote on the resolution as early as tomorrow.

Before that tally, the panel voted, 17-19, against a motion to report the proposal favorably and rejected, 18-18, a motion to report it unfavorably. Two amendments by William J. Hughes, D-N.J., to narrow the scope of the amendment also were defeated.

House Democratic leaders opposed to the constitutional amendment met yesterday to plot strategy to block it. To become part of the Constitution, the resolution would need a vote by a two-thirds majority of both chambers and the approval of 38 or more state legislatures.

NEA BILL moves to House floor free of obscenity standards.

As expected, the House Education and Labor Committee yesterday approved with no amendments HR 4825, a bill to reauthorize the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) and the National Endowment for the Humanities. The bill was approved on a voice vote. Although no one offered any revisions to the bill, there was plenty of discussion as to whether the five-year reauthorization should include some language to set obscenity standards for NEA grants.

Postsecondary Education Subcommittee Chairman Pat Williams, D-Mont., explained that a bipartisan agreement had been reached to offer no amendments until the bill reached the House floor.

Some panel members agreed with Williams' plan reluctantly. Democrats

Joseph M. Gaydos, Pa., and Glenn Poshard, Ill., and Republican Steve Bartlett, Texas, said that they felt the committee should include some form of content restrictions before moving the bill forward.

Other Republicans on the committee said they were willing to wait until floor action — expected sometime in mid-July — to settle the debate on obscenity standards. They extracted assurances from Williams that the bill would come to the floor under a rule allowing for a number of GOP amendments.

Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, a former television actor, was the only Republican to defend the bill as put forward by Williams and the Bush administration — with no obscenity restrictions at all. "I will not sign off on legislation that tries to police the human imagination..." Grandy said.

DAIRY SECTION of farm bill wins Senate panel's approval.

The Senate Agriculture Committee yesterday gave voice vote approval to the dairy title of the omnibus 1990 farm bill it has been working on for several months.

The panel voted to keep the dairy subsidy at the current $10.10 per hundredweight for the next five years. However, if government purchases of surplus cheese, butter and nonfat dry milk exceed seven billion pounds in any year, the agriculture secretary would be authorized to take steps to lower production.

One option used in the past would not be available, however. By a 16-2 tally, the committee voted to prohibit the agriculture secretary to buy up and slaughter dairy herds — the so-called whole-herd buyout. Beef cattle interests oppose a whole-herd buyout because it creates a glut on the beef market, lowering prices.

The committee will continue work on the farm measure this morning, with action expected on the oil seeds, feed grains and rice provisions.

ENERGY PANEL approves CPSC, telecommunications bills.

A measure designed to revitalize the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) gained easy approval from the House Energy and Commerce Committee yesterday.

The committee also approved bills to require the government to relinquish additional frequencies in the electromagnetic spectrum for commercial use and to reauthorize state energy conservation programs.

The CPSC authorization (HR 4952) would increase the commission's authorization to $42 million for fiscal 1991 — a 20 percent increase over current funding. The bill would also make it easier for the CPSC to assemble a quorum and raise civil penalties for companies that violate commission regulations.

Committee Republicans failed in attempts to strike "product-specific" provisions of the bill that direct the CPSC to take action on products such as three-wheel all-terrain vehicles, amusement park rides and automatic garage doors.

The committee approved the measure (HR 2965) relinquishing frequencies by voice vote. The bill would require the government to give up 200 megahertz of the frequencies it exclusively controls. Supporters of the bill said the action is needed to allow new technologies, such as high definition television, space on the electromagnetic spectrum.

SILVERADO THRIFT closing probed by House Banking.

A member of the House Banking Committee yesterday called on federal regulators to make public whether they have ruled out bringing charges against President Bush's son, Neil, in connection with the failure of a Colorado savings and loan.

"I'm calling on the Office of Thrift Supervision to lift the veil of secrecy which shrouds this matter," Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., said at the outset of the latest in a series of hearings on the failure of the Silverado Banking, Savings and Loan Association of Denver.

In testimony before the committee last month, Neil Bush denied wrongdoing. The panel had been probing whether Neil Bush's business interests in Colorado conflicted with his role as a director of Silverado. He called allegations of conflict of interest "frivolous."

Annunzio cited an undated and unsigned internal Office of Thrift Supervision document which he said contained proposed charges against Neil Bush. But he said no charges were ever brought, nor has there been any indication of whether any charges will be forthcoming from the government. "Can any agency of the United States fairly and impartially investigate the son of the president of the United States?" he asked.

Stan Parris, R-Va., defended Neil Bush, noting that he has declared his innocence and citing a May 22 statement by federal regulators that they could find no basis for issuing a prohibition on his further involvement in the banking industry.

CIVIL RIGHTS compromise might avoid veto, says White House.

The White House said yesterday it was willing to compromise on the Civil Rights Act of 1990 (HR 4000, S 2104) to avoid a presidential veto, but Republican lawmakers expressed doubt that an agreement would be reached soon.

"I don't think anybody wants to see the president veto any civil rights bill. But on the other hand, he's made it quite clear that he wants it changed and he wants the changes to work," Sen. Orrin

G. Hatch, R-Utah, told reporters after a meeting with President Bush.

Bush discussed the civil rights dispute yesterday with GOP congressional leaders. But members said afterward a compromise did not appear to be near.

The administration has been discussing possible compromises in hopes of avoiding a battle over the bill during the visit next week of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela, who is scheduled to meet with Bush on Monday.

Hatch, a senior Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, said he did not believe a deal could be struck before Mandela arrives. He also cautioned Democrats against bringing the matter to the Senate floor during Mandela's visit to try to embarrass the administration.

The legislation would reverse a series of Supreme Court decisions last year that made it harder for workers to bring discrimination suits against employers. It has been approved by committees in both chambers.

TRANSPORTATION spending bill gets nod from House panel.

The House Appropriations Subcommittee on Transportation yesterday approved by voice vote a $13 billion fiscal 1991 spending bill for federal transportation programs.

The measure includes proposed funding increases for roads, airports, airport equipment and a highway aid program. It also calls for more than $600 million for the Amtrak passenger railroad.

BASE-CLOSING layoff benefits urged for federal workers.

Several lawmakers yesterday called for passage of legislation that would provide special employment assistance to civilian federal workers who lose their jobs because of the closing or realignment of U.S. military bases.

Laid-off base employees would get the first crack at government job openings listed by the Office of Personnel Management, if HR 4977 becomes law. Some workers also would be eligible for job training, extra severance pay, extended health benefits and job search and relocation allowances.

The bill is sponsored by Paul E. Kanjorski, D-Pa., chairman of the House Post Office and Civil Service Subcommittee on Human Resources, which held yesterday's hearing.

PANEL WEIGHS favored trade status for China.

President Bush's proposal to renew normal trade status with China won both plaudits and criticism yesterday in a hearing before the House Ways and Means Committee.

President Bush last month announced a one-year renewal of Most Favored Nation (MFN) trade status for China — a move that drew immediate criticism from Capitol Hill. Opponents said the Chinese crackdown on dissidents in Tiananmen Square last year should not be rewarded with the trading status.

Legislation is being prepared in both chambers to overturn that decision.

Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., complained, "we haven't begun to respond to Tiananmen Square yet... and it's time for the U.S. to stand up for principle."

But Frank J. Guarini, D-N.J., said U.S. firms would lose 10,000 jobs if MFN status were not renewed. And, he said that if China loses MFN status, other human rights violators — including South Africa, Iraq and Iran — should also lose their status.

Committee member Don J. Pease, D-Ohio, urged support of a bill (HR 4939) that would continue China's MFN status conditionally through the next year, but would discontinue trade relations if human rights improvements were not made.

ZEBRA MUSSEL threatens fishing industry, witnesses warn.

The zebra mussel and many other exotic species of sealife are invading U.S. waters, and a broad strategy is needed to keep them from wreaking economic and environmental havoc, experts told a Senate Environment subcommittee yesterday.

The river ruffe, spiny water flea and tube-nosed goby soon may become as familiar to the Great Lakes as the zebra mussel, witnesses said at a hearing of the panel's Environmental Protection Subcommittee. Meanwhile, the asiatic clam, Japanese seaweed and the red tide are damaging shellfish and marine industries along the ocean coasts.

The newcomers threaten many native species, interrupt the food chain and pose a danger to the U.S. fishing industry and other segments of the economy, said Gillman D. Veith, director of the Environmental Protection Agency's Office of Research and Development.

Bills pending in the House and Senate would order the Coast Guard to develop and enforce regulations on dumping of ships' ballast water — the suspected source of zebra mussels. ■

Not As Scheduled

Because the markup of a resolution (H J Res 350) on a constitutional amendment to prohibit flag burning lasted several hours yesterday, the House Judiciary Committee was unable to take up a bill (HR 1663) that would restrict the sharing of price information among insurance companies.

The committee plans to take up the measure today.

to levy financial penalties on violators of securities laws.

HR 4497 would require greater disclosure of the financial risks in trading penny stock — low-cost stocks that are not traded on national exchanges. Under the measure, penny stocks would have to be traded through a system that provides firm price quotations and the SEC would have the power to bar unscrupulous penny stock brokers.

HR 975 was introduced by full committee chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., at the request of the SEC. It would give the commission the power to impose fines of up to $500,000 for securities law violations.

Teacher Excellence: The Senate Labor Committee will mark up legislation (S 1676) designed to encourage more people to go into teaching and to improve the skills of teachers currently in the classroom.

One provision in the bill, beginning in 1992, would forgive school loans for those teachers who agree to work for five years in schools where there is a high concentration of poor students. Another provision would give scholarships to college students who promise to teach in predominantly poor school districts.

To help current teachers, S 1676 would establish 10 National Teaching Academies where teachers could upgrade their skills and study their academic discipline in depth.

The bill, approved on a 10-1 vote by the Education Subcommittee June 13, has an estimated cost of $215 million for fiscal 1991.

Merchant Marine Markup: Legislation to establish a marine sanctuary in the Florida Keys and a bill to add an additional 423 miles of fragile coastal barrier islands to the Coastal Barriers Resource System will be marked up by two House Merchant Marine subcommittees.

The Florida Keys bill (HR 3719) would declare off limits a stretch of the Keys in order to protect a living coral reef that has been damaged by several ship groundings. Usually, sanctuaries are designated by the Commerce secretary after a lengthy review process. The bill would bypass that process.

The coastal barriers bill (HR 2840) is aimed at deterring development in the fragile coastal areas by making those who build on such coastal areas ineligible for benefits such as federal disaster relief and housing loans.

The Oceanography and Great Lakes and the Fisheries and Wildlife subcommittees will jointly mark up both bills.

DOLLAR COINS

Senate Banking Committee

The full committee (Acting Chmn Dixon, D-Ill) will hold a hearing on legislation (S 814) to provide for the minting and circulation of one-dollar coins.

1:30pm SD-538 Dirksen Bldg June 20

Background: The U.S. Coinage Reform Act would require that a dollar coin be minted similar to the Susan B. Anthony and the Eisenhower silver dollars, which are no longer in normal circulation. Other countries such as Canada, Great Britain and Australia already have a dollar or pound coin in their currency. Sponsors of the bill say the creation of a dollar coin would save the U.S. Treasury millions of dollars because it would last longer than the paper dollar.

Witnesses scheduled: Sen Domenici, R-NM; Rep Kolbe, R-Ariz

PANEL: Donna Pope - dir, Bureau of the Mint, Treasury Dept; L Nye Stevens - dir, Govt Business Ops Issue Grp, GAO

PANEL: James Benefield - exec dir, The Coin Coalition; Dan Bradley - pres, Wash Plate Printers Union; Raymond Lombra - prof of economics, Penn State Univ, representing Americans for Common Cents

TV CAPTIONING DECODERS FOR THE DEAF

Senate Commerce Committee

Communications Subcommittee (Chmn Inouye, D-Hawaii) will hold a hearing on legislation (S 1974) to require new televisions with screens 13 inches or larger to have built-in decoder circuitry to display closed-captioned television transmissions.

9:30am SR-253 Russell Bldg June 20

Background: The measure would require that decoder circuitry chips for closed captioned shows, which provide words on the screen, be installed in televisions built and imported into the United States. The added feature is a boost for the hearing impaired, but it can also help illiterate people learn to read. Closed captioning can also assist immigrants learn English. Bill opponents are concerned that the decoder chips will unfairly raise the price of television sets for consumers.

Witnesses scheduled: Sen Harkin, D-Iowa
Marlee Matlin - actress; Emma Samms - actress; Sy Dubow - Natl Ctr for the Deaf, Galludet Univ; Rocky Stone - exec dir, Self Help for Hard of Hearing People; Annette Posell - The Caption Ctr; Tom Friel - Electronics Industry Assn; Mark Richer - dir of Engineering, Public Broadcasting System; John Ball - pres, Natl Captioning Inst; Bruce Huber - vpres of marketing, Zenith Electronics Co

FOREIGN SHIPS &U.S. LABOR LAWS MARKUP*House Education and Labor Committee

Labor-Management Relations Subcommittee (Chmn Clay, D-Mo) will mark up legislation (HR 3283) to extend the coverage of certain federal labor laws to ships of foreign registry.

10am 2257 Rayburn Bldg June 20

Background: The bill would apply the Fair Labor Standards and the National Labor Relations Acts to ships that are operating principally out of the United States but are registered under the flag of another country. That would make the ships subject to a variety of wage and health and safety standards. The Bush administration has not taken a position on the bill, but historically the Labor Department has favored setting such standards for these ships, while the State Department has opposed them.

DISADVANTAGED STUDENTSHouse Education and Labor Committee

TOXIC SUBSTANCES TESTINGHouse Government Operations Committee

Environment, Energy and Natural Resources Subcommittee (Chmn Synar, D-Okla) will hold a hearing on problems in the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) Toxic Substances Testing Program.

9:30am 2203 Rayburn Bldg June 20

Background: Under the 1976 Toxic Substances Control Act, EPA can require testing of chemical products and regulate their manufacture and distribution if they prove hazardous. But subcommittee Chairman Mike Synar, D-Okla., says the agency has not implemented the law aggressively, allowing many potentially dangerous products to go on the market untested. EPA officials concede that the testing program has not taken off as expected, but they attribute its slow pace to the myriad of guidelines that govern the program and the huge amounts of information it requires.

Witnesses scheduled: Linda Fisher - asst adminr, EPA; John Walker - rep, Interagency Testing Commn; Richard Hembra - dir, Resources, Community & Economic Development Div, GAO

FEDERAL HEALTH BENEFITSHouse Post Office Committee

Compensation and Employee Benefits Subcommittee (Chmn Ackerman, D-NY) will hold a hearing on legislation (HR 4958) to revise the federal employee health benefit program.

11am 311 Cannon Bldg June 20

Background: The Congressional Research Service reported last year that the federal government contributes to each employee's health benefit plan about $1,100 less per employee than that paid by private sector employers. This has translated into inferior coverage for the 10 million beneficiaries of the federal health benefits program, according to Compensation Subcommittee Chairman Gary L. Ackerman, D-N.Y. Ackerman's bill (HR 4958) would overhaul the health insurance program by simplifying the current 26-option system into a two-track benefits schedule and by tying the premium level closely to the value of coverage for each employee.

Witnesses scheduled: Raymond Bridge - fed employee, Dept of Agriculture; Mary Ann Bealle - wife of fed employee who works at Dept of Agriculture

Congressional Monitor's

Understanding Congress

Congressional Quarterly's editors lead this introductory or refresher course. This basic, fast-paced, authoritative half-day session is a must-have introduction to Congress for anyone new, or returning to the field. Our qualified speakers will give you an orientation to Congress, its committees and leadership, and an introduction to the legislative process and following congressional action. You will leave this program armed with knowledge of how laws are made.

- Learn how the legislative process works and how you can keep track of your bills
- Discover how Congress is organized
- Identify the pressures on Congress and the power of its leaders
- See how issues are placed on the legislative agenda
- Find out whom to contact on congressional staff
- Learn about congressional terminology and essential source materials

Congress and the Legislative Process

This full-day session is for those already familiar with Congress. The program focuses exclusively on the legislative process. Congressional procedures experts who regularly brief members and their staffs provide you with an in-depth look at how the process works and why.

- Learn how legislation is drafted, introduced, sponsored and referred to committee
- Know why some of your bills pass and others never reach the hearing stage
- Discover how members use rules to further their legislative causes
- Differentiate between House and Senate floor procedures
- Learn what House-Senate conferences can negotiate

June 20 • August 21 • October 30
8:30 a.m. - 4:00 p.m. • Fee: $275

WASHINGTON

June 20th- can you believe it?

Dear Distinguished Emissary to Vanuatu,

Thanks for your note and the propoganda on SEE HOW THEY RUN.

I'm not sure I'll agree with all the author sets out, but here, anyway, is my $20 bucks.
I send this along in the hope that there will be a centerfold of Cay in there somewhere ("300 pages, photos and index").

As for Vanuatu I am very pleased you agreed to do this. The mission will not get front page coverage, but it is important. The small countries in the Pacific area are putting great stock in the meeting, which will be attended by heads of State and government.

Lest you have forgotten him, I commend to you the delegation leader, my dear friend Fred Zeder.
He knows the area well having negotitated the important Compact out there. His humor makes Bruce Rounds seem like the Archbishop of Canterbury.

Love to Cay, to the newest Gov in the family, to all Greggs wherever they may be. Forgive my typing. All Best.

THE CANDIDATES: SEE HOW THEY RUN

is the only account of the New Hampshire Presidential Primary written by a true insider. Former Governor Hugh Gregg was New Hampshire Campaign Manager for George Bush, Ronald Reagan, and Nelson Rockefeller.

Foreword by John P. Sears

National Political Analyst

The book is divided into two parts, the first of which recounts the memories and the unique circumstances that led the author into the very axis of early campaign strategy for two U.S. presidents and a vice president. Few native sons of the Granite State have been so totally immersed, over a span of forty years, in the rudiments of our election process.

Part Two of the book delves into "The Organization," "Image," and what he considers "Media Magic." It might be described as a primer for anyone who is interested in active political participation. For the political professional, it is an inside look at the way it was, and why it should continue to be, if we have any chance of keeping average citizens involved in the selection of our president.

Appealing to our common sense, the author warns of impending threats to the electoral system. He dreads the manipulative effects of television, its insatiable thirst for theatrics, and the apathy of the average voter.

THE CANDIDATES: SEE HOW THEY RUN

explores the merits of the New Hampshire Primary and its hard-earned first place stature in the presidential election process, while examining such questions as:

"These men who run for president...what is so special about them? Are they really just great politicians? Or are they truly great men?"

"What role does media play in our elections? Are the pundits and anchors forming our opinions for us?"

"How does a campaign organization work? How and why do people get involved?"

"What is happening to grass-roots involvement and why is it so important to our democratic process?"

"Should political campaigns be dominated by professional strategists and pollsters?"

"How would an earlier California Primary affect the New Hampshire Primary?"

Candidate George Bush and the author, 1979

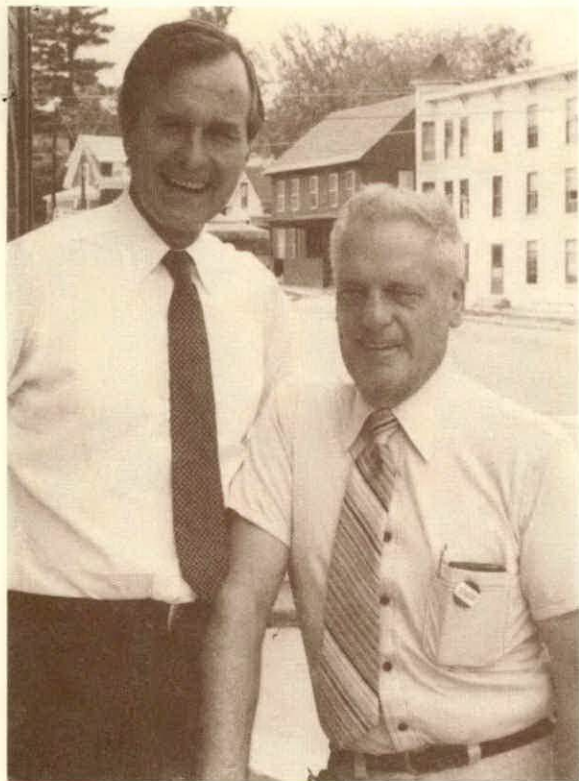

Bonnie Lee Studio

About the Author

Hugh Gregg began his political career as Alderman-at-Large, then Mayor of Nashua, New Hampshire. He was elected Governor at the age of 34 and has devoted much of his life to politics, including the management of presidential, gubernatorial, senatorial and congressional campaigns.

Governor Gregg has had many articles published in newspapers and magazines, but this is his first major work, a true insider's view of the Republican Presidential Primary in the Granite State, and of three distinguished candidates. It is a unique perspective of grass-roots politics.

For a realistic review from over forty years of political experience and fresh anecdotes never before recounted by a participant, Hugh Gregg is a reliable narrator.

RECOMMENDED TELEPHONE CALL BY THE PRESIDENT

TO: Congressman Sherry Boehlert (R-NY) - "leaning against"

DATE: June 20, 1990

RECOMMENDED

BY:

Fred McClure fm

PURPOSE:

To enlist his support in voting for the Michel/Montgomery Constitutional Amendment prohibiting flag desecration.

BACKGROUND:

The Constitutional Amendment will go to the House Floor on Thursday. It will be considered under suspension of the rules, which is an extremely unusual procedure for debating Constitutional Amendments. Congressman Boehlert is opposing the Constitutional Amendment. His support is crucial if we are to crack the coalition of moderate Republicans who are leaning against the amendment.

KEY POINTS:

-- The floor vote is on Thursday.

-- We need approximately 130 House Democrats to join with roughly 150 to 160 House Republicans to get the two-thirds vote of the House needed to pass the Constitutional Amendment.

BY:Fred McChire

PURPOSE:

To enlist his support in voting for the Michel/Montgomery
Constitutional Amendment prohibiting flag desecration.

BACKGROUND:

The Constitutional Amendment will go to the House Floor on Thursday. It will be considered under suspension of the rules, which is an extremely unusual procedure for debating Constitutional amendments. Congressman Conte is undecided about how to vote.

KEY POINTS:

-- The vote is scheduled to occur on Thursday.

-- We need approximately 160 House Republicans to vote with roughly 130 House Democrats in order to get enough votes to secure the two-thirds needed to pass the amendment in the House.

PURPOSE:

To enlist his support in voting for the Michel/Montgomery Constitutional Amendment prohibiting flag desecration.

BACKGROUND:

The Constitutional Amendment will go to the House Floor on Thursday. It will be considered under suspension of the rules, which is an extremely unusual procedure for debating Constitutional amendments. Congressman Frenzel is leaning against the Constitutional Amendment but may be persuaded based on the extraordinary procedural manner in which this is being brought to the floor.

KEY POINTS:

- The vote is Thursday.
- We need approximately 130 Democrats to join with roughly 150 to 160 House Republicans in order to get the two-thirds vote needed to pass the Constitutional Amendment.

TO: Congressman Tom Coleman (R-MO) - "leaning against"

DATE: June 20, 1990

RECOMMENDED BY: Fred McClure FM

PURPOSE: To enlist his support in voting for the Michel/Montgomery Constitutional Amendment prohibiting flag desecration.

BACKGROUND: The Constitutional Amendment will be considered under suspension of the rules on Thursday. Debating Constitutional Amendments under suspension of the rules is extremely unusual. The House Democratic Leadership believes that speed works to its advantage, so they are trying to short-circuit normal House procedures and bring it to the floor as quickly as possible.

KEY POINTS: -- The floor vote is expected to occur on Thursday.
-- We need approximately 130 Democrats to join with roughly 150 to 160 House Republicans to get the two-thirds vote of the House needed to pass the Constitutional Amendment. We are not there yet.

PURPOSE: To enlist his support for the Michel/Montgomery Constitutional Amendment prohibiting flag desecration.

BACKGROUND: The Constitutional Amendment will go to the House Floor on Thursday. It will be considered under suspension of the rules, which is an extremely unusual procedure for debating Constitutional Amendments. Congressman Kolbe does not feel strongly either way about the amendment but is inclined to vote against the amendment because he is not getting a lot of pressure from his district about it. Under those circumstances, he is reluctant to support a Constitutional amendment.

KEY POINTS:

- The floor vote is expected to occur on Thursday.

Rather continues: Mandela was greeted by hugs and handshakes and promises of help.

(Gov. Cuomo: "We must continue the use of sanctions and every other reasonable and effective device we can find until apartheid is only a terrible memory.")

Mandela was pleased, urging the leaders to keep up sanctions against South Africa and bringing a message of hope.

(Mandela: "Today we can say with confidence that we can see the light at the end of the tunnel.")

It was clear that Mandela is a hero to millions of Americans, and it was clear that he was having a good time. Security was intense. The New York Police Department built a special Mandelamobile -- bullet and rocket resistant. Twelve thousand police were on duty at a cost of $2 million in overtime, the tab picked up by the U.S. State Department. At City Hall, Mandela was given the key to the city and made a promise.

(Mandela: "Apartheid is doomed [applause]. South Africa shall be free.")

CBS's Harold Dow reports that Nelson Mandela is a living legend to many Americans. (CBS-Lead)

AIDS CONFERENCE

Jennings: For the sixth time in the short and devastating history of AIDS, some of the best minds from 121 countries have come to share with each other and the rest of us how the world is doing under the weight of the world's worst health epidemic. To coincide with the conference, we've conducted a major poll on American attitudes about the many facets of the AIDS crisis. Almost half the country (45 percent) thinks that AIDS is now the number one health problem in the country. By comparison, 18 percent cite cancer and only 5 percent heart disease. As the National Academy of Sciences reported Wednesday, AIDS is becoming a more generalized fact of American life.... Our ABC News poll also finds that about half the country doesn't think government is spending enough money on AIDS, and about half the people questioned said they would pay higher taxes if the money went for AIDS research. There is deep resentment in the AIDS community about government's attitude.

ABC's Beth Nissen reports that the government has done very little about the AIDS epidemic.

(Dr. David Rogers, member of President Bush's National Commission on AIDS: "I would say in general the federal response has been too little, too late.")

Government officials knew AIDS was being spread in gay bathhouses: for years they did not close them. Government officials knew the virus was in the nation's blood supply: for years they did not require screening. Government officials knew their own researchers did not have the money needed to investigate the new disease: for years, they did not provide it.

(Nissen: "What was lost in those years of delay?"

(Dr. Nicholas Ranco, N.Y. AIDS Institute: "Thousands of lives, thousands of lives and uncountable suffering.")

AIDS hit at a time when Washington was cutting all spending. AIDS hit many people many Americans and most politicians preferred not to think about.
