U.S. TOURISTS AMONG EIGHT HURT IN LONDON BOMB BLASTS

LONDON -- A powerful bomb exploded Monday at an exclusive social club in central London frequented by British government leaders and police said eight people were injured, including several American tourists....

A spokesman for Prime Minister Thatcher...said she would not cut short her stay in the Irish capital....

"Whoever is responsible stands condemned of total and callous disregard for human life," she said in a statement in Dublin.

Bomb Wrecks Thatcher's Club In Center Of London; IRA Blamed

LONDON -- Police Tuesday suspected IRA guerrillas were responsible for a London bomb blast that wounded at least eight people, including several American tourists, at an elite Conservative Party club listing Prime Minister Thatcher as a member.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for Monday's attack on the Carlton Club.... But London's Scotland Yard police and government officials said the explosion only a few hundred yards from Buckingham Palace was the work of terrorists, the term Britain uses to describe the IRA. Police declined to go on record naming the culprits.

Politicians and police said the attack could herald a new wave of violence against the British establishment.

MANDELA REFUSES TO RENOUNCE VIOLENCE Bush Says No To Funds For ANC

Nelson Mandela publicly rebuffed President Bush's call for the ANC to renounce violence Monday and was then rebuffed himself when he asked Bush for money for the ANC.

"If we are forced to resort to violence, it is because we have no other alternative whatsoever," the ANC deputy president said before going into a meeting where he obtained little more than souvenir photos and the cachet of being received by Bush.

Despite White House attempts to put a favorable spin in the three-hour Bush-Mandela meeting, it seemed clear that the President was far from delighted. In a casual conversation later Monday, Bush confessed that he was feeling "irritable" and had not had a good day.

In the Oval Office, the President rejected Mandela's request for direct financial aid to the ANC..., according to Assistant Secretary of State Cohen....

Other U.S. officials said a suspension of hostilities, if it occurs, would be enough to allow the ANC to benefit from the $10 million earmarked by Congress for "formerly banned organizations." That money would likely be administered by the National Endowment for Democracy, Cohen said, and the ANC could participate in such things as political training and seminars but would receive no money directly.

Rebuffing Bush, Mandela Backs Armed Struggle

Nelson Mandela turned aside a public appeal by President Bush to renounce armed struggle to end white rule in South Africa Monday and called on the Administration to maintain sanctions against the South African government and provide financial support for his ANC.

Bush, who described Mandela as "a man who embodies the hopes of millions," quoted Martin Luther King Jr. as he appealed to "all elements in South African society to renounce the use of violence and armed struggle, to break free from the cycle of repression and violent reaction that breeds nothing but more fear and suffering."

Standing shoulder-to-shoulder with Bush atop a small platform on the sunlit South Lawn of the White House, Mandela replied firmly that the President had made his remarks about renouncing violence "due to the fact he has not as yet got a proper briefing from us."

At a news conference following his three hours of meetings with Bush, Mandela noted that since 1986 the ANC has "scaled down" its armed operations to encourage negotiations and that it will "consider the cessation of hostilities" once the South African government has "removed all the obstacles to negotiations." He added that the issue of renouncing violence "is a matter which you should leave entirely in our own hands."

Mandela said that after he explained this to Bush, the President "appeared to understand our position and we feel that we have narrowed the gap existing between our positions at the beginning of the meeting."

However, following the Bush-Mandela meeting, the White House reiterated its call for a renunciation of violence in the South African conflict.

Bush And Mandela Air Differences On Use Of Violence To End Apartheid

President Bush warmly welcomed Nelson Mandela to the White House Monday but the two leaders, in unusually blunt language, publicly aired their differences on the use of violence to end apartheid....

On Capitol Hill, several lawmakers were expressing dismay over Mandela's acceptance of support from several controversial foreign leaders, with one saying he planned to boycott Mandela's address to a joint meeting of Congress Tuesday. Meanwhile, local blacks were continuing to complain that Mandela's visit here appeared to ignore rank and file blacks in this predominantly black city....

In the brilliant sunshine on the White House lawn, Bush hailed Mandela as "a man who embodies the hopes of millions" and called on all sides to "renounce the use of violence in armed struggle."

In measured cadences and without notes as Bush stood by his side, Mandela ignored diplomatic niceties, saying, "The remarks that he has made here are due to the fact that he has not as yet got a proper briefing from us."

Mandela...emphasized that his ANC retains "total commitment to peace," adding: "If we are forced to resort to violence, it is because we had no other alternative whatsoever."

(Ellen Warren, Knight-Ridder)

Mandela Admonishes Bush For Warning On Armed Struggle

Nelson Mandela's welcome to the White House swiftly turned into a polite, but public, admonishment for President Bush Monday after Bush indirectly asked Mandela's ANC to renounce armed struggle.

Standing beside Mandela on the White House South Lawn, Bush applauded the changes made by President de Klerk and called on "all South Africans" to renounce armed struggle.

Bush, reading a prepared statement, also praised Mandela and said apartheid must end, but Mandela's words indicated that he was rankled when he stepped to the microphone....

Mandela said he would inform the U.S. President "about developments as far as the armed struggle is concerned" and said, "The remarks that he has made here are due to the fact that he has not yet got a proper briefing from us." ...

Mandela said he would urge Bush "not to do anything without full consultation with the ANC in regard to any initiative which he might propose to take in order to help the peace process in the country."

After Mandela's remarks..., Bush indicated that he was impressed. "Thank you. Good statement. No notes. It's wonderful," Bush could be heard saying to Mandela just before they walked into the White House for their formal talks.

(Michael Frisby, Boston Globe)

Mandela Meeting

Nelson Mandela Monday reassured President Bush that the ANC intends to use negotiations rather than violence in the struggle to end apartheid in South Africa.

He disclosed that the ANC had scaled back guerrilla operations in the late 1980s in an effort to foster talks with the white minority government. And now, Mandela said, the ANC would "consider the cessation of hostilities" altogether, once final obstacles are removed to those negotiations, something he suggested could happen this summer....

His comments were praised as "helpful" at the White House....

"To the extent that Mr. Mandela says that violence will be suspended, we applaud that," Assistant Secretary of State Cohen said. But, he added, "we feel he should go beyond that to renounce the armed struggle."

(Vivienne Walt & Susan Page, Newsday)

Mandela Anticipates Pact With Pretoria

Nelson Mandela said Monday he hoped to sign an agreement with the South African government soon that would clear the way for negotiations to end apartheid rule and place the ANC in a position to suspend its 28-year-old armed struggle.

Such an agreement would be likely to prompt President Bush to ask Congress to ease sanctions on South Africa, a State Department spokesman said. But whether Congress would be willing to back such a move is unclear.

(Peter Honey, Baltimore Sun, A1)

Mandela Declines To Rule Out Force

Nelson Mandela told President Bush Monday that he could not completely renounce the use of violence and armed struggles to achieve racial equality in South Africa. But he said the ANC would cease hostilities once the South African government accepted all conditions for talks on a new constitution.

President Bush assured Mandela...that American sanctions would not be lifted until all the conditions set by Congress for doing so were met....

Just as democracy has liberated Eastern Europe, Bush said in a welcoming ceremony on the sunny South Lawn, "so, too, South Africa's time will come."

After a friendly three-hour meeting with President Bush, including a working lunch in the White House, Mandela said that the two men had narrowed their differences and that "even at the White House our mission succeeded beyond our wildest expectations."

(Maureen Dowd, New York Times, A1)

Mandela To Address Congress; Refuses To Renounce Violence

Nelson Mandela is delivering an historic speech to a joint meeting of Congress Tuesday amid some lawmakers' uneasiness about his support for radical governments and his refusal to renounce armed struggle....

Some in Congress said they were unhappy with Mandela's public support for President Castro, Libyan leader Gadhafi and PLO Chairman Arafat. "I wish he had not said those things, very frankly. They were not helpful," said Rep. Wolpe, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Africa and a leading advocate of [sanctions]....

Rep. Larry Smith, a backer of economic sanctions who is active in foreign policy issues, said he would boycott Mandela's speech. "He comes here and espouses support...for people whose methods and backgrounds are terrorists, outlaws or communist dictators," Smith said.... Rep. Dannemeyer said the invitation to address Congress was a "national disgrace." "Nelson Mandela is no Martin Luther King," Dannemeyer said. "He is more like H. Rap Brown or Willie Horton."

NOON RALLY DOWNTOWN ADDED TO THE SCHEDULE

Nelson Mandela is scheduled to appear at noon Tuesday at a downtown rally that was hastily arranged at the insistence of a D.C. Council member, [Nadine Winter].... The rally [will be held] at Freedom Plaza.

UNITA ASKS PEACE TALKS RESUMPTION

LISBON -- UNITA Monday called on Portugal to reconvene direct peace talks between the rebels and Angola.

UNITA, in a statement issued in the Portugese capital, cautioned the Angolan government not to be "irresponsible" by revealing details of past negotiations. Portugese officials said the two parties had agreed to resume their talks in Portugal in early July.

CHENEY CONDITIONS AID TO MOSCOW ON DEEPER SOVIET MILITARY CUTS

Secretary Cheney said Monday he opposes U.S. economic aid to the Soviet Union unless the rival superpower imposes greater cuts in military spending and ends subsidies to the governments of Cuba, Afghanistan and Angola.

"The Soviets have a long way to go before I would accept the notion of economic assistance to the Soviet Union," Cheney told a group of Washington reporters....

Cheney also said he is concerned that because the dismal economic situation in the Soviet Union has fueled much of the reform effort in that nation, he would be hesitant to support financial assistance without guarantees that the money would be properly spent.

U.S. financial assistance could "impede the progress of reform," Cheney said. (Molly Moore, Washington Post, A17)

GERMANS, FRENCH ASK EC FOR $15 BILLION TO HELP GORBACHEV

DUBLIN -- West German Chancellor Kohl, determined not to let the Soviet economic crisis threaten German unification, asked European Community leaders Monday for a $15 billion rescue package for Mikhail Gorbachev.

The proposal...was made with French support but drew immediate criticism from Prime Minister Thatcher.

After a day of debate..., the leaders said they had agreed to ask the European Commission to prepare reports on the state of the Soviet economy and what the West could do to help. Decisions would be taken on financing only once those studies were ready, perhaps at a special EC summit in Rome in October. The U.S. will be invited to help with the analysis and contribute to any package, diplomats said.

"In our mind, this is the signal we were looking for. It is a substantial political signal, which will be understood in Moscow," French presidential spokesman Hubert Vedrine told reporters....

"There is no point in giving this kind of money if you don't know what you are giving it for and what is the objective," a senior British government official said. (Tom Heneghan, Reuter)

European Leaders Stop Short Of Aid Package For Soviets

DUBLIN -- EC leaders, who conclude their two-day summit Tuesday, have endorsed the principle of financial aid for the Soviet Union but put off providing an emergency assistance package to bolster President Gorbachev.

"There was a great desire to indicate support for President Gorbachev and perestroika," a spokesman for EC President Haughey...said Monday.... A figure of $15 billion was discussed at the EC summit dinner, officials said.

Britain and the U.S. insist that Western economic aid to the Soviets will be wasted unless free-market reforms are implemented first. "We must ask ourselves whether it makes sense to throw huge sums of money at the Soviet Union," said a top aide to Prime Minister Thatcher. (Charles Goldsmith, UPI)

EC LEADERS AGREE ON SOVIET AID Compromise Avoids Setting Price Tag

DUBLIN -- The leaders of the European Community Monday night agreed in principle to provide economic assistance to the Soviet Union but stopped short of committing themselves to a specific program or price tag.

By agreeing to authorize an EC study of the Soviet Union's economic needs, the leaders struck a compromise between the position of West Germany and France, who pressed for a major commitment of resources to bail out President Gorbachev, and that of Britain and several smaller EC members, who opposed such a plan.

The two sides disputed the meaning of the compromise Monday night. EC and French officials said that by authorizing the study, the leaders were committing themselves to some kind of aid, while British officials denied any commitment had been made. The British position is closer to that of the U.S., which has also expressed interest in aiding the Soviet Union but has balked at making any major commitments....

A compromise also appeared to be emerging on the question of lifting Western Europe's economic sanctions against South Africa. Community leaders were expected to issue a statement voicing support for President de Klerk's program of political reforms but insisting that the measures go further toward dismantling white domination before sanctions can be removed.

(Glenn Frankel, Washington Post, A15)

EUROPEAN ENERGY COMMUNITY WITH SOVIETS PROPOSED

DUBLIN -- A new European Energy Community linking economically rich Western Europe with the energy-abundant Soviet Union was proposed Monday by Holland's prime minister at the European Community summit.

The plan [was] described by Dutch journalists as "something totally out of the blue." The grouping proposed by Prime Minister Lubbers would include the 12 EC nations, the Soviet Union and other Comecon countries of Eastern Europe, and the six nations of the European Free Trade Association.

(Charles Goldsmith, UPI)

YELTSIN PLANS TO SLASH RUSSIAN PAYMENTS TO NATIONAL BUDGET
Attack On Gorbachev Is Renewed Amid Rumors
Of Delay In Central Party Congress

MOSCOW -- Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian republic, said Monday that he planned to slash his region's payments into the Soviet national budget by at least half and to establish a new system of "sovereign banks" independent of central control.

Speaking in an interview on Soviet television, Yeltsin also criticized President Gorbachev for "continued half-measures" and failing to carry through on a "genuinely radical" economic reform program. Yeltsin said that Gorbachev had "built a bridge halfway and stopped there." ...

[Meanwhile], there are now rumors that the Moscow party leadership is considering postponing the 28th Party Congress from July to September.

(David Remnick, Washington Post, A17)

LITHANIAN PARLIAMENT TO CONSIDER SUSPENDING INDEPENDENCE DECLARATION

MOSCOW -- Soviet television reported most Lithuanian lawmakers meeting Tuesday oppose suspending the republic's declaration of independence, a move needed to clear the way for negotiations with Moscow and a partial lifting of the Kremlin's economic blockade.

Lithuanian government spokeswoman Rita Dapkus said Monday by telephone from Vilnius the parliament would take up the moratorium...Tuesday afternoon. (Michael Collins, UPI)

LEADING CHINESE DISSIDENT ALLOWED TO LEAVE HOMELAND

HONG KONG -- The Chinese government Monday allowed the country's best-known dissident, Fang Lizhi, and his wife Li Shuxian to leave China after the couple spent more than a year sheltered in the U.S. Embassy in Beijing.

Chinese authorities said the two were allowed to leave after showing "signs of repentance" in a letter sent to the government, and were going abroad to seek medical treatment. However, it was not clear if Fang and Li had in fact repented or what type of treatment was needed.

The surprise action removed one of the biggest obstacles to better U.S.-Chinese relations and was immediately praised by the White House as "a far-sighted, significant step" that would facilitate an improvement in ties.

Diplomats said Beijing's decision appeared to be aimed at influencing the summit meeting of the world's seven major industrialized nations scheduled for July 9-11 in Houston. The group is expected to consider easing economic sanctions imposed last year on China -- including the suspension of World Bank loans totaling more than $50 million.... Japan's foreign minister said Saturday that he would try to convince other summit participants to ease the sanctions and called on Beijing to make a sign showing it would improve its human rights record.

(Daniel Southerland, Washington Post, A1)

China Seen Motivated By Hope For Favored Trade Status, End To Sanctions

China's decision to release dissident Fang Lizhi and his wife Li Shuxian was motivated partly by a desire to win most favored nation trading status from the U.S. Congress and to persuade Western democracies to lift economic sanctions against Beijing, Administration officials said Monday.

Officials said President Bush will probably agree to put the issue of lifting sanctions on the agenda for the economic summit in Houston next month....

Fang's release, in which U.S. Ambassador James Lilly served as an intermediary, was hailed by the White House and congressional Democrats, but they also criticized Beijing for continued repression of human rights.... Sen. Mitchell applauded Fang's release but said he remains concerned "about the lack of freedom available to millions of his fellow citizens." Mitchell said he would continue trying to block most favored nation status for China.

(David Hoffman, Washington Post, A18)

White House Hails Fang's Release, But Democrats Want More From China

The White House Monday hailed the release of leading Chinese dissident Fang Lizhi and his wife as a "far-sighted, significant step." But top congressional Democrats and several foreign policy analysts said China must do more toward improving its human rights record to make an enduring change in U.S.-China relations....

"I don't believe that (the release) in and of itself should be sufficient to change our policy in that regard," Mitchell said in an interview. "It is a significant symbolic event, but of course it is only one person. What's needed is a cessation of human rights violations against all of the Chinese people." Mitchell said he would continue to work on legislative efforts to block most-favored-nation status, but he added he and other Democrats have not decided whether to try to block that status completely or to approve it if the Chinese were to meet certain conditions....

Sen. Dole said, "Fang's release is far from the whole answer to the very deep concerns we have about China's human rights record. But it is a small but significant step toward the path that we want China to take -- the path of reason and reform."

Sen. Pell said the release was "a clear indication that congressional criticism of China's policies is working."

China Frees Dissident Fang And Wife

LONDON -- China allowed dissident Fang Lizhi and his wife to be flown into exile in Britain Monday after more than a year in refuge at the U.S. Embassy in Beijing....

Gu Ming, a senior member of China's National People's Congress, told UPI in Nicaragua that Fang and Li were permitted to leave only after they assured the Chinese government they would not participate in anti-government activity abroad....

A statement written by Fang and released Monday by the State Department said he would not participate in "contrary activities whose motive lies in opposing China." (Adam Kelliher, UPI)

Fang Release Eases Pressure On Bush's China Policy

Dissident scientist Fang Lizhi's departure from China is expected to ease the pressure on President Bush's China policy, long under attack in Congress for being too soft on Beijing.

...In the Senate, Sen. Dole called Fang's release "one bit of tangible evidence that President Bush is on the right track in the way he is managing U.S.-Chinese relations." ...

But two prominent Democrats, [Sens. Mitchell and Kennedy], while welcoming Fang's release, renewed their opposition to Bush's decision to extend China's MFN status. (William Scally, Reuter)

BAHRAINI PAPER URGES ARAB SANCTIONS AGAINST U.S.

MANAMA, Bahrain -- A Bahraini paper Tuesday supported a call by a Saudi Arabian prince for Arab economic sanctions against the U.S. if it did not reverse a decision to suspend talks with the PLO.

"We support Prince Turki bin Abdul Aziz al-Saud's bold call and we urge (Arabs) to draw plans to boycott America and implement them," the daily, Akhbar al-Khaleej, said in an editorial.

SHAMIR WROTE GORBACHEV ON EMIGRATION
Letter Asked That There Not Be Cutoff

NEW YORK -- Israeli Prime Minister Shamir, in what he describes as an unusual letter, has personally appealed to President Gorbachev not to bow to Arab pressure and cut off the flow of Soviet Jewish immigrants to Israel.

In the May 29 letter, made available to Reuter Monday, Shamir also assured Gorbachev that Israel does not have a policy of "directing" Soviet Jews to occupied Arab lands and said only a handful had settled there.

U.N. OFFERS TO HELP EASE MID-EAST TENSION

JERUSALEM -- U.N. Undersecretary-General Jean Claude Aimee Monday gave Prime Minister Shamir a letter from U.N. Secretary-General Perez offering his help to ease tension in the region, Israel Radio reported.

Shamir did not accept or reject the offer, but said Israel's May 1989 peace initiative was aimed at lowering tension in the Middle East, the radio reported.... Shamir has not yet decided how he will respond to the letter, the radio said.

IRAN EARTHQUAKE RAISES POLITICAL POSSIBILITIES Fragile Detente Forged Amid The Rubble

RUDBAR, Iran -- In the acres of broken bricks and glass littering Iran's stricken northwest, a sometimes tense detente has emerged between the country's Islamic government and hundreds of volunteers from Western countries and the Soviet Union.

People on both sides of the divide hope that the Western humanitarian assistance that has poured in here since Thursday's earthquake...will bolster moderates in Iran's hard-line, Shiite Moslem government who want to ease the country's international isolation.

But the interaction here between foreign volunteers, ordinary Iranians and officials and soldiers in Tehran's revolutionary government has revealed schisms and lingering resentments which suggest that no political miracle will emerge quickly as a result of the earthquake disaster. Some of the tension felt here by Iranian officials and Western rescue volunteers has arisen from the fruitlessness of their combined search for survivors.

(Steve Coll, Washington Post, A15)

Iran Denies Blocking Foreign Aid For Quake Victims

TEHRAN -- Iran has denied blocking foreign aid for the victims of last week's earthquake...but some Western rescue workers accused Tehran of not making full use of their expertise....

"The Iranian people are kind but the military people are very very hard to deal with," said Valerie Drouot, a French doctor with the medical charity Medecins du Monde. "They want the medicine but not the people." ...

Interior Minister Abdollah Nouri told a news conference foreign aid workers were welcome in Iran and Health Minister Iraj Fazel denied reports that Tehran was blocking foreign relief aid or discouraging medical teams from coming....

"We have no problem...in using humanitarian aid from foreign countries," said Nouri. (Simon Haydon, Reuter)

U.S. MILITARY PRESENCE IS NEEDED IN KOREA, OUTGOING COMMANDER SAYS

SEOUL -- Gen. Louis Menetrey, the outgoing U.S. military commander in Korea, said Monday the American military presence is needed to maintain peace on the Korean peninsula.

Gen. Menetrey, [speaking at a farewell news conference], said chances of a renewed conflict between North and South Korea are not high at this time....

He said President Bush and other ranking U.S. officials concluded that U.S. forces must be kept in Korea until there is a change in the Korean situation and he agrees with that decision.

JAPAN, U.S. REPORT PROGRESS IN TALKS ON STRUCTURAL REFORMS Teams Seek To Produce Final Report Before Summit

TOKYO -- U.S. and Japanese officials Monday night said they were making progress in resolving outstanding issues in what they hoped would be the final round of unprecedented trade talks aimed at revamping the economies of the two countries.

A senior Bush Administration official here, describing the talks as "cooperative" and "friendly," said the Japanese government had offered some significant improvements over proposals put forward in the past. He said, however, that the two sides are still apart on most issues at the heart of the politically charged talks....

Japanese officials are eager to bring these negotiations to a successful conclusion before the Houston summit..., where financial and trade matters are expected to dominate and where Japan is eager to show its willingness to play a responsible international role.

U.S.-Japanese Trade Talks Enter Their Final Round

TOKYO -- U.S. and Japanese delegates opened their final scheduled round of talks here Monday on removing structural barriers to trade in each country's market.

But after a full day of discussions under the SII, their best efforts failed to produce agreements on any of the sensitive issues.

A senior official in the U.S. delegation, briefing reporters at the U.S. Embassy Monday evening, repeatedly declined to predict that the bilateral talks would be concluded by Tuesday night as scheduled. "It would be inappropriate to speak about the time involved in the discussions," he suggested. "As for Tuesday being the last day, it doesn't look like it."

Answering questions on condition of anonymity, the Bush Administration official said the two delegations have not yet reached complete agreement on any sector. "There has been progress in all areas," he added, "but there are also no areas in which there has been agreement." (A.E. Cullison, Journal of Commerce)

U.S.-TAIWAN TALKS SHOW SOME PROGRESS

TAIPEI, Taiwan -- The U.S. recorded mixed results in its latest round of trade talks with Taiwan, which ended over the weekend. The U.S. side scored gains on copyright and patent issues, and made some progress on beef.

Against that, it expressed "extreme disappointment" in Taiwan's stance on liquor imports, said Laura Anderson, director for South Asia and the Pacific at the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative. (Chris Brown, Journal of Commerce)

TAIWAN EASE TRAVEL, PRESS RESTRICTIONS WITH MAINLAND

TAIPEI -- The government Monday lifted a 40-year-old ban on Chinese reporters gathering news on Taiwan and eased restrictions on Taiwanese visiting China.

U.S. LOOKS INTO GLOBAL RADIO NETWORK USING SATELLITES

The U.S. is quietly pursuing a plan to create a global radio network that would be run jointly by the government and private industry.

...The proposal generally envisions private ownership of satellites and radio stations in the U.S. market and government ownership of satellites in foreign markets, according to people who heard a briefing on the plan.

The proposal is backed principally by the Commerce Department, the USIA and NASA. But already the plan is running into opposition from U.S. broadcasters, who fear that the proposed system would gobble up scarce broadcast frequencies and increase competition among radio stations. It also may kick up a storm within the Bush Administration. (Bob Davis, Wall Street Journal, B1)

TV MARTI BROADCASTS EXTENDED FOR 30 DAYS

The U.S. will extend for 30 days its TV Marti broadcasts to Cuba while the President and Congress decide whether the station should remain on the air permanently, the State Department announced Monday.

The broadcasts, which are made from about 3 a.m. to 6 a.m., have been jammed in Havana after the first few seconds each night, according to State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler. "One night it was on for over a minute" before being jammed, she said....

She said by jamming broadcasts of the situation comedy "Kate and Allie," game shows and sports events, Cuba had shown to the world its "fear...for their public to have simple information."

VALLADARES NOT SPEAKING FOR U.S., DISSIDENT TOLD IN HAVANA

MIAMI -- In a private meeting, U.S. diplomats in Havana have told beleaguered human rights activist Gustavo Arcos that U.S. Ambassador Armando Valladares was not conveying U.S. policy when he branded him a "traitor" to the Cuban cause.

U.S. officials said Monday that the message was delivered last week in a meeting at the U.S. Interests Section in Havana. An Arcos relative in Miami who talks regularly to Havana said the conversation amounted to a U.S. "apology" for Valladares' remarks.

The meeting points up what many analysts say is a growing dilemma the Bush Administration faces in the dispute between its ambassador to the U.N. Human Rights Commission and Cuba's most noted dissident.

SALVADORAN TALKS MARK PROGRESS TOWARD PEACE

OAXTEPEC, Mexico -- Negotiators for the Salvadoran government and leftist guerrillas completed a week of talks Monday with no agreements toward ending their decade-old civil war.

However, the U.N. mediator for the talks and spokesmen for the rebels stressed that the negotiations -- mostly about reforming the Salvadoran armed forces -- marked important progress toward achieving a cease-fire and eventual resolution of the conflict that has left more than 72,000 people dead.

"There still haven't been agreements," said U.N. mediator Alvaro de Soto. "However, there is a clear commitment to reach agreements in the timetable agreed to in Caracas, and there has been movement in this direction that has no precedent in the history of contacts between the government" and the rebel FMLN.

THRIFT REGULATOR TO EASE CURBS ON S&L DIVIDENDS Lower Deposit Insurance Premiums Also Eyed

The nation's chief thrift regulator said Monday he will allow some financially weak savings and loan institutions to resume dividend payments to stockholders and will reconsider another tough measure imposed on thrifts last year in exchange for a taxpayer rescue of the industry.

T. Timothy Ryan, in his first public policy speech since becoming director of the Office of Thrift Supervision April 9, said that among the steps he is considering is to relieve thrifts from having to pay higher premiums than commercial banks.

Ryan said his goal is to relieve financial burdens on thrifts that now are on the margins of safety, increasing the chances that they could survive.

Ryan also said he was considering a change in enforcement policy that would affect President Bush's son Neil, who faces regulatory action.... The changes might make the process of determining the validity of the charges more public.

...Ryan's comments drew warm applause during a conference of the U.S. League of Savings Institutions..., which has lobbied for the looser dividend rules. But he was criticized by the commercial banking industry and some members of Congress.

BUSH, TOP CONGRESSIONAL LEADERS MEET ON BUDGET

Amid fears that bipartisan budget talks between the White House and Capitol Hill are breaking down, President Bush and top congressional leaders planned a new meeting in an attempt to spur change.

Tuesday's scheduled breakfast meeting at the White House followed a session on Monday between Bush and Republican budget negotiators.

"I think that the purpose (of Tuesday's breakfast) is to discuss how serious the President feels about these discussions," said one GOP congressional aide. "I don't know if it's another feeling-out exercise." ...

Sen. Gramm said Republicans "are very perplexed" with the talks. "We don't understand what the Democrats expect and we don't understand why we are not proceeding with negotiations," Gramm said. "We are ready. Everything that has to be done has been done."

U.S. ALTERS PLAN TO EVICT DRUG DEALERS

Federal agents in several cities Monday moved to begin seizing the public housing leases of suspected drug dealers under procedures hurriedly modified by the HUD Department to comply with a federal judge's ruling banning on-the-spot evictions....

As originally conceived, tenants may or may not have been given a hearing before being evicted, depending on the practice in the local jurisdiction. But on Friday, U.S. District Judge Richard Williams in Richmond blocked the department from evicting tenants under the program without conducting a hearing.

Now, HUD counsel Frank Keating said, a tenant who stands to lose an apartment will first be given a notice of seizure and allowed to present the case to a federal magistrate or judge. In addition, the tenant will continue to be allowed a court hearing when the department moves to take over actual ownership of the ease. "They'll have two hearings," Keating said.

Legal Services May Stop Helping Tenants Evicted For Alleged Drug Use

The board of the Legal Services Corp. voted Monday to discourage local affiliates from helping public housing tenants who are being evicted for alleged drug activity.

Critics immediately blasted the non-binding resolution for having a "chilling effect" on Legal Services lawyers' attempts to defend innocent people, some of whom have been evicted only because they were related to a drug offender. "The thing you need to be careful about is guilt by association and trial by family," said Henry McLaughlin, head of the Richmond, VA legal services program.

But board members said they wanted to stop tax-supported Legal Services Corp. lawyers from frustrating the government's tough new policies to root out drug abuse in public housing -- a conflict they portrayed as growing.

SHOWDOWN ON CIVIL RIGHTS BILL NEARS

A legislative showdown on civil rights legislation in the Senate neared Monday as maneuvering to reach an agreement continued behind the scenes.

Advocates of the legislation had called for a cloture vote for Tuesday, hoping to use Nelson Mandela's appearance before Congress as an impetus to increase support for the legislation but that vote was postponed by the leadership Monday night.

Negotiators for the Bush Administration and Sen. Kennedy...met Monday in a session at the Justice Department to try to find some mutual ground. No substantial progress was reported.

Meanwhile, civil rights leaders sent members of the Senate a letter urging approval. Civil rights leaders said time was running out this year for any new legislation to be adopted.... "We cannot allow the discussions to be used as an excuse to delay the consideration of this historic legislation," said the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights in a letter signed by Ralph Neas and Benjamin Hooks.

SOURCE OF FBI LEAK 'TAKEN CARE OF'
IN SPITE OF SUGGESTED PUNISHMENTS

The FBI buried recommended sanctions against the head of the bureau's public corruptions unit in Boston after he was identified as the source of news leaks in an investigation of several Massachusetts politicians and businessmen, law enforcement sources said Monday.

Agent John Morris had been recommended for reprimand, suspension, demotion and transfer after he failed two polygraph examinations on whether he was the source of information about an FBI probe of Massachusetts Senate President William "Billy" Bulger and others, the sources said. The recommended sanctions, however, were scuttled earlier this year by FBI officials in Washington who, according to the sources, had worked with Morris in the past.

The sources said at least one high-ranking official at FBI headquarters in Washington "bragged" to others that he had "taken care of" Morris and that the Boston agent, a longtime friend, would not be sanctioned as recommended.

15 STATES RALLY BEHIND CALLS FOR CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO GIVE THEM MORE POWER

With the strong support of the Bush Administration, 15 state legislatures have approved resolutions calling for amending the U.S. Constitution to give the states more authority in relation to the federal government.

Such resolutions, aimed partly at countering Supreme Court decisions that many states say have eroded their powers, have also been passed by one house in six other states and have been introduced in 12 other legislatures, according to the Council on State Governments, a nonpartisan research group that represents the 50 states.

The states are proposing two avenues of change. One seeks to allow the states to initiate amendments to the Constitution without calling a constitutional convention. The other would revise the 10th Amendment to direct the courts to determine whether Congress has overstepped its authority in relation to the states....

Debra Rae Anderson, deputy assistant to the President for intergovernmental affairs, said, "We strongly support these amendments, which fit in exactly with our federalism principles, that the best government is that which is closest to the people."

PROVISION ON AIDS WORKERS SCRAPPED

A proposal to allow employers to transfer workers with AIDS out of food-handling jobs was killed Monday by House-Senate conferees even though the provision had been approved by majorities of both Houses for inclusion in sweeping legislation to protect the disabled from discrimination.

It is rare for a conference committee to defy majority votes of both houses, and the conferees' action could lead to another row over the food handlers issue when the bill goes back to the House and Senate for final approval, probably later this week.

LUJAN, YEUTTER MEETING BEFORE OWL ANNOUNCEMENT

New battle lines are being drawn in the fight over the northern spotted owl as the Bush Administration comes forward with its plan to save the rare owl without devastating the Northwest's timber industry.

Secretaries Lujan and Yeutter planned to meet Tuesday before making the conservation strategies public, Interior Department spokesman Steve Goldstein said.

"We are still trying to develop a cohesive management plan," Goldstein said Monday night.

Congressional sources said the Administration would back away from a Forest Service proposal that would cut the timber harvest nearly in half on federal lands in the Northwest, at a cost of 28,000 jobs. "They most likely are not going to adopt" the recommendations of government scientists..., said one congressional source.

A second congressional aide also said White House officials were working to soften the plan's effect on the timber industry. Both officials spoke on condition of anonymity. (Scott Conner, AP)

DISPOSAL OF MILD RADIOACTIVE WASTE TO BE LESS RESTRICTED IN NEW POLICY

Mildly radioactive waste could be disposed of in municipal dumps or even recycled into consumer products, under a new policy that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission plans to announce Tuesday....

The new policy would classify as "below regulatory concern" materials like gloves of laboratory workers, parts from decommissioned power plants and the carcasses of laboratory animals after experiments in which radioactive tracer elements were used.

Environmental groups and some scientists say that adopting a uniform policy is unwise and could result in public exposure to radiation if waste is recycled into toys, jewelry and other common objects.

2-PARENT-NOTICE LAW ON ABORTIONS VOIDED

The Supreme Court Monday struck down a Minnesota law that required pregnant teenagers to inform both parents before obtaining an abortion, but said that such laws are constitutional if they give minors the opportunity to ask a judge to waive the notification requirement.

The court divided 5 to 4 on both aspects of the decision, with Justice O'Connor the pivotal vote....

The justices faced this dual decision because Minnesota had enacted two alternative forms of the law, and both were appealed to the Supreme Court....

The decision in Hodgson v. Minnesota represented a defeat for the Bush Administration, which had urged the court to use the case to overrule the 1973 Roe v. Wade decision.... At the least, Solicitor General Starr argued, the court should find that minors have no fundamental right to an abortion without their parents' knowledge. But abortion rights activists said Monday they considered the new decisions a defeat for them.... Antiabortion groups generally praised the decision and said it would spur them to continue efforts to enact further restrictions.

High Court's Latest Rulings On Abortion Translate Into Ripples, Not Waves

If last year's Supreme Court decision on abortion set off a tidal wave of political activity, Monday's court rulings on parental notification may do little more than keep the ripples moving.

Behind the prepared statements issued by activists on both sides of the debate was a recognition that the issues involved in Monday's ruling...carry less political punch than the overall threat to abortion rights that was seen in last year's decision giving states authority to restrict abortions.

"I don't think it will have nearly the same impact," said Gary Bauer, a former White House adviser who is now president of the Family Research Council.... "It's probably no runs, no hits, no errors," said Harrison Hickman, a Democratic pollster who has advised NARAL.... "I don't see any 30-second commercials coming out of this decision."

COURT RULES PATIENT'S WISHES MUST CONTROL 'RIGHT TO DIE'

The Supreme Court said Monday that states have the right to prevent family members from taking permanently unconscious patients off life-support systems if there is "no clear and convincing" proof that the patients want the treatment ended.

Confronting for the first time the emotional issue of "right to die," the court, in a 5 to 4 decision, blocked the parents of Nancy Cruzan, a 32-year-old Missouri woman in a "persistent vegetative state" since a 1983 automobile accident, from stopping artificially administered food and water that keeps their daughter alive....

The court also suggested that those competent to express their wishes do enjoy a constitutional right to refuse life-sustaining medical treatment. (Ruth Marcus, Washington Post, A1)

Medical Groups Decry Cruzan Ruling

Medical organizations and experts on medical ethics Monday expressed dismay at the Supreme Court's ruling barring the parents of Nancy Cruzan from withdrawing the feeding tube from their comatose daughter, saying it interferes with the ability of doctors to help patients and families to make life-or-death decisions.

At the same time, they applauded the fact that the court...concluded that an individual has a constitutional right to refuse medical treatment and "treatment" can include food and water....

Organizations for handicapped people and antiabortion groups hailed the decision, saying it affirmed that the lives of patients who cannot speak for themselves are as valuable as the lives of those who can. (Susan Okie, Washington Post, A10)

DOLE EXPECTED TO FORCE SYMBOLIC VOTE ON FLAG-BURNING AMENDMENT

Although a constitutional amendment protecting the flag was killed in Congress for the year when the House rejected it last week, Republican leader Robert Dole is expected to force a symbolic Senate vote Tuesday as part of his effort to tar Democrats with the issue.

Sen. Mitchell, asked in an interview whether Democrats had enough votes to defeat the measure, responded, "Yes, I do, I think so, although it is not certain because a number of senators have not made final decisions." ...

The Senate Judiciary Committee chairman, Sen. Biden, gave a series of speeches on the Senate floor Monday strongly criticizing Republican efforts. Biden said the amendment would "do violence" to the First Amendment right of free speech and that Republicans are demanding a vote on a "dead issue" just for political purposes....

Biden, who has been frustrated in his effort to bring his anti-crime bill to a vote because of a Republican filibuster, said, "We are wasting the taxpayer's money discussing something that is going nowhere instead of taking up my crime bill."

MANDELA VISIT

ABC's Peter Jennings: South Africa's Nelson Mandela was in Washington today meeting with President Bush. Even before the ceremonial flourishes were over, Mr. Mandela was publicly and bluntly correcting his White House host. It is not the sort of thing presidents are accustomed to. But there appears to be nothing customary about Nelson Mandela.

ABC's Brit Hume:

[TV COVERAGE of President Bush walking with Mandela.]

These were two leaders who had come by very different paths to their meeting today. Mr. Bush had spent more than a quarter century as a political figure, his guest an even longer time as a political prisoner. They met united in opposition to apartheid, but divided over means of ending it.

(President Bush: "I call on all elements in South African society to renounce the use of violence and armed struggle, break free from this cycle of repression and violent reaction that breeds nothing but more fear and suffering.")

Mandela thanked the President for U.S. support in his cause, but took exception to Mr. Bush's call to foreswear violence.

(Mandela: "The remarks that he has made here are due to the fact that he has not as yet got a proper briefing from us.")

So long as there is communication and negotiation with the government, he said, there would be no violence. Top U.S. officials later said that was welcome. There was more, however.

(Mandela: "When a government decides to ban political organizations and does not allow any free political activity, no matter how peaceful and non-violent, then the people have no alternative but to resort to violence.")

In their more than three-hour meeting, Mr. Bush urged Mandela to go beyond suspending the armed struggle during negotiations and end it outright. Mandela made no commitments. On Mandela's request that U.S. economic sanctions against South Africa be continued, Mr. Bush made no commitment. Afterward, though, Mandela said there had been progress.

(Mandela: "In the course of those discussions we narrowed the gaps that previously existed.")

Senior officials here tonight disagree. They see Mandela's position on violence as essentially unchanged. And they said the President is still prepared to talk to Congress about easing sanctions as soon as South Africa's state of emergency is fully lifted.

(ABC-Lead)

NBC's Tom Brokaw: For five days now, Nelson Mandela has been telling this country to maintain economic sanctions against South Africa. Today he met the man who has a great deal of influence in keeping those sanctions in place, President Bush. They also debated the use of violence in South Africa.

-more-

NBC's John Cochran:

[TV COVERAGE of President Bush walking with Mandela.]

Nelson Mandela is not a head of state, so he didn't rate a band or a military review. But Mandela and his wife are heroes to many Americans. So they did get a warm welcome. They also got President Bush's promise not to lift sanctions, not yet.

(President Bush: "Our sanctions have been designed to support change. And when the conditions laid down in our law have been met, then and only then will we consider, in consultation with the Congress, whether a change in course will promote further progress through peaceful negotiations.")

The President diplomatically but unmistakably let Mandela know that the U.S. denounces violence by blacks as well as whites.

(President Bush: "I call on all elements in South African society to renounce the use of violence and armed struggle.")

Mandela stood firm, saying the President was misinformed about black violence.

(Mandela: "The remarks that he has made here are due to the fact that he has not as yet got a proper briefing from us. If we are forced to resort to violence, it is because we had no other alternative whatsoever.")

And in his private talks with Bush, Mandela said the ANC will suspend violence as soon as South African officials meet his conditions for peace talks. Mandela demands that authorities free all political prisoners and lift martial law in the Natal region of South Africa. Those are the same conditions the U.S. has for ending economic sanctions.

(Mandela: "When we explained our position on this point, President Bush appeared to understand our position. And we feel that we have narrowed the gap that existed between our positions at the beginning of the meeting.")

Today's meeting could have ended badly if Bush and Mandela had emphasized their differences over such things as Mandela's praise for Cuba's Castro and Libya's Gadhafi. Instead, they chose to emphasize how close they are, not how far apart. (NBC-3)

CBS's Dan Rather: Nelson Mandela was honored in Washington today. At the White House he urged President Bush to keep up U.S. economic sanctions against the white-ruled South African government. Another disagreements between visitor and host surfaced almost immediately and in public.

ABC's Wyatt Andrews:

[TV COVERAGE of President Bush walking with Mandela.]

Mandela's historic visit to the White House was only minutes old when the two leaders clashed over Mandela's support of violence in the fight to end apartheid. President Bush held up the example of Martin Luther King to encourage Mandela to renounce armed struggle.

(President Bush: "In the words of the great Martin Luther King, Jr., 'Let us not seek to satisfy our thirst for freedom by drinking from the cup of bitterness and hatred.'")

Mandela answered Bush as if addressing a schoolboy, saying he would give the President a proper briefing to convince him the anti-apartheid movement had no choice.

(Mandela: "When a government decides to ban political organizations of the oppressed, intensifies oppression, and does not allow any free political activity, no matter how peaceful and non-violent, then the people have no alternative but to resort to violence.")

Andrews continues: But the issue of violence blocks what Mandela wants most from official Washington -- direct foreign aid. Ten million dollars are now set aside, but only for groups that suspend violence in favor of peace talks. Mandela did inch closer toward meeting that condition today.

(Mandela: "We make it clear that once the government has removed all the obstacles to negotiation we would consider the cessation of hostilities.")

Mandela also faced criticism here for last week's statements supporting the PLO, Gadhafi and Castro -- men and movements that supported him, he says, when he needed it most. Some congressmen say because of that remark they will boycott Mandela's speech to congress tomorrow.

(Rep. Dannemeyer: "Nelson Mandela's appearance before this body is a national disgrace. The invitation alone heaps shame on this body.")

Still, Mandela left the White House today saying he was encouraged. He got from the President a promise to hold firm on the sanctions against the South African government, and Mandela assured Mr. Bush he won't press to have those sanctions increased. (CBS-3)

RIGHT TO DIE/SUPREME COURT

Jennings: We begin tonight with two of the most difficult decisions that a person ever faces -- whether to have an abortion and whether to end the life of someone who is being kept alive only by artificial means. Today the Supreme Court has set some limits. First the right to die. The American Medical Association estimates that at some point in their lives 70 percent of Americans will have to make a decision about life-sustaining care for a member of the family or for themselves. Today the Supreme Court decided that a state has the right to be involved as well.

ABC's Tim O'Brien reports that the Supreme Court ruled today a family had no constitutional right to remove their daughter's feeding tube -- rather, states have the right to insist on clear and convincing evidence of what the victim would want. Chief Justice Rehnquist said the parent's wishes were outweighed by the state's interest in the preservation and protection of human life, and the state's right to guard against potential abuse by those who may not always act to protect the patient. Four justices dissented. The American Medical Association also criticized the ruling. Significantly, the court's majority said a competent adult does have a constitutional right to refuse medical treatment, suggesting a victim's intentions may be honored if put into writing in what is called a living will. Today's ruling could fuel a growing trend among the states to recognize such documents allowing the removal of life support. (ABC-Lead, NBC-2)

Rather: The U.S. Supreme Court made its first official ruling today in a right-to-die case. The court said states have broad power to order life support indefinitely for patients who are not competent to decide for themselves even if family members want life support withdrawn. The decision was 5 to 4.

CBS's Susan Spencer reports that a recent CBS News/New York Times poll found withdrawing artificial feeding as well as other medical treatment has become acceptable; 81 percent said it was a family's right; 13 percent said it wasn't. -more- (CBS-Lead)

ABORTION/SUPREME COURT

Brokaw: Two of the most emotional and complex issues before American society -- who can have an abortion, and who decides the right to die. Today the U.S. Supreme Court tightened requirements for these crucial decisions. On abortion, it is legal to require minors to have the permission of at least one parent. The right to die, more than a family's word is needed....

Brokaw talks with NBC's Carl Stern:

Brokaw: On the abortion decision, the vote once again was 5 to 4. Does that mean that they're now moving steadily and narrowing Roe v. Wade?

Stern: I don't think Roe v. Wade is in serious jeopardy at this point. Justice O'Connor, who holds the balance of power, has made it clear that she will not permit undue interference with the fundamental right to abortion. Nonetheless it deserves to be said that again today she has never found a restriction that the states have imposed that she's voted against.... (NBC-Lead)

Jennings reports that more than 400,000 teenage girls 17 years or under get pregnant every year. Nearly half of those pregnancies end in abortion. The court has decided that an unmarried child does not have the right to get an abortion on her own. The court has decided the states have decisions to make.

ABC's John Martin reports that the court said states can require at least one parent be notified. The notice must come up to 48 hours in advance. Justice Kennedy, writing for the majority, said, "It would deny all dignity to the family to say the state cannot take this reasonable step." The court also ruled that states may require both parents to be notified as long as the minor has the alternative of going to a judge for permission. Some saw the rulings as chipping away at Roe v. Wade. Opponents of abortion rights saw today's decision as a partial victory. Only 14 states require parental notification, so today's decision doesn't bring the court any closer to deciding whether to overturn Roe v. Wade. But opponents of abortion rights are counting on a victory tomorrow in the Louisiana Senate to send a highly restrictive abortion law to the court, giving the justices one more opportunity to overturn a woman's right to abortion. (ABC-2)

CBS's Deborah Potter reports that a recent CBS News/New York Times poll finds that three-quarters of those questioned said that unless the parents are divorced, both of them have a right to know if their daughter wants an abortion. (CBS-2)

FANG LIZHI

Jennings: China's most famous dissident, Fang Lizhi, and his wife will not have to sleep tonight in the American Embassy in Beijing. They're on their way to Britain where Dr. Fang will teach at Cambridge University. The Chinese government let them go almost exactly a year after they escaped to the embassy in Beijing just ahead of the Chinese authorities.

-more-

ABC's John McWethy reports that the Beijing government insisted that Fang sign a statement saying he would not participate in anti-government activities after leaving China. Even so, the White House hailed the release of the 54-year-old astrophysicist as a "far-sighted and significant step that will improve the atmosphere in U.S.-Chinese relations." There was speculation that Fang's release was part of a deal to get the U.S. to lift remaining economic sanctions against China.

(State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler: "I tell you...there is no deal.")

The State Department says China has other human rights problems that must be addressed before relations can return to normal. China's move may be directed more at Japan than the U.S. Analysts say it is the massive economic help being held back by Tokyo that has hurt China the most. There are now indications that the Japanese government will end its sanctions no matter what the U.S. does.

(ABC-5, NBC-4)

CBS's Bill Plante reports that U.S. officials praised the release as a humanitarian action, but they insisted that the U.S. made no deals. And they suggested that China wasn't off the hook yet.

(State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler: "We hope that the Chinese government will take a similarly positive approach in dealing with those who participated peacefully in demonstrations in China last year as well, and will take other steps, such as ceasing the jamming of VOA.")

The Senate majority leader says Fang's release won't automatically guarantee Beijing most-favored-nation status, but it will help.

(Sen. Dole: "But it is a small but significant step toward the path that we want China to take, the path of reason, and the path of reform.")

What Fang Lizhi does seem to have given up, at least temporarily, is his freedom to speak out, perhaps because his other son is still in China, although expected out soon on a student visa to the U.S. as an unspoken part of this deal. Because of that, U.S. officials are very reluctant to say anything about China's motives. But many of them believe that China released Fang because it desperately needs money.

Rather talks with Plante:

Brokaw: Other than President Bush giving some help on the most-favored-nation status, which the Chinese want so badly, how does this help China's old-line, hard-line communist leaders?

Plante: The Chinese want what they've been denied since their crackdown on Tiananmen Square, which is access to World Bank loans, and particularly to Japanese development money. And now that Fang is out the Japanese are expected to plead China's case at the economic summit coming up in Houston in just two weeks. (CBS-5)

LONDON BOMB

Brokaw: In London this evening a bomb blast ripped through the ground floor of the exclusive Carlton Club near Buckingham Palace, a club favored by some leaders of the Conservative Party. Two people were seriously injured. Police say it looks like the work of terrorists. They are searching for a car with Irish license plates.

(NBC-7, ABC-7, CBS-4)

IRAN QUAKE

Brokaw reports that a British newspaper reports that author Salman Rushdie gave the earthquake relief fund more than $8,000.

(NBC-6, ABC-6)

Rather reports that a spokesman for President Bush said today the U.S. has sent $290,000 in relief supplies to the Iranian earthquake victims.

(CBS-6)

ECONOMY

Rather: A real estate trade group said today that sales of existing homes slumped 1.2 percent in May. Even with mortgage rates falling, these re-sales of single-family houses have dropped every month this year except for March when they were unchanged.

(CBS-8)

SECOND-HAND SMOKE

Brokaw: The EPA today released a study on the deadly effect of the so-called second-hand smoke. It estimates that breathing the smoke of other people's cigarettes causes lung cancers that each year kill 3,800 non-smokers. Annual death toll from all diseases linked to passive smoking is put at 50,000.

U.S./PLO DIALOGUE

Just Say No To PLO -- "...Whatever its effects, the President's decision [to suspend talks with the PLO] was correct morally and well-timed politically.... Mr. Bush would have appeared hypocritical to continue talks with the PLO unless Mr. Arafat condemned Abul Abbas's actions.... And politically, the President's move headed off Senate action...on a resolution by Florida Republican Connie Mack and Connecticut Democrat Joseph Lieberman urging suspension of the talks.... Possibly Mr. Arafat has neither the will nor the intra-PLO power to condemn specific acts and practitioners of terrorism. If so, scant trust is owed his renunciation of terrorism. And if he would like to end Abu Abbas's terrorism but lacks the power to do so, there's equally scant hope of Mr. Arafat's ability to enforce any agreement that the U.S.-PLO talks might produce." (Miami Herald, 6/24)

PLO Talks -- Bush Right To Suspend Dialogue, Leave Door Open -- "Reluctantly but rightly, President Bush has suspended the 18-month-old dialogue with the PLO.... Because the PLO is key to the peace process, however, Mr. Bush also rightly left the door open to 'promptly resume the dialogue' once the PLO demonstrates its seriousness by meeting the U.S. conditions. Both the suspension and the prospect for resuming the talks demonstrate the Administration's commitment to the peace process.... [Israel's] invitation to Syrian leader Hafez Assad to discuss the increased Arab belligerence toward Israel is encouraging. But a yes to President Bush's question [calling on Shamir to engage in a dialogue with Palestinians from the West Bank and Gaza] would be the best signal yet of Israeli seriousness about peace."

(Dallas Morning News, 6/23)

U.S. Had No Choice But To End The PLO Talks -- "The U.S. seems to be playing into the hands of Middle East extremists by breaking off its dialogue with the PLO. No doubt Abu Abbas...is overjoyed. And not surprisingly, hard-line Israeli Prime Minister Shamir applauds the decision and wants to make the rupture permanent.... For any peace process even remotely involving the PLO to have plausibility, the action President Bush took was absolutely necessary. The PLO cannot have it both ways: Either it has changed or it hasn't. And if it hasn't, or it can't deliver on solemn commitments it makes under the world's klieg lights, it has no business at the bargaining table. Nor could Israel have confidence in U.S. brokerage of a peace plan if Washington first demanded one standard of behavior and then accepted another.... In the long run, Bush's decision helps reestablish the U.S. as a reliable broker, one willing to be flexible and responsive when appropriate, but tough and demanding when necessary. At the moment, the required mode, toward both sides, is tough and demanding."

(Newsday, 6/22)

Sending The PLO A Message -- "President Bush has taken an appropriate step to distance the U.S. from terrorist factions within the PLO by suspending official contacts with that organization.... Yet the termination of contacts benefits no one. With this action, there is no U.S. diplomatic activity, no Israeli interest in negotiations, no Palestinians with any significant constituencies interested in talking without PLO input, and no PLO. That is tragic.... The cessation of talks with the PLO follows the Bush Administration's blunt criticism of the Israeli government. Mr. Bush had little choice but to step back from the Mideast quagmire until each side takes the concrete steps to prove they want peace."
(Dallas Times Herald, 6/22)

So Who's Laughing Now? -- Hard-Liners Win, Peace Loses With Bush's Unavoidable PLO Call -- "Only the hard-liners in the Middle East can be happy right now. No doubt President Bush's decision to suspend talks with the PLO fills many of them with the wicked glee that comes from observing mindless destruction.... The Palestinians have from the Bush Administration a serious commitment to a peace process in which they would be wholly included, and in which the Israelis would not be permitted to call every major shot. Arafat & Co. are not likely to get a better deck of cards to play with from Washington than they are getting from Bush and his secretary of state. Turning now against PLO Executive Committee member and terrorist Abul Abbas will not be easy for Arafat and his allies. But this is the only way out of the corner that the PLO painted itself into when it originally agreed to talks on condition that it renounce terrorism -- and 18 months later failed to deliver on its part of the deal."
(Los Angeles Times, 6/22)

Washington's Clearer View Of The PLO -- "President Bush did right...by suspending the U.S. diplomatic contacts with the PLO.... As for suspending the contacts,...we think the Administration needs to ask itself some tough questions: Did Arafat simply trick Washington, in the sense that he never had any intention of bringing PLO terrorism to a halt? Or has he discovered that he can't deliver, that he's unable to control the various factions under the PLO umbrella and force them to desist from terrorism?... Either way, however, we're glad the Administration is awakening to the realities of this unhappy relationship with the PLO. Suspension of the contacts is a major step in the right direction."
(New York Post, 6/22)

The Unavoidable Break With The PLO -- "After 18 months of tedious and fruitless talks with the PLO, the Bush Administration has decided to stop talking. The decision was reluctant but, after the attempted Palestinian attack on Tel Aviv three weeks ago, it was unavoidable.... President Bush gave the PLO leader the chance to honor his pledge by repudiating this act of savagery, but Arafat declined. To go on as if nothing had happened would have embarrassed this country, rewarded the PLO's militant elements and invited more terror.... With luck, the U.S. step will mean only an interruption in the talks, not an end. Bush emphasized that he's ready to reconsider.... The decision is now with Arafat and his confederates, who should accept this option if only because they have no better ones."

Today in Congress

Floor Action: The Senate will vote on a constitutional amendment (S J Res 332) to prohibit desecration of the American flag. Senators are scheduled first to consider a proposal to ban flag-burning by statute rather than by amending the Bill of Rights.

Members will also vote on whether to invoke cloture so that the Senate can take up civil rights legislation (S 2104).

The House will resume consideration of the fiscal 1990 spending bill (HR 5021) for the Departments of Commerce, State and Justice. Members will also take up a bill (S 280) that would add portions of Nebraska's Niobrara River and the Missouri River to the Wild and Scenic Rivers System.

At 11 a.m. anti-apartheid leader Nelson Mandela of the African National Congress will speak before a joint meeting of Congress.

VA/HUD Spending: An $80.7 billion appropriations bill to provide funding for veterans', housing and space programs will be marked up by the House Appropriations Committee.

At a June 12 subcommittee markup of the bill, which funds the Departments of Veterans Affairs (VA) and Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and numerous independent agencies, members pared $829 million from President Bush's request for NASA, citing concerns over escalating costs of big-ticket items, such as the proposed manned trip to Mars and the space station.

The measure's funding levels are up significantly from fiscal 1990 spending of $66.2 billion, including a $10.7 billion boost for federal housing programs.

The bill would provide $4.8 billion more than the Bush budget request of $75.9 billion.

Development Banks: The House Banking Committee will consider draft legislation to authorize U.S. participation in two international development banks.

Under the bill, the government would be authorized to purchase $1.1 billion in stock of the new European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, which plans to provide development funds to Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

The government would be authorized to contribute $3.1 billion to the International Development Association (IDA). The IDA, affiliated with the World Bank, extends interest-free loans to poor countries for development projects.

The measure also addresses other development and trade issues. U.S. officers of development banks would be directed to urge the banks to refinance the debt owed by severely indebted countries in Eastern Europe and sub-Saharan Africa.

In addition, over the next two fiscal years $500 million would be added to the Export-Import Bank's tied-aid "war chest." The tied-aid fund was established to pressure other countries to end the practice of linking foreign aid to the purchase of their products.

RICO Markup: The House Judiciary Subcommittee on Crime will mark up a bill (HR 5111) that would revise the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act (RICO).

Enacted in 1970, RICO was designed to give federal prosecutors a powerful tool against organized crime by establishing stiff civil and criminal penalties for racketeering activities. But business groups have complained that some of the law's civil provisions allowing private parties to collect treble damages from companies convicted of racketeering have led to excessive litigation and have victimized legitimate firms.

According to Crime Subcommittee Chairman William J. Hughes, D-N.J., the HOUSE FLOOR: Amtrak, ethics, toxic emissions bills OK'd.

The House yesterday approved by voice vote an Amtrak reauthorization bill (HR 5075) that excludes a railroad anti-takeover provision that caused President Bush to veto an earlier measure.

The legislation calls for $684 million in federal funds for the passenger railroad in fiscal 1991 and $712 million in fiscal 1992.

Bush vetoed the earlier Amtrak bill over objections to a plan that would have required the Interstate Commerce Commission to review the acquisition of major railroads by non-railroad companies. The House voted to override Bush's veto, but the Senate sustained it.

The House yesterday passed several other measures by voice vote as well, including a bill (HR 4525) calling for increased funding for the Office of Government Ethics. Also approved was HR 3058, to protect the Bryce Canyon Dam in Utah from mining activities through an exchange of federal coal leases.

A bill (HR 1457) to require the Environmental Protection Agency to improve its collection and dissemination of data on toxic chemical emissions also gained approval. Members also approved HR 3863, calling for a study of the Underground Railroad, which brought slaves to freedom in the North, for possible inclusion in the National Trails System.

SENATE FLOOR: Debate of flag-burning amendment begins.

The Senate yesterday began consideration of a proposed constitutional amendment (S J Res 332) to ban desecration of the American flag.

Under an agreement reached last week, the resolution will be debated for 10 hours before a final vote is taken. The agreement also specifies that only four amendments may be offered.

Status of Major Legislation

101st Congress

(as of June 25, 1990)

Bill and Background	House	Senate	Final
Clean Air. (HR 3030, S 1630) The bills would extend the 1970 Clean Air Act, last amended in 1977. Each combines four sections dealing with smog, motor vehicles, toxic pollutants and acid rain. The measures would set new restrictions on electric utility sulfur dioxide emissions and new standards for industrial and auto emissions, and would require new technology to reduce toxics.	HR 3030 passed as S 1630 5/23/90	S 1630 passed 4/3/90	Senate conferees appointed 6/6/90
Farm Programs Reauthorization. (HR 3950) Bills to revise and extend federal farm and nutrition programs must be acted on by the end of the year, when the 1985 farm bill (PL 99-198) expires.	Agriculture approved HR 3950 6/13/90	Agriculture approved an unnumbered bill 6/21/90
Fiscal 1991 Budget Resolution. (H Con Res 310, S Con Res 110) The House resolution, which will be an outline for action on appropriations and deficit-reduction bills, calls for a fiscal 1991 budget of $1.2 trillion, with discretionary spending of $492.8 billion in budget authority. S Con Res 110 calls for $482.5 billion in budget authority for discretionary spending.	H Con Res 310 passed 5/1/90	S Con Res 110 passed as H Con Res 310 6/14/90
Disabled Anti-Discrimination. (S 933, HR 2273) The Americans with Disabilities Act would extend to the disabled those rights already guaranteed to women and racial, religious and ethnic minorities under the 1964 Civil Rights Act.	HR 2273 passed as S 933 5/22/90	S 933 passed 9/7/89	Conference completed 6/25/90
Child-Care Programs. (S 5, HR 3) The Senate version of the Act for Better Child Care Services (ABC bill) would authorize $1.75 billion in subsidies and increase tax credits for child care. HR 3 would increase tax credits, increase Title XX funding, expand Head Start and provide grants for before- and after-school care.	HR 3 passed 3/29/90	S 5 passed 6/23/89 HR 3 passed 4/24/90	Conferees began meeting 6/7/90
Oil-Spill Liability and Compensation. (HR 1465, S 686) Both bills would set up a comprehensive oil-spill liability and compensation system. The measures also seek to provide for better cleanup and prevention of spills. Both bills would leave states free to maintain their own oil-spill cleanup funds and enforce their own liability laws.	HR 1465 passed 11/9/89	S 686 passed as HR 1465 11/19/89	Conference began 4/25/90
Parental and Medical Leave. (HR 770) HR 770 would require companies with 50 or more employees to offer 12 weeks a year of unpaid leave to employees caring for a newborn or sick parent or spouse. Workers with a serious illness could take up to 12 weeks a year of disability leave.	HR 770 passed 5/10/90	HR 770 passed 6/14/90	HR 770 cleared 6/14/90
Civil Rights. (S 2104, HR 4000) Both bills would reverse or modify six 1989 Supreme Court decisions that narrowed the reach and remedies of job-discrimination laws and would authorize monetary damages under Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act.	Education and Labor approved HR 4000 5/8/90	Labor and Human Resources approved S 2104 4/4/90
Housing Programs Reauthorization. (HR 1180, S 566) HR 1180 would reauthorize and expand existing federal housing programs. S 566 would reorganize current programs and create a $3 billion-per-year subsidy program to encourage development of low-income housing.	Banking Committee approved HR 1180 6/13/90	Floor debate began on S 566 6/18/90

NEWS from p. 1

Two of the amendments would call for a new statute: one would prohibit burning the flag and another would take jurisdiction over flag-burning issues away from federal courts. The two other amendments would call for a narrowly interpreted constitutional amendment to prohibit flag desecration.

Supporters of S J Res 332 — led by Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan. — are pessimistic the measure has enough support to pass the Senate. A two-thirds vote is needed for approval. The House last week defeated its version (H J Res 350) of the anti-flag-burning resolution.

ADA CONFERENCE finishes; AIDS provision dropped.

House and Senate conferees completed work yesterday on a compromise bill (S 933) to extend civil rights protections to disabled Americans, rejecting a provision that would have allowed employers to reassign workers with the AIDS virus from food-handling positions.

Both chambers hope to clear the measure this week, before Congress breaks for a 10-day Fourth of July recess.

House conferees voted 12-10 to drop the amendment by Jim Chapman, D-Texas, which the House approved earlier this year. The Senate version did not include the provision, but the Senate had instructed its conferees to accept it.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) would provide disabled Americans, including those with AIDS, the same rights to jobs, public transportation and public accommodations as women and racial, religious and ethnic minorities receive under the 1964 Civil Rights Act.

In the enforcement area, conferees agreed to allow Senate employees to file suit in federal court for alleged violations of the ADA law, as specified in the Senate version of the bill. House employees and workers for other congressional agencies, except for the General Accounting Office, would use an internal grievance system.

FDIC ESTIMATES thrift bailout cost could reach $200 billion.

A Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) official said yesterday that the cost of cleaning up the savings and loan industry could be as much as $200 billion — roughly double the amount the administration predicted last month.

Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady told a congressional panel May 23 that the government expects to spend $89 billion to $132 billion in present-value terms to close down insolvent thrifts. But John Bovensi, deputy to FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman, yesterday told the U.S. League of Savings Institutions that as much as $200 billion may be needed. ■ bill would weed out frivolous actions against law-abiding businesses, while reserving its hefty penalties for major white-collar fraud. The bill, which was hammered out during six months of negotiations, would set a higher threshold for civil RICO actions and would allow federal judges to dismiss suits that didn't measure up to the new standard.

Medicare Revisions: The House Ways and Means Subcommittee on Health will mark up proposals that would make a number of Medicare-related changes. Among the items to be considered is a proposal to impose stronger federal standards on Medigap coverage, which is private insurance that supplements the federally funded Medicare program.

Also on the agenda is a proposal to require that hospitals, nursing homes, home health agencies and health maintenance organizations that participate in Medicare inform patients about "living wills," which give patients the right to refuse medical treatment.

The policy changes will eventually be wrapped into legislation making reductions in Medicare spending, which may be required later by a comprehensive deficit-reduction bill.

Glen Canyon Dam: The House Interior Subcommittee on Water, Power and Offshore Energy Resources will mark up a bill (HR 4498) to restrict the flow of water released from the Glen Canyon Dam, located on the Colorado River north of the Grand Canyon in Arizona.

Sponsored by subcommittee Chairman George Miller, D-Calif., the measure calls on the Interior Department to protect the Grand Canyon by moderating the amount of water released from the Glen Canyon Dam.

It directs the Interior secretary to set moderate release levels pending completion of an ongoing environmental impact statement on the dam's effect.

The administration opposes the measure.

Environmentalists and outdoor enthusiasts have complained that widely fluctuating releases from the federal flood control and power-generating facility are damaging the natural and recreational resources in the Grand Canyon.

Oil Reserve: A House Energy subcommittee will mark up legislation that would reauthorize the Strategic Petroleum Reserve at the current level rather than increase its size, as originally proposed.

The bill (HR 3193), as introduced by Energy and Power Subcommittee Chairman Philip R. Sharp, D-Ind., would have authorized expanding the reserve to 1 billion barrels and establishing reserves for refined products such as heating oil.

But the Energy Department opposed the measure, saying the present 750 million barrel cap provided enough security in the case of a disruption in oil imports. An Energy Department study released in February concluded that expanding the reserve would not provide enough added security to justify the estimated $12 billion cost. The reserve currently holds about 590 million barrels of crude oil, which is stored in sites along the Texas and Louisiana coasts.

Members will consider a substitute measure that would keep the cap at 750 million barrels.

The substitute would also mandate that at least 10 percent of the petroleum acquired each year, up to 20 million barrels, go to regional reserves of refined products. Last winter, extreme cold in the Northeast caused a shortage of heating oil.

Frank Investigation: The House ethics committee will meet today and tomorrow to try to wrap up its investigation of Barney Frank, D-Mass. For the past nine months, the committee has been looking into Frank's relationship with Steve Gobie, a prostitute.

Frank has admitted to paying Gobie for sex and to hiring him as a household aide with Frank's personal funds. Frank also used his influence to have several of Gobie's parking tickets dismissed.

According to a report in The Washington Post last week, the committee is likely to issue a letter of reproof — a fairly mild rebuke, which the full House does not have to consider.

But California Republican William E. Dannemeyer, unsatisfied with a rebuke, has threatened to seek a House floor vote on a resolution of expulsion. ■

Not As Scheduled

Yesterday's scheduled meeting of White House and congressional budget negotiators was not held because several important members were not available.

Leaders were not sure when the next meeting would be held, noting that today's visit to Capitol Hill of African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela could complicate scheduling.

One of the participants in the negotiations, Treasury Secretary Nicholas F. Brady, said Sunday he was optimistic that the conferees will work out an agreement to reduce the projected $160 billion fiscal 1991 budget deficit.

"I think we'll get it, we don't have any choice," Brady said. "We are going to have a budget deal and it will happen sooner rather than later."

In 1988, PACs contributed half the campaign funds of more than 200 members of Congress. . .

CQ shows you exactly where the PAC money came from and to whom it went. . .

PACs command a tremendous influence. But who are they influencing? Which PACs are giving to whom? And how much? Open Secrets: The Dollar Power of PACs in Congress is the most thorough resource ever to gather, analyze and present the details of who's supplying the dollars. . . and who's receiving them.

New information

The information contained in Open Secrets has never before been assembled into a useful and understandable format. It brings to the surface patterns and trends that everyone with a professional interest in the American electoral system should see: How elected representatives are funded and by whom.

Open Secrets gives unique "big picture" industry profiles. . .

It analyzes the overall spending patterns of more than 3,200 PACs that made contributions to members of Congress during the '88 elections and offers the first-ever industry-by-industry breakdown of PACs in more than a dozen categories.

Open Secrets gives member profiles. . .

It gives descriptions of each committee's jurisdiction, and the industries and interests affected by its actions. It shows which PACs gave the most to committee members, which committee members received the largest contributions, the top contributors by industry, the election spending for each member for the past three years, and much more.

Open Secrets offers a comprehensive PAC listing. . .

It lists alphabetically all major PACs that contributed $20,000 or more to federal candidates during the 1988 elections. It gives the name and sponsoring organization of each PAC, the number of candidates they supported and the dollar amounts they contributed to Senate vs. House members, Democrats vs. Republicans, and incumbents vs. challengers.

Who needs Open Secrets?

- Reporters. . . Open Secrets identifies every major PAC contributor, identifies the industry/interest of every PAC, and gives essential background for following the progress of bills affecting specific industries.
- Teachers of political science. . . Open Secrets can be used as a starting point for original research as well as show patterns of spending that would take a dedicated professional months to analyze.

- PAC directors and lobbyists. . . Open Secrets shows how much each member of Congress has received from which industry and reveals where competitors have spent their money.
- Political consultants and candidates. . . Open Secrets provides an open book into the campaign finances of every winning candidate in the '88 elections, and an invaluable tool for 1990 and beyond.

The President would like you to talk to Gary Jacobs (friend of George W.) and put him in touch with appropriate people.

The President was going to talk to him personally, but there was no time to return his call.

Jacobs will be in town tomorrow (staying at the Willard) has meetings scheduled with:

Roger Wallace of Commerce
Phil Gramm

Arlen Specter

In talking to Sam Barshop w/
Carla Hills Barshop set up a meeting with Don Abelson in USTR.

1. Joe D'Maggio will be in town tomorrow for an Oriole's Board Meeting. Jim Cicconi is thinking about having him in for lunch. Joe Hagin is asking for guidance:

-- any interest in having lunch with D'Maggio?
(you are free for lunch tomorrow)

-- do you want Cicconi to bring him by for a photo? JS

2. REMINDER: You were going to call Gary Jacobs.
512-723-1151
He called last week re: 512-724-3911

-- upcoming negotiations on Mexican Trade Agreements
(just to share his thoughts)

-- discuss the structure of the banking system to share his ideas on the failures of the system to deal with the issues -- very concerned about the whole S&L mess. No personal interest -- his bank is one of the strongest banks.

(He called you on Wednesday (you were out of town). He was out of town Thursday and Friday. I spoke w/ his office today -- he's back in town, but will be travelling again tomorrow afternoon.)

3. Mrs. Bush called. Do you want her to invite the Skinners for the night of the 3rd? Or will you handle?

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

I met this morning with the Bipartisan leadership -- the Speaker, the Senate Majority Leader, the Senate Republican Leader, the House Majority Leader, and the House Republican Leader -- to review the status of the deficit-reduction negotiations.

It is clear, that both the size of the deficit problem and the need for a package that can be enacted require all of the following: entitlement and mandatory program reform; tax revenue increases; growth incentives; discretionary spending reductions; orderly reductions in defense expenditures; and budget process reform -- to assure that any Bipartisan agreement is enforceable and that the deficit problem is brought under responsible control. The Bipartisan leadership agree with me on these points.

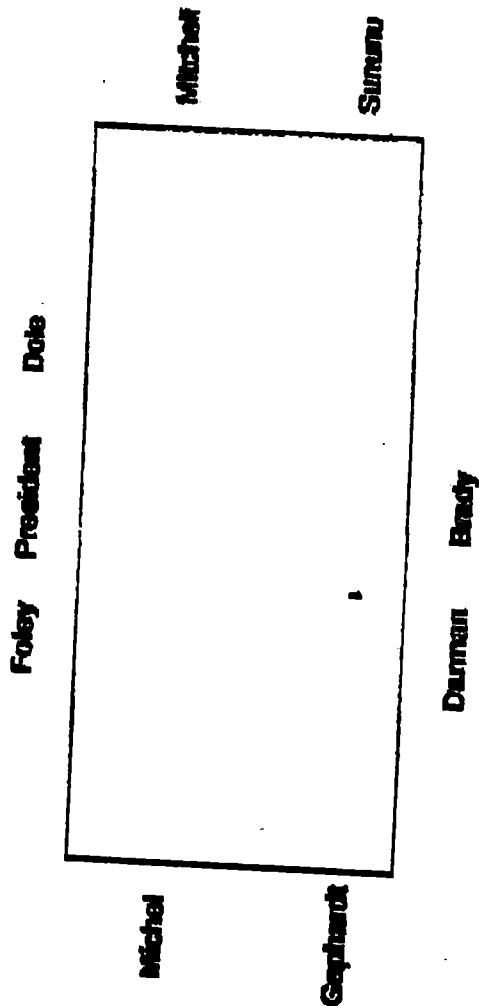

~~We have further agreed that the budget negotiations should reconvene promptly with a view toward reaching substantive agreement as quickly as possible.~~ will resume

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Tuesday, June 26, 1990

STATEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

I have often stated my belief that development of oil and gas on the outer continental shelf (OCS) should occur in an environmentally sound manner.

I have received the report of the interagency OCS Task Force on Leasing and Development off the coasts of Florida and California, and have accepted its recommendation that further steps to protect the environment are needed.

Today, I am announcing my support for a moratorium on oil and gas leasing and development in Sale Area 116, Part II, off the coast of Florida, Sale Area 91 off the coast of northern California, Sale Area 119 off the coast of central California, and the vast majority of Sale Area 95 off the coast of southern California, until after the year 2000.

The combined effect of these decisions is that the coast of southwest Florida and more than 99 percent of the California coast will be off limits to oil and gas leasing and development until after the year 2000.

Only those areas which are in close proximity to existing oil and gas development in Federal and state waters, comprising less than 1% of the tracts off the California coast, may be available before then. These areas, concentrated in the Santa Maria Basin and the Santa Barbara Channel, will not be available for leasing in any event until 1996 -- and then only if the further studies for which I am calling in response to the report of the National Academy of Sciences satisfactorily address concerns related to these tracts.

I am also approving a proposal that would establish a National Marine Sanctuary in California's Monterey Bay and provide for a permanent ban on oil and gas development in the sanctuary, and I am asking the Secretary of the Interior to begin a process that may lead to the buyback and cancellation of existing leases in Sale Area 116, Part II, off southwest Florida.

In addition, I am directing the Secretary of the Interior to delay leasing and development in several other areas where questions have been raised about the resource potential and the environmental implications of development. For Sale Area 132 off the coasts of Washington and Oregon, I am accepting the recommendation of the Secretary that further leasing and development activity be deferred until a series of environmental studies are completed, and directing that no such activity take place until after the year 2000. I am also cancelling Lease Sale 96, in the Georges Bank area of the North Atlantic, and directing that no leasing and development activity take place in this area until after the year 2000. This will allow time for additional studies to determine the resource potential of the area and address the environmental and scientific concerns which have been raised.

Finally, I am today directing the Secretary to take several steps to improve the OCS program and respond to several of the concerns expressed by the Task Force. My goal is to create a much more carefully targeted OCS program -- one that is responsive to local concerns, to environmental concerns, and to the need to develop prudently our nation's domestic energy resources. Although I have today taken these strong steps to protect our environment, I continue to believe that there are significant offshore areas where we can and must go forward with resource development.

While I believe that a leaner OCS program will ultimately be more effective, Americans must recognize that the OCS program is a vital source of fuel for our growing economy. My desire is to achieve a balance between the need to provide energy for the American people and the need to protect unique and sensitive coastal and marine environments.

PRESS BRIEFING
BY
MARLIN FITZWATER

June 26, 1990

The Briefing Room

10:47 A.M. EDT

MR. FITZWATER: You all have the President's statement from this morning following the breakfast. Let me just add to it a couple of notes. First of all, the session was in the Residence. It lasted approximately two hours. The President feels they had a very productive meeting, that they reached a significant consensus on the broad outlines and directions that they want to pursue in the weeks ahead.

There probably will be more presidential involvement as we go through this process. The President would like to have an agreement signed and implemented by the August recess, if that's possible. At least that's the timetable we're working on. He feels that we have made good progress so far. The meetings that have been held to date have been fruitful in terms of understanding, agreement on some of the baseline data, on some of the numbers involved, and on the general direction that we need to be going in.

There will be a session tomorrow. I don't have an exact time yet, but many of you probably saw the press conference on the Hill with the leadership, and they indicated there would be a press conference tomorrow, so we'll have a time for that at some point.

Q One that the President will be involved in?

MR. FITZWATER: The President will not be involved tomorrow in that session. It would be the negotiators that have been meeting in the past several days.

Q When will we hear from the President, Marlin, about this change?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't know. You could hear from him at any time on the statement. I don't expect anything on the statement, and I don't believe -- let's see, what's on the public schedule today. Got a Rose Garden session this afternoon is the only other coverage event we have today.

Q In the statement, the line about growth incentives -- does that mean that you have a commitment from the Democrats to cut taxes on capital gains?

MR. FITZWATER: We aren't willing to give definition to any of these terms in the sense that those are all decisions that will have to be taken by the negotiators. The definitions of what these specific categories mean are ones that are subject to negotiation. So I just can't answer that at this point.

The discussions in the breakfast meeting this morning were definitive in the sense that they did talk about a lot of specific ideas that would be involved in these issues. This statement was worked out in the breakfast, and they all have a good understanding of the direction that they want this to take them. But there was agreement that they would not try to give definition to this outside the negotiating process.

Q If I might, I mean, with what degree of specificity then should we look at all of this? If growth incentives doesn't mean capital gains, then does tax -- if they don't give you capital gains, then might you go back later on if those negotiations break down and not come up with tax revenues?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't think you can be too specific at this point. You have to look at this as kind of midway in the process, if you will; that we've been going on for a month or two now and we've got a month or so to go. We have turned the corner from discussion of baseline data to one of proposals. But we just don't have definitions at this point. We just can't do it.

Q On tax revenues, do you mean income taxes?

MR. FITZWATER: We aren't willing to -- again, to give a definition. I would point to the fact that in the President's previous budgets and the one we submitted this year, there were some $13 billion in tax increases. But beyond that, this is simply an area that we are committing to, but we have to take a look at all the specifics.

Q Marlin, on that very point, are you saying then that this statement today does not mean that the President is even going to go beyond that $13 billion in user fees?

MR. FITZWATER: I'm not saying --

Q That's the limit to which he's going to go, or is this going to be something beyond that?

MR. FITZWATER: No. What I'm saying is that these are the areas that clearly will have to be a part of any package; that we obviously have already had a number of proposals in this tax revenue area. But beyond that, we aren't willing to give a definition, but certainly it's open to discussion.

Q Why the big change in this? Just yesterday, Domenici and Gramm were out there, running down the Democrats, saying that all they were interested in was tax increases. What caused this overnight swing in the statement by the President this morning?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't know that it is that big a change. The main purpose of this statement is to show that the leaders did get together this morning and agreed to pursue the process, that they all believe progress has been made, that they have a definite commitment to work in the days ahead in these specific areas. But we're still a long ways from the final details of a settlement.

Q You emphasize that this statement was worked out with the congressional leaders this morning. Are you saying that this is not exclusively a statement by the President, but it's a joint statement by the President and these congressional leaders?

MR. FITZWATER: No, this is a statement by the President and does represent his feelings and thoughts on the matter. What I'm saying is simply that it was drafted in the meeting and has the understanding of all the participants in terms of what it means and doesn't mean.

Q One of the concerns of the Democrats in these negotiations was that they were being forced into a position where they might have to put the tax issue -- not necessarily new taxes, but the tax issue on the table first. Now, do you consider this statement as being the President's first move in putting the tax issue on the table?

MR. FITZWATER: This statement represents a feeling by both sides that we want to move forward together. We're not interested in who's first and who's last and who gets the blame for this and that, but that both sides want to move in a bipartisan way to resolve this issue. And this statement is designed to reflect that feeling.

Q And one more follow-up, please. Speaker Foley said that he hoped this issue would not be used as a political club in the upcoming elections. Was that part of the discussion this morning? Was there a deal cut where neither side would use this politically?

MR. FITZWATER: It's been part of the understanding since the beginning of these negotiations that we would not negotiate outside the process, that we would not be trying to define terms or take political advantage during the course of these negotiations. And so that situation has not changed.

Q How about after the course of the negotiations?

Q Marlin, whether you want to acknowledge a change or not, the fact of the matter is, that as everybody is well aware, the President said no new taxes. He now says, "It is clear to me both the size of the deficit problem and the need for a package require tax revenue increases." At what point did he reach that conclusion? What convinced him that his basic "no new taxes" pledge had to be abandoned?

MR. FITZWATER: This issue is one that has been addressed from the very beginning. Again, as I said, our original budget proposal had tax revenue increases in it. It's been discussed at all phases of the process. And this agreement reflects the status of where we are and where we're going, but I wouldn't try to pinpoint any kind of specific decision-making yardsticks in this or any kind of minute-by-minute decision-making process associated with this statement.

Q Does he regret having said that -- no new taxes?

MR. FITZWATER: The President has been very forthright on his feeling about this issue all along. He continues to have strong beliefs. He also is interested in pursuing a process that resolves the deficit, cuts federal spending and gets this problem under control. That's the process that we're in. We've tried to be very careful in all of our statements on all these issues, and we stand by everything that's ever been said.

Q Yes, but wait a minute, wait, wait, wait, wait. You say the President's been very forthright, yet you won't say in any regard what this means.

MR. FITZWATER: What this means is that this is an area that the negotiators will be focusing on and they will give a definition in the negotiations.

Q Americans will pay higher taxes?

MR. FITZWATER: I'm not willing to do the negotiating for them here.

Q Were you concerned that without this sort of specific set of conditions being put on the table by the President, that these talks might collapse?

MR. FITZWATER: No. The talks had reached a point where they had to turn the corner, if you will, into a discussion of specific issues and policies. We did put a proposal on the table a few days ago. There have been some ideas floated by the Democrats as well. And clearly, this was a turning point at which the President wanted to reinsert himself and to say let's now move into the hard decisions that are going to be involved in selecting deficit reduction issues.

Q Marlin, did the Democrats either say overtly or hint subtly that they could not go any farther in considering how to arrive at a specific package until Bush made a public statement?

MR. FITZWATER: No, I don't think there were any threats or anything. They just all agreed that they needed a statement by both sides -- this statement by the President and, of course, their statement in their press conference a few minutes ago that had everybody on record and assuring the American people again of our commitment that we were making progress and that they had defined areas of achievement.

Q But is it fair to say that the Democrats pressed for a statement like this? Wanted one?

MR. FITZWATER: No. I think it was agreed by all sides that this was a useful statement to put out at this point in the process.

Q A senior adviser to the President has said that the reason he wouldn't go for taxes is that he believed every $10 billion in new taxes would cost $30 billion in growth. And since growth is a cornerstone of his economic policy that was unproductive. Has he decided he's wrong on that and has he changed his view? And why would he do it if it was going to cost growth?

MR. FITZWATER: Well, I don't know anything about this person's feelings. That's a hypothetical matter. We are not talking any numbers here at this point. There's no way to respond to that.

Q You say they seem to agree on the size of the problem now and now they're dealing with the solution. Did they agree on how large the budget deficit will be?

MR. FITZWATER: Well not in absolute precise terms. But you'll recall that we put on the table on the 20th of June our numbers indicating a deficit of about $159 billion. The Democrats are close to that. They don't agree on that precise number but very, very close, within a few billion. So we're fairly close on that over number.

Q Including or not including savings and loan?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't believe that includes all of it, no.

Q To what degree of specificity did they get into this morning? Because if you read this statement in one way it's simply putting in words what you said at the beginning of the process, that everything is on the table. Did they talk about specific parameters of what they're going to negotiate and go back with instructions for staff to come up with something? Or did they just go as far as this says, that everything is on the table, but now we've put it in words?

MR. FITZWATER: Well, certainly, that's kind of a fair representation in a sense it does reflect the everything is on the table philosophy. And it does give a little more definition to that and describes the categories and so forth. The discussions this morning were more definitive in talking about specific issues within these categories and so forth, but we aren't willing to discuss them publicly.

Q Well, you're saying it's a turning point. I mean, how much of a turning point beyond just saying here in words is what we've said all along?

MR. FITZWATER: Well, it's a turning point in the process of moving -- again moving to discuss the hard decisions that are going to have to be made about various proposals to reduce the deficit.

Q Do you think now it's going to be easier -- now that the President has said taxes in public, it's going to be easier to negotiate with the Democrats?

MR. FITZWATER: This process will never get easier.
(Laughter.)

Q Marlin, can you give us a little flavor -- for example, when the invitation was issued? This didn't appear on the President's schedule that we understood this morning. And how it came about?

MR. FITZWATER: The negotiators agreed yesterday that -- well, let's put it this way -- the President issued an invitation to the negotiators yesterday to come down for breakfast and they accepted and that's how it came about.

Q Did he ask them to keep it -- sort of keep it quiet?

MR. FITZWATER: The intention was to keep it off the record, yes.

Q Did he give them an agenda? Did he let them know, we're going to talk about taxes and get together a statement? I mean, did they know what they were coming for, that they were coming to do this -- come out with this statement?

MR. FITZWATER: That I have no idea.

Q Can you explain the evolution in the President's thinking over the last 18 months from when he laid out a case for why the deficit could be eliminated without any tax increases to the current situation where he says tax revenue increases have to be part of the solution? What are the circumstances, economic and political, that have changed during that period? Could you provide us that context, please?

MR. FITZWATER: There are a number of factors involved. Certainly, first, we have to go to the budget process itself, which was not able to produce a budget on the Hill. You will recall votes in the House and the proposal in the Senate sides that were unsatisfactory. You will recall that our budget did not receive universal endorsement. And so there reached a point where clearly the budget process itself had stalled down in terms of congressional consideration.

Secondly, there were economic figures reported after the first quarter that showed growth rates probably were not going to produce -- certainly, interest rates were holding down growth to the point where we're not going to receive revenues as we originally hoped for. And then the work began also on sequestration, which, as you know, we are duty-bound to report on the 15th of July. And that imposed a rather large figure that seemed to all of us to imply reductions and cuts in the federal budget that would be unacceptable to all parties.

Having said that, we are willing to take sequestration, if that's what necessary, but we certainly would not like to have that happen. So when you consider sequestration, the growth rate and the resulting revenue losses, the general size of the deficit and the fact that we have a stalemate in the Congress over existing budgets, you very quickly reach the point where this negotiation process was warranted in the President's eyes, and that's how we got to this point.

Q You're not willing to take sequestration now, are you -- now that we've got the revised budget figures at $159 billion? I mean, that's out of the question, isn't it?

MR. FITZWATER: We certainly would not want to do that, but it is looming out there, and it remains a very powerful force as to why these negotiations need to be successful.

Q You mentioned that they talked about specific proposals today. Did the President himself -- you don't have to tell us what they are unless you want to -- but did he mention any specific proposals to raise taxes?

MR. FITZWATER: I just can't discuss any specific ideas that were tossed around in the meeting.

Q Marlin, you said that they had agreed on the -- or seemed to be getting closer to agreeing what the 1991 deficit is. But did they agree how large a package -- first-year, five-year terms, and whether they need to slip the targets?

MR. FITZWATER: No. I was just talking about the $159 billion figure was the one we used.

Q But they didn't agree on how much they'd do this year or over five years, and what to do about the Gramm-Rudman target?

MR. FITZWATER: No. That all would be a part of the final agreement.

Q You concede that this is going to be widely interpreted as a concession by the President -- nobody else, right? And is it a crime to say you changed your mind? (Laughter.)

MR. FITZWATER: Let me take that in reverse fashion. First of all, that we have said from the beginning of this process that we need to be open and everything is on the table, and to consider all the opportunities before us to reduce the deficit. This is a refinement of that initial statement. So basically, we've already addressed the fact that we've got to deal realistically with this problem.

What was the first part of your question? (Laughter.)

Q Do you concede this will be widely interpreted as a concession by the President?

MR. FITZWATER: I can't define your interpretation, but I simply give you these words and to say that we still have not reached the agreement, and those things still have to be worked out.

Q Marlin, would you say that today the President agreed to break his pledge of no new taxes?

MR. FITZWATER: I would go back to the beginning of the process and -- (laughter) -- recount for you --

Q Is that a no?

Q Wait a minute. Let him answer it.

MR. FITZWATER: -- and recount for you our initial commitment to putting everything on the table and facing all the hard choices that have to be made. And we have had any number of refinements to that statement ever since. But essentially, that was the point at which everyone faced up to the realities here.

Q In other words, Marlin, can you say that as of --

Q Does this represent a turning point?

MR. FITZWATER: The turning point in the process, as I said, in the sense that we're moving into having to discuss these options.

Q Can you say that by now, after these many steps, whenever the moment came, that as of today he has agreed to break his pledge of no new taxes?

MR. FITZWATER: No. Are you crazy? (Laughter.)

Q How can you say that? How can you say --

Q Is this the sound of concrete cracking under this President's feet?

MR. FITZWATER: No. This is the sound of a foundation being poured.

Q Oooh.

MR. FITZWATER: For a very constructive deficit reduction plan. (Laughter.)

Q With your feet in it, Marlin. (Laughter.)

MR. FITZWATER: Put those babies in concrete. (Laughter.)

Q But the statement itself appears to lock the President into some kind of additional tax revenue increase when it says that "the deficit and the need for a package requires a tax revenue increase." It doesn't say "may require," "could require," "is on the table, open for discussion." It says "require."

MR. FITZWATER: We've always had tax revenue increases in all of our previous budgets, and including this one.

Q That was revenue enhancement, Marlin.

MR. FITZWATER: But we just -- the question is, how do we define this, and that's something for the negotiators.

Q But are you saying that the President is not willing to put any additional tax revenue increase on the table other than this $13 billion --

MR. FITZWATER: I can't say what will come out of the negotiations. Those things have to --

Q You're going to have to admit it someday. Isn't this a good day to just admit it?

MR. FITZWATER: Never.

Q Are you conceding that the use of the words "tax revenue increases" is not necessarily limited to the $13.9 billion you proposed in January?

MR. FITZWATER: I can't give it that definition. I don't know where it will end up.

Q So are you saying it's limited to that?

MR. FITZWATER: I can't say. It might turn out to be less, it might turn out to be more.

Q Newt Gingrich would be an equivalent of a Majority Leader of the House. Why was he not included in this list?

MR. FITZWATER: The leadership on the Democratic side is -- I guess I need to check what Gephardt's -- he has a special role. He's the head of the budget negotiations. I'm not sure how that all came about, but that's not an issue. It's not an issue with us. I don't think it is with Newt, either.

Q Marlin, you've said repeatedly that this doesn't necessarily commit the President to any more tax increases than what we've had so far. Is it then true that we really don't have any movement here? We've got the use of the word "tax," but aside from that, the President is not committed to anything here that he wasn't before the statement was made, that there really is no change in his position?

MR. FITZWATER: We're in the midst of a negotiating process, and what this does is commit the negotiators to work in these areas to come up with proposals. But it doesn't define what they are, no.

Q Everything was on the table before, supposedly including revenues. So what has changed? What is new in this statement that we didn't have before? What's different?

MR. FITZWATER: You have this -- a commitment by the President and by the leaders to continue to work in these areas. You have a statement of the progress they have made. You have a little more definitive direction in terms of the areas that they're working in.

Q The "read my lips, no new taxes" pledge was probably the most frequently repeated phrase during the President's campaign. Does he feel that if he had gone around the country saying that "the size of the deficit problem and the need for a package that could be enacted required tax revenue increases" that he would have been elected President? (Laughter.)

MR. FITZWATER: We feel he said the right thing then and he's saying the right thing now.

Q But are they the same thing?

Q But does he feel that the circumstances have changed so much that what he said was true then?

MR. FITZWATER: Everything we said was true then and it's true now. No regrets, no backing off.

Q What has changed since then that has changed the circumstances so much that it's gone from no new taxes to --

MR. FITZWATER: I'm glad you asked. I'd like to go through once again the same litany I did with John. First of all, we took a look at the first quarter economic assessment, which showed a declining growth rate and declining interest rates. And it became clear that we were not achieving the revenues that we had originally thought.

Q Are you just going to repeat that again?

MR. FITZWATER: I'm going to repeat every word of it.

Q Can we stipulate?

Q Marlin, since I know what you're going to say, let me ask my follow-up question. Does that mean that you are now saying that the economy has gotten worse under George Bush's presidency?

Q Whooo!

MR. FITZWATER: Whooo!

Q You can only duck so long.

Q What's the answer? Has it or not?

MR. FITZWATER: The economy is strong and is continuing to grow, and we want to maintain that growth, and we have the foresight to look ahead and say we need to undertake the fiscal kinds of policies that will maintain 90 months of economic expansion, a world record expansion, and we want to continue right out 100 months, 110 months -- 120 months. There's no stopping us, David. I want to see that on the front page of The L.A. Times tomorrow.

Q Yeah, right.

Q He counter-punches his way out of the corner --

Q You could have been on camera with that.

Q In terms of the economy overall, it's been --

MR. FITZWATER: Don't you want to talk about German reunification, Nick? (Laughter.)

Q Marlin, let's talk about the Egyptian Foreign Minister.

Q Anyway, it's been said that not only must the deficit come down, but the savings rate must also increase for overall economic health of the economy. Are you concerned that the stated need for a tax revenue increase is going to hurt the other side, the savings rate, or, are there provisions in these negotiation to also provide for an increase in the savings rate?

MR. FITZWATER: It's pretty tough to answer that question because we don't have -- the specifics have yet to be worked out, so you can't really judge impacts. Overall, we certainly want to increase the savings rate, and that's why we've proposed a family assistance savings plan and other measures. I think it's fair to say that as we go through this, as the negotiators go through it, I'm sure they will have in their minds maintaining a savings rate that increases the pool of money for investment. But that's something again that would have to be considered in the context of the specifics.

Q What about the Egyptian Foreign Minister --

MR. FITZWATER: Let's finish this, and then we'll go to -- we've got several other important issues, including one for Leo. So let's go on.

Q Who from the administration side was in this meeting this morning? And if the President's going to be out of town for the next two weeks, essentially, starting Friday, how is he going to be more involved in the budget talks?

MR. FITZWATER: In the meetings this morning we had -- of course, you know the congressional members, and then Governor Sununu, Secretary Brady and Director Darman. We'll just have to go through the process. As I said, we're hoping to do it by August recess, but the President will be available as is needed and as he's here, obviously. He can't -- when we're in Houston and in London we won't be available, but when we're back, we will be.

Q What about in Kennebunkport? Is he planning any kind of discussions with his advisors up there on this subject?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't think it's anticipated there would be during this upcoming three-day stay, no. And by August, hopefully, it will all be done.

Q Marlin, this statement says it also would require entitlement and mandatory program reform. Does that mean that Social Security will be cut at least temporarily?

MR. FITZWATER: My answer there is the same, that we cannot give definition at least for --

Q Is there any other way to read that that you could possibly see?

MR. FITZWATER: Oh, I'm sure there are all kinds of ways to read this, but I would not suggest any specific way of doing it.

Q Was there any kind of arrangement whereby Bush included the tax portion and the Democrats agreed to include the Social Security portion?

MR. FITZWATER: No. They went through all of these issues, had a lengthy discussion of all the various options and decided upon these categories. But I couldn't get into any give-and-take or suggest the process. I think they all agree that these are the categories that are necessary.

Q Can you tell us -- the President's well aware of all the "read my lips" jokes. Can you tell us if he expressed any of the sense of humor, recognition of humor that you have here this morning?

MR. FITZWATER: I haven't talked to the President at length about this. I did go over the statement with him. He feels very comfortable with it and thinks it points us in a very strong direction. But I didn't really get a chance to give him any of my best lines.

Q Is that why he answered our questions this morning?

Q Marlin, were you in it?

MR. FITZWATER: No, I was not. -- at the very end, but I was not at the meeting.

Q Why is he not coming before the cameras today? Is he ducking us?

MR. FITZWATER: Nothing to say.

Q Marlin, did the White House take any political soundings before deciding to go ahead with this statement? And if so, what kind of reading did you get?

MR. FITZWATER: No.

Q You took no political -- you made no effort to find out what Atwater or Mary Matalin or Ed Rollins or anyone thought about the political ramifications of taking the step?

MR. FITZWATER: Not to my knowledge. Doing the right thing for the right reasons.

Q To follow up on that, how much lobbying -- let me see -- how active were the Republicans in this, in trying to persuade the President that a statement like this was necessary? We heard from Bob Michel that a statement like this would be necessary several weeks ago. I wonder how active he and other members of the Republican leadership might have been in --

MR. FITZWATER: I'm not aware of any conversations about this outside the meeting this morning. There may have been some, but I'm just not aware of it.

Q Another point the President made repeatedly during the campaign is, he said the surest way to cut economic growth in this country is to raise taxes. And that was an argument he made repeatedly. Now you're saying it and in the statement he's saying that you have to consider tax increases to keep the economy growing.

MR. FITZWATER: No, I'm saying we have to consider --

Q Why the reversal?

MR. FITZWATER: We have to consider a budget that gets the deficit down. We cannot continue this huge deficit. We cannot face the sequestration without having significant cuts. There are impacts in the economic cycle from interest rates; and all these matters that have to be considered. But I would not lay that conclusion on any one specific item.

Q Well, but does the President believe that tax revenue increases can help continue economic growth or stifle economic growth?

MR. FITZWATER: Well, again, I'm not going to comment on any specific item because I don't want to prejudge the talks. We've said everything's on the table.

Q I mean generally.

MR. FITZWATER: But you'll interpret it as specifics, so I can't get involved.

Can't we move on to a lot of other issues here?

Q Marlin, can I ask one more on this? Let me ask the other side of that question. How much is the President concerned that without some kind of agreement, that does include taxes and that is substantial, that there will be an adverse market reaction that in the long run is going to have a devastating effect on the economy?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't think the market is reflective of the specific content of the package as much as it is the overall deficit reduction effort that's made. And history has shown that the markets are sensitive to efforts to reduce the deficit; certainly, interest rates are often reflected in budgetary considerations of that kind. But I would not try to tie market expectations to any specific aspect. The important thing is --

Q But, Marlin, what about the decision to try to push forward today? I mean, how much is he worried about the markets?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't know that this would have that much impact on the markets. We've been talking about budget reduction. I think the markets will take heart today from the fact that they've made progress, that they've issued a joint statement saying there are areas of agreement that they are pursuing. But I suspect it would be more related to this overall progress rather than any specific item.

Q OCS?

MR. FITZWATER: Bill, how about a final question. Let's go on to some other things. Haven't we exhausted every aspect of this budget?

Q Yes.

Q No.

MR. FITZWATER: No. Patrick, go ahead.

Q You did mention the savings and loans --

MR. FITZWATER: I'm sorry, Bill, go ahead.

Q I have a follow-up. (Laughter.) I just want to make sure that I understand one of your previous answers. Are you saying in the briefing here this morning that the President's "no new taxes" pledge is still in effect?

MR. FITZWATER: I'm saying that we have agreed that for this process that we would not comment on specific aspects, that everything's on the table. As I've said here so many times, I don't want to prejudice this debate in any way by giving you speculation on the various specifics.

Q I understand, but is the pledge still in effect?

MR. FITZWATER: I'm saying that everything's on the table and we aren't going to make comments that prejudice the process.

Q Mitchell said at his press conference on the Hill 45 minutes ago, quote, "The President has concluded that tax increases are necessary." Are you saying that is not true? That the Majority Leader is wrong?

MR. FITZWATER: I'm saying that the statement speaks for itself, that I've defined it here in our terms for the better part of an hour almost. And I will live by those words. And everybody's free to characterize it in any way they want to.

Q I think you also said at one point that the negotiators agreed on what the statement means. Was Mitchell right when he said that is what the statement means?

MR. FITZWATER: I say they were there when the statement was written and I'm sure they all have different impressions, and they're all free to comment on those. I'm just telling you what our attitude is.

Q You are?

MR. FITZWATER: But I wouldn't comment on them.

Patrick, a final question on the budget.

Q You didn't mention the savings and loan and this litany of things that brought about the need for this reassessment here. Is that not a factor -- doesn't enter in at all?

MR. FITZWATER: Only in a sense of its impact on the deficit, yes. (Laughter.)

Q Is it not one of the considerations here, or not?

MR. FITZWATER: In that it raises the deficit, sure.

Q The President issued the invitation for this meeting. When he did so, did he intend at the time to have such a statement worked out, or was this something that was volunteered by the Democrats in the course of talks today?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't know the intentions beforehand.

Q Why did he call the meeting?

Q Why weren't you invited?

MR. FITZWATER: Because he thought it was important that they meet again to -- at the leadership level to put new emphasis behind the process which now is going to have to focus on these difficult decisions. The budget negotiators have been meeting almost daily in various subgroups and negotiating sessions usually under the direction of Congressman Gephardt. And the Speaker of the House and the Majority Leader, Mr. Mitchell, and the President all felt it was important to gather this leadership group back together at this point to give new emphasis to the process.

Let's cut it off. I mean we exhausted every possible --

Q OCS.

MR. FITZWATER: OCS -- we will release a statement and a fact sheet at 12:30 p.m. today announcing the President's decision on offshore drilling. The announcement will be followed by a press conference at the Department of Interior with Secretary Lujan and Director of the Mineral Management Service Barry Williamson.

Q What time?

MR. FITZWATER: That's at approximately 1:00 p.m. Just by way of background, in his February 9, 1989, address to Congress the President posed a moratorium on three lease sales -- Sale 91 off the coast of northern California, Sale 95 off the coast of southern California, and Sale 116, part 2, off the coast of southwestern Florida. On March 21st, 1989, a task force was named consisting of the Secretary, Secretary Watkins at Energy, Administrator Knauss of NOAA, Administrator Reilly of EPA and Director Darman.

Q What was the date on that?

MR. FITZWATER: March 21. The task force delivered its report to the President on January 3. The President met with the members on January 18 and May 16 to discuss it. And his decision will be carefully crafted and written and available to you with a fact sheet at 12:30 p.m.

Q Are the people in Florida still going to be happy?

Q What do you mean will be, it is, isn't it?

Q You said January 16th and --

MR. FITZWATER: The task force meetings were on January 18 and May 16.

Second announcement. On the Spotted Owl. At 2:30 p.m.

--

Q Wait a minute.

MR. FITZWATER: Yes.

Q When did he make a decision?

Q Wait a minute, OCS first.

MR. FITZWATER: On OCS. Okay. Helen asked first. First question, she asked when he made the decision. I pointed out this process in order to emphasize that it's been a continuing decision-making process in which he has listened to a number of people. He met with the congressional delegations from Florida and California, as well as with the task force twice, and with individual members as well. He has talked to individuals related to this case and Congress and others, and within the last few days, has begun to make decisions regarding to the specifics of the case in terms of drafting language and defining exactly how this decision would go. So it's impossible to specify a minute, but I would say in the last few days.

Q Why is he not doing it himself? Why are you doing it by paper and leaving it to Lujan?

MR. FITZWATER: The decision is a complicated one.

Q Then why are you leaving it to Luhan? (Laughter.)

MR. FITZWATER: Doing it on paper specifies the exact nature of it. Secretary Lujan is the definitive expert who can give you all of the information on the background of these leases and what goes into them.

Q Is Pete Wilson going to be with him?

Q Would he at any point be available to answer questions about it in the next few days? And also, have there been any discussion at all or prior notification to Pete Wilson or to California Republicans?

MR. FITZWATER: I'm sure he'll be glad to answer questions at some point. And I'm sure there will also be prior notification, although I don't know when that happened -- probably already this morning.

Q Logistical question -- will the White House paper be available at Interior?

MR. FITZWATER: At Interior? We can make sure that happens, can't we? Sure.

Q The Egyptian Foreign Minister -- I have a deadline.

MR. FITZWATER: You're on deadline? All right, let's do that then. There's nothing else on OCS, is there? Let me do the Spotted Owl first and get it out of the way.

At 2:30 p.m. in the press room at the Department of Agriculture, Secretary Yeutter and Secretary Lujan -- this man has a busy day today -- will announce their agencies' plans to protect the Northern Spotted Owl. The plans will be implemented by the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management, the two key federal agencies involved. And it will take effect on July 23.

I have a lengthy process here that goes into this. I don't know that I need to go through all of it here.

Q Press room at Agriculture?

Q Put it on paper.

Q Paper.

MR. FITZWATER: It is available here at least. I can make it available to you.

Q The departmental auditorium, Marlin?

Q Where is it?

MR. FITZWATER: At 2:30 p.m. at the Department of Agriculture.

Q Where?

MR. FITZWATER: Press room.

Q Marlin, does the President feel that protecting the entire habitat of the Spotted Owl is not fair to the loggers and jobs that would be lost?

MR. FITZWATER: Well, I would wait until you see the decision and then we'll face those questions.

Let me do a readout on the Meguid visit.

Q On the Egyptian Foreign Minister meeting with President Bush, the Foreign Minister said he was encouraged by President Bush. What is the new element which Mubarak needed to send his Foreign Minister after he talked to the President on Saturday? What is the new element to bring him here?

MR. FITZWATER: The meeting lasted approximately a half an hour. President Bush and Foreign Minister Meguid are old friends, have known each other for a number of years. The discussion focused on the peace process and the President's recent decision with regard to the PLO.

The President made two essential points in the discussion. First, that the United States is committed to continuing the peace process and we want to work as best we can to get a dialogue going that will help resolve those issues. Secondly, the President reiterated that his action with regard to the PLO was a suspension of our dialogue and that we continue to look to the PLO to make those actions and statements that would allow us to resume a dialogue at some point in the future. And the discussion for the entire period really focused around those two questions in terms of the Minister's information from the Middle East and our reaction to that.

Q To follow up, the State Department said yesterday that Abdel Meguid is not discussing the PLO because of the suspension, there is no other channel. The Egyptians will not be the channel to the PLO. So now you are saying he discussed the PLO suspension, suspension of the dialogue.

MR. FITZWATER: I'm saying there was a discussion of that, yes. But that does not -- that's not the same as defining their role. I don't know what their role would be.

Q What is the new element in it? Do you know why he sent him after the telephone conversation, why did he send him? What is the new element?

MR. FITZWATER: I assume the reference to a new element would simply be listening to the President express his personal commitment on these issues.

Q What did President Mubarak propose in his letter to President Bush to move the peace process forward?

MR. FITZWATER: He did give a letter -- Minister Meguid did deliver a letter to the President, but we didn't get a chance to read it before the meeting was over. And I came right here from that, so I don't --

Q So the President is not sending a reply to Mubarak? Because he implied there was a reply.

MR. FITZWATER: He will reply, yes.

Q But he did not give it to Abdel Meguid?

MR. FITZWATER: He hadn't read the first letter yet.

Q Do you have any comment on the --

MR. FITZWATER: I mean, he will.

Q -- the progress or lack of progress with the structural initiatives talks with the Japanese after a few days?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't really have anything to add on that. We continue to keep pressure on. We continue to believe that we will be able to reach a satisfactory final report.

Q Parental leave?

MR. FITZWATER: Parental leave not here yet.

Q Can we follow up on Tokyo?

MR. FITZWATER: I'll come back, Helen.

Q Has Governor Sununu met with Chinese government officials or their representatives here in New York in recent days or weeks?

MR. FITZWATER: I'm not aware of any meeting.

Q You weren't aware that Sununu did some of the spade work leading up to the announcement yesterday?

MR. FITZWATER: I don't think so. I've not heard anybody even speculate on that.

Q Why do you ask, John?

MR. FITZWATER: Why do you ask, John? (Laughter.)

Q We have a story from Tokyo quoting a high administration official as saying that they're going to have budget surpluses by 1993 by using Social Security surpluses.

MR. FITZWATER: No, that -- you mean the United States?

Q U.S.

MR. FITZWATER: Yes, I saw that statement, but that's just a slightly -- I don't know what to put it -- garbled version of the existing budgetary process, which is that Social Security trust funds are counted as a part of the deficit. Our budget aims at a balanced budget in 1993, and so you would have that outcome. But it does not mean that we're going to use trust funds to pay off the deficit in any new sense, no.

THE PRESS: Thank you.

10:00 A.M. NEWS UPDATE

BUDGET (Bud Newman, UPI) -- President Bush, reversing a long-standing opposition to tax increases, announced Tuesday that "it is clear to me" the need to reduce the budget requires "tax revenue increases" and cuts in domestic spending. In a brief two-paragraph statement following a two-hour meeting with Republican and Democratic leaders, Bush laid out a new package of proposals, without giving details, and said that the "bipartisan leadership agrees with me on these points." The President also said that "growth incentives; discretionary spending reductions; orderly reductions in defense expenditures; and budget process reform" are needed "to assure that any bipartisan agreement is enforceable and that the deficit problem is brought under responsible control." He said the budget negotiations "will resume promptly with a view toward reaching substantive agreement as quickly as possible."

(Bud Newman, UPI) -- Amid fears that bipartisan budget talks between the White House and Capitol Hill are breaking down, President Bush and top congressional leaders met Tuesday in an attempt to spur change.... "I think that the purpose (of Tuesday's) breakfast is to discuss how serious the President feels about these discussions," said one GOP congressional aide. "I don't know if it's another feeling-out exercise."... Sen. Packwood described the meeting as "a roundtable discussion, each of putting forth some ideas of how you might come together in a package and we realize it has to be acceptable to the House, the Senate, the Republicans, the Democrats and the President." Sen. Gramm said Republicans "are very perplexed" with the talks. "We don't understand what the Democrats expect and we don't understand why we are not proceeding with negotiations," Gramm said. "We are ready. Everything that has to be done, has been done."... Packwood said, "I think our request is for the Democrats to come forth with a plan. If we don't reach some conclusion, significant conclusion, by the end of the week, I think getting any serious, substantive conclusion (before Congress's month-long August recess) is unlikely."

U.S.-CHINESE RELATIONS (Beijing/Reuter) -- A senior U.S. official arrived in Beijing Tuesday for talks with Chinese officials, one day after a dissident scientist was allowed to leave the American Embassy where he had sheltered for more than a year. Desaix Anderson, deputy assistant secretary of state, will hold talks with Foreign Ministry officials on Sino-American relations and other issues during his stay of about five days, U.S. Embassy officials said.

U.S.-JAPANESE TRADE (Tokyo/UPI) -- The U.S. told Japan it will try to put its budget into the black as its part of the bargain in trade talks, U.S. officials said Tuesday on the second day of negotiations. The U.S. plan involves amending budget-balancing legislation to provide for budget surpluses after 1993, said a senior Bush administration official participating in the talks. It will also involve using surplus funds from the Social Security fund to pay off the federal debt, said the official, who briefed reporters on condition of anonymity.

APARTHEID/EC (Dublin/UPI) -- European Community leaders, applauding the "foresight and courage" of recent reforms in South Africa, signalled readiness Tuesday to relax economic sanctions if steps to abolish apartheid continue. The 12 heads of state also endorsed the concept of financial aid to the Soviet Union but refused to provide a $15 billion emergency aid package sought by France and West Germany. Instead, a high-level panel will study the Soviet Union's needs. In the final communique of the two-day summit, EC leaders said they would "consider a gradual relaxation" of sanctions against South Africa "when there is clear evidence that the process of change already initiated continues."

MANDELA VISIT (Reuter) -- A death threat has been made against Nelson Mandela during his 12-day trip of the U.S., CNN reported Tuesday. It said there had been intelligence reports that an assassination attempt would be made against the 71-year-old black nationalist.... There was no confirmation of the CNN report made before Mandela was to address a joint meeting of Congress.

PHILIPPINES/PEACE CORPS (Manila/AP) -- The U.S. Embassy has ordered all Peace Corps volunteers to leave their posts and report to Manila because of reports that communist rebels plan to attack volunteers, American officials said Tuesday.

LITHUANIA/GORBACHEV (Moscow/UPI) -- President Gorbachev received Lithuanian President Landsbergis Tuesday and discussed the possibility of negotiations if Lithuania freezes its declaration of independence.... Tuesday's meeting came at Gorbachev's invitation and lasted 90 minutes, the official Tass news agency said.... "The discussions touched on mutual relations, the possibility of negotiations, and the suggestions and demands of the U.S.S.R. to Lithuania regarding a moratorium on its declaration of independence," Tass said. Moscow Radio's Interfax news service quoted Landsbergis as saying, "There was a useful exchange of opinions. The meeting allowed a clarification of the position of the two sides."

POOL REPORT FOR THE MEETING WITH FOREIGN MINISTER AHMED ABDEK MEGUID

Oh, the games we play,

In the words of Bob Ellison of Sheridan Radio, the president looked like the student who wanted more than anything for the teacher not to call on him. As your pool walked in, he had a sheath of papers on his lap, his legs were crossed and he was facing toward the foreign minister. His head was down, and he was looking through the papers. His body language screamed "Please don't call on me."

But, of course, Helen Thomas did. She asked him about taxes. He did not acknowledge her existence. But he muttered to the foreign minister, "They have their job to do and I have mine. Mine is to make you feel welcome and to pay attention to this very important letter from Mr. Mubarak."

A couple more questions were asked and ignored. As the pool filed out, the microphones picked up the president saying to the foreign minister, "How do you like that. I never looked over."
