NIXON LIBRARY DEDICATED AS
3 GOP PRESIDENTS PRAISE 'ARCHITECT OF PEACE'

YORBA LINDA -- Flanked by his three immediate Republican predecessors, President Bush hailed Richard Nixon Thursday as an "architect of peace" as the museum and library that chronicle the triumphs and the downfall of the 37th president were officially dedicated.

Bush and former Presidents Ford and Reagan praised Nixon's leadership in foreign policy and ignored the controversies, culminating with the Watergate scandal, that made his tenure in the White House among the most tumultuous chapters in American political history.

Only Bush mentioned Watergate, which he listed as Nixon's seventh crisis, as he outlined the chapters of the former President's life that are depicted in the $21 million museum and library. Future generations, Bush said, would remember Nixon not for controversies but "for dedicating his life to the greatest cause offered any president -- the cause of peace among nations."

"Mr. President, you helped America answer its 'summons to greatness,'" Bush said to Nixon. "Thank you for serving the cause of peace."
(Ann Devroy, WASHINGTON POST, A5)

Nixon Library Dedicated By Four Presidents

YORBA LINDA -- Four living presidents attended a rare gathering Thursday to dedicate the Richard M. Nixon Library and museum and to honor the only man to resign the presidency.

President Bush and former Presidents Reagan and Ford all lavished praise on Nixon at the morning dedication ceremony as about 150 protesters outside the library grounds carried signs reading "Still Tricky Dick" and "Don't honor a crook" and taunted Bush during his speech.

The event, which drew a crowd estimated at 50,000, marked the first time four presidents and their wives had assembled for a public ceremony. Jimmy Carter...was invited to participate but declined....

"You, Dick Nixon, have the gratitude of men and women everywhere who cherish peace with liberty," said former President Ford....

Reagan called Nixon a patriot and praised his contributions in foreign policy. "Richard Nixon is a man who understands the world," Reagan said, "a man whose foreign policy was universally acknowledged as brilliant. I don't think it's an exaggeration to say the world is a better place -- a safer place -- because of Richard Nixon." ...

In his introduction of Nixon, Bush praised him as a man of intellect, loyalty, compassion and controversy -- "the quintessence of middle America" -- who spoke loudly and eloquently for the "silent majority from Dallas to Davenport, Syracuse to Silver City."

"Finally and most importantly, I would say to visitors: Richard Nixon helped change the course not only of America but of the entire world," Bush said.
(Annette Haddad, UPI)

Nixon Praised At Library Opening

YORBA LINDA -- Beneath a broiling California sun, Richard Nixon basked Thursday in praise of his efforts for peace and invoked his lifelong zest for political combat to offer some philosophical advice to the nation's youth.

"It is sad to lose," the only American president forced from office told a crowd of about 40,000 at ceremonies dedicating his presidential library. "But the greatest sadness is to travel through life without knowing either victory or defeat." ...

The philosophical remarks by the most controversial president in recent times contributed to the distinctly positive tone as Nixon's three Republican successors...joined to hail his foreign policy achievements as helping to produce democracy's global triumphs.

"Future generations will remember him most in my view for dedicating his life to the greatest cause offered any president - the cause of peace among nations," President Bush declared.

(Carl Leubsdorf, DALLAS MORNING NEWS)

Bush, Ford, Reagan Meet To Dedicate Nixon Library

YORBA LINDA -- A Republican Mount Rushmore -- President Bush and former Presidents Nixon, Ford and Reagan -- met Thursday to dedicate the Richard Nixon Library in a patriotic ceremony that pointedly avoided mention of the episode for which Nixon is best known.

Except for a passing, almost benign reference by Bush, the word "Watergate" was never mentioned. The scandal that resulted in Nixon's resignation...was excluded from the texts of the official speeches. Even the presidents' tour of the Nixon Library neatly sidestepped the Watergate Room, apparently the only major exhibit ignored during the walk-through....

The presidents who gathered Thursday to honor Nixon portrayed him as a man of courage and vision, a leader in the field of world affairs and, in the words of Reagan, "a patriot." ...Signs of discord at the event were as rare as a Democratic button.

(Janet Cawley, CHICAGO TRIBUNE)

Peers Honor Nixon At Library Opening

YORBA LINDA -- Former President Nixon, who was elected by the largest-ever popular vote and then became a political outcast because of Watergate, proved Thursday you can go home again.

Beaming in 95-degree sunshine at a huge celebration to open the Nixon Library and Birthplace, the 37th president declared: "Nothing we have ever seen matches this moment, to be welcomed home again."

President Bush and former Presidents Reagan and Ford turned out for the red-white-and-blue occasion.... Bush told the audience, estimated at about 30,000, that Nixon was a peacemaker: "Mr. President, you helped America answer its summons to greatness. Thank you for serving the cause of peace."

(Paul Bedard, WASHINGTON TIMES, A1)

Born-Again Nixon Is Lauded

YORBA LINDA -- Sixteen years after urging Richard Nixon to resign, President Bush Thursday praised him as a "true architect of peace" at the dedication of the Nixon Presidential Library and Birthplace.

Bush, standing with former Presidents Reagan and Ford, made only passing reference to the Watergate scandal that wrecked Nixon's presidency. He urged Americans to "look at Richard Nixon, the man."

"Richard Nixon helped change the course, not only of America but of the entire world," he said, citing Nixon's trip to China and his peace efforts in the Middle East.

"Who can forget how in Moscow, Richard Nixon signed the first agreement to limit strategic nuclear arms -- giving hope to the world for a lasting peace?"

A beaming Nixon said, "This is the first time I've ever been introduced by the President of the United States."

(Tom Raum, NEW YORK DAILY NEWS, 15)

Nixon Library

YORBA LINDA -- Richard Nixon smiled.

The only president to resign his office, the most controversial figure in modern American politics, he was standing once again in front of thousands of cheering people. He had been introduced with considerable delicacy and approval by no fewer than three U.S. presidents; only President Bush had even mentioned the scandal that forced Nixon from the White House 16 years ago.

So Nixon smiled, and he savored the moment.

"I believe in the American dream, because I have seen it come true in my own life," he said after the applause had faded and the audience had been seated....

And the only demonstrators who disrupted the ceremony were protesting not Nixon but Bush, chanting "What about AIDS?" when Bush began to speak. They were led away by law enforcement officials.

(Susan Page, NEWSDAY)

BUSH CALLS ON CONGRESS TO MOVE ALONG BUDGET PROCESS

BOISE -- President Bush, who last month dropped his opposition to new taxes, called on the Democratic-controlled Congress Thursday to reach a new deficit-reducing budget, saying, "I did my part - now it's their turn."

"There must be real reform of the budget process and real spending control," Bush told a $200,000 fundraiser for Rep. Larry Craig, who is running for the Senate.

"Larry's leadership is so valuable," Bush said. "He and I know that this problem stems from too much spending -- not too few taxes." ...

Craig, in an interview Thursday, said, "There are a lot of things that George Bush stands for that Idaho residents stand for. This (new taxes) is not one of them." ...

"The congressional budget process is at best, clumsy and illogical -- and at worst, cynical and chaotic," Bush said. "In short, a metaphor for what's wrong with Washington today."

(Thomas Ferraro, UPI)

Bush On Campaign Trail In Big Sky Country

BILLINGS, Mont. -- Here in Big Sky country, where independence and anti-tax sentiment run deep, President Bush has tried to take the political edge off a turnabout on tax hikes that has some Republicans angered and running scared.

Hopes for a more Republican -- and cooperative -- U.S. Senate in the final half of his first term had Bush in Billings on Friday to raise campaign money for Allen Kolstad, the GOP challenger to Sen. Baucus....

And in a brief political appearance Thursday night in Idaho for GOP Senate hopeful Larry Craig, Bush tried to calm restive Republicans by turning the tables on Democrats gloating about his recent political conversion on the issue of higher taxes to reduce the deficit.

In a tacit admission that politics is the art of compromise, Bush asserted that he gave ground in agreeing to include taxes in any eventual bipartisan plan to cut the budget deficit and challenged Democrats to do their part to forge agreement on "a truly comprehensive package, not a temporary Band-Aid."

"I have said I'll negotiate without preconditions and I will," he said. "And I've seen the firestorm about revenues being on the table. Well, I've done my part and now it's their turn."

NATIONAL NEWS

POLL: BUSH APPROVAL 'MELTING'

President Bush's job-approval rating is slipping -- with only 50% giving him the thumbs up, a USA TODAY poll shows.

Bush gets high marks from half the 813 adults polled, down from his January approval rating of 64% -- the highest of his Presidency....

This time, Bush rates high on foreign policy, suffers at home.

Key findings:

* Deficit. 20% approve of Bush's work on the budget, down from 24% in January. But 23% give him an "F" -- double January's number.

* S&Ls. 19% support his actions on the crisis; 40% don't.

* Drug war. 36% approve his efforts, down from 55%.

* Education. 29% approve of his programs to improve it, down from 34% in January.

Republican pollster Doug Bailey thinks pocketbook issues are hurting Bush.... Democratic pollster Alan Secrest says Bush is suffering from the perception he's not a leader. The poll finds 64% think he's reacting to events; 31% say he's taken charge.

GOP, STUNG BY NEIL BUSH CHARGES,
POINTS FINGERS AT DEMOCRATIC SONS

Democrats are outraged with what they see as a Republican attempt to shift the focus from Neil Bush's thrift troubles by pointing fingers at the sons of three prominent Democrats.

The three are the sons of Sen. Bentsen, Gov. Cuomo and former DNC Chairman Robert Strauss. The accusations are coming from Ed Rollins, deputy chairman of the NRCC.

In at least two of the three cases, Rollins is off the mark in implying that the three men were involved in savings and loan failures, involved Democrats said.

"I think they are desperate," said Lloyd Bentsen III, a Houston venture capitalist....

The charges "are not based on any sort of reasoning or reality," countered Howard Schloss, spokesman for the DNCC. "They're trying every avenue they can, including the sons of Democrats, to point the attention away from Neil Bush. It won't work." ...

Gary Koops, a spokesman for Rollins, said he did not imply any wrongdoing on the part of the Democrats' sons. Rollins, he said, sought to point out that the three have had dealings with thrifts and that they should be examined.

"What he's saying," Koops said, "is if the Democrats...are going to scrutinize Neil Bush because of his father, if you're going to talk about the rich and famous, then there should be scrutiny of Democrats' kids who were involved in S&Ls. No one is saying they did anything wrong."

(Susan Feeney, DALLAS MORNING NEWS)

S&L CLEANUP FUND NEARLY OUT OF CASH
Without Infusion, RTC Going Broke

The government program to clean up the hundreds of failed thrift institutions around the country will run out of money sometime in the fall unless Congress acts to provide more funds, officials said Thursday.

Although the ultimate dimensions of the cleanup are not yet clear, the announcement makes plain that the cash on hand will be exhausted before the government is able to "resolve," or dispose of, only about one-third of the dead or dying institutions.

The RTC announced Thursday that it will dispose of 77 more failed thrifts that had invested in the high-risk, high-yielding securities....

The announcements came as the Treasury Department reported that it has doubled its borrowing estimates for the current quarter, in part to provide funds for the S&L cleanup.

WASTE SITES BOOST S&L CLEANUP COST
Problems Surfacing In U.S. Portfolio May Up Price By Millions

Environmental problems buried in the books of ailing savings and loan institutions could add billions of dollars to the price tag of the thrift cleanup, regulators and environmental lawyers say.

...At a hearing of the Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs Thursday, a federal bank regulator differed with a federal environmental regulator about proposed legislation that would limit the EPA's ability to sue lending institutions to recover the cost of toxic cleanups. Their divergent views prompted the measure's sponsor, Sen. Garn, to say: "There's got to be some sanity out there."

He said EPA should ask Congress for more money if it is needed for toxic waste sites, but it should not "exacerbate" the S&L crisis by going after money from insolvent thrifts. Garn scolded James Strock, EPA's assistant administrator for enforcement: EPA and thrift regulators are "officials appointed by the same President, so get together." CBO CHIEF OPTIMISTIC ON COST OF S&L RESCUE

Despite hand-wringing and recriminations on Capitol Hill over the savings and loan crisis, the bailout's longterm impact on the budget may not be as bad as advertised, Robert Reischauer, director of the Congressional Budget Office, said Thursday.

"While the savings and loan bailout is going to add $70 to $80 billion to our deficit next year and the year after, by 1995 (it) will be actually reducing our deficit slightly," Reischauer said at THE WASHINGTON TIMES Forum on the bipartisan budget talks.

Reischauer said the bailout will create gigantic costs in the short term but will begin generating surplus revenue from 1993 to 1995. He said that by 1995 a rough equilibrium will have been achieved between bailout costs and receipts from the sale of thrift assets, excluding interest costs.

ONE OF THE 'KEATING FIVE' SAYS
HE'LL GIVE DONATIONS FROM S&LS TO TREASURY

Senate Banking Committee Chairman Riegle, whose campaign receipts from the S&L industry plunged him into the widening scandal, said Thursday that he will donate the money to the U.S. Treasury and will refuse such contributions in the future.

Riegle denied any improprieties....

Riegle also vowed not to take campaign contributions from any businesses under the jurisdiction of Senate panels he chairs....

"I detest the system," he said. "It has to be changed and I'm going to change it even if I'm only able to change it in terms of what approach I use."

REP. GINGRICH 'PREPARED' TO BACK INCREASE IN TAXES

House Republican Whip Rep. Gingrich told Democratic budget negotiators Thursday that he was "prepared to sponsor and support" legislation to raise taxes to reduce the federal budget deficit.

Gingrich...said he expected that he would have to ask House Republicans to support a deficit-reduction package that would seek to raise fiscal 1991 tax revenues by about $25 billion and that he expected to be able to deliver the votes, participants at the budget negotiations said.

"It has always been my position that if we get an acceptable summit resolution, I would, of course, be an original cosponsor of that resolution," Gingrich said later. "If you're not willing to sponsor an agreement you think is good, you shouldn't be in the room." ...

Participants described Thursday's session of the budget talks as something of a group therapy session, with bargainers freely discussing the political problems facing them in trying to achieve an agreement.... Rep. Panetta said the result was "a cease-fire, and hopefully it will last until we get an agreement."

(John Yang, WASHINGTON POST, A6)

Budget Negotiators Vent Frustrations

Budget negotiators met Thursday to "vent our frustration" after a round of partisan bickering over taxes, and they declared a cease-fire in hopes of making progress on a deficit reduction plan next week.

The session was the first meeting of all the negotiators in more than a week, and several participants in the more than two hours of talks said it was mainly devoted to clearing the air....

"We had to vent our frustration mutually," said Sen. Packwood. "We simply had to kind of yammer at each other."

"It's a cease-fire and hopefully it will last until we get an agreement," said Rep. Panetta. "We needed to clear the air.... You can't work very difficult issues and have grenades thrown."

Sen. Domenici said next week "we're going to talk about specific areas."

House Republican Anti-Tax Resolution Slows Budget Talks

Budget talks between congressional leaders and White House officials turned into a heated argument Thursday, with Democrats charging House Republicans with drawing "political weapons" against them.... "It's impossible to arrive at an agreement while political weapons are being used every day," Rep. Panetta said after the meeting.

Democrats aired their complaints about the anti-tax resolution released by the House GOP Wednesday during a meeting that included Secretary Brady and OMB Director Darman.

Sen. Gramm said after the meeting that, for those who want to, "it's easy to get your feelings hurt."

But Gramm...was far more critical of House Republicans. "It's easy to pass a resolution when you don't have to govern," he said. "It's harder to reach a bipartisan solution to the deficit. We've got a job to do." Sen. Dole called the House Republican resolution "irrelevant." ...

In the meantime, House Republicans renewed their political attacks on the Democrats over taxes.

"There is a prospect of new and higher taxes on the American people not because that's what the President wants, but because (of) the Democrats," Rep. Edwards said in a written statement....

President Bush sought to place the burden for reaching a budget agreement on the Democrats, saying he had done his part politically by giving up his campaign pledge of no new taxes. "You've seen the firestorm about revenues on the table. Well, I've done my part -- now it's their turn," he said at a fundraising dinner for Rep. Larry Craig. (David Lawsky, Reuter)

Political Truce Called To Revive Deficit Talks

Democrats and Republicans traded barbs over the budget deficit Thursday, but then declared a political cease-fire in hopes of reviving bogged-down negotiations....

Democrats, angered by a House Republican conference vote Wednesday against all new taxes, said they had sought and received assurances from GOP leaders that this stand would not be an insurmountable obstacle to inclusion of higher taxes in any final agreement.

Republicans...received a renewed promise that Democrats would bargain in good faith....

"We had to clear the air and that's what we did," said Rep. Gray. "We've had a setback this week and hopefully now we're back on track." (William Eaton, LOS ANGELES TIMES, A20)

ECONOMIC ADVISER DISPUTES 'PROPHETS OF DECLINE'

President Bush's chief economic adviser is taking out after "prophets of decline-ism" who are forecasting America is fast becoming a second-rate economic power.

Michael Boskin, chairman of the President's CEA, says he is tired of hearing America is losing its competitive edge to countries such as Japan or that the country is losing control of its economic destiny to foreign investors who are buying up America. "The United States has not lost and is not losing its position as the world's leading economic power," Boskin said Thursday in a speech to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce....

Boskin conceded that the country does face problems..., but he said the U.S. can muster the political will to correct its own problems. (Martin Crutsinger, AP)

CIVIL RIGHTS BILL'S SENATE BACKERS OPTIMISTIC ON COMPROMISE

Proponents of civil rights legislation that the Senate passed Wednesday said Thursday they were optimistic a compromise could be worked out with the House to save it from a Presidential veto.

Rep. Brooks said Thursday he expects his panel to approve the Civil Rights Act without deleting quota hiring language objectionable to President Bush.

Administration officials "haven't worked out any compromise with me or with Mr. Edwards," said Brooks, referring to Rep. Edwards. The committee vote could be taken as early as Tuesday.

Brooks said he believes there are enough votes on the House floor to pass the bill without changes, even if the Administration is "still screaming about quotas."

But he did not rule out negotiations. "I want to take another look at their suggestions," he said....

An Administration official said the White House hopes to gain advantage in the House, where the GOP is "better organized" and "more conservative" than in the Senate and where there are "fewer lawyers" likely to press for language that would result in more job-discrimination cases to line lawyers' pockets.

Vice President Quayle emphasized the resolve to fight quota language Thursday, saying: "The Administration is not going to have a quota bill crammed down its throat disguised as a civil rights bill."

But a pro-bill lobbyist familiar with the negotiations said Democrats hope the White House will be more likely to back down from its so-far intractable position on quotas, now that it has seen the depth of Senate support for the bill.

House Democrats Pushing Civil Rights Bill

House Democrats plan quick committee approval of a major civil rights bill for workers while remaining open to a compromise aimed at heading off a Presidential veto over hiring quotas.

"We will listen respectfully" to any Administration proposals, Rep. Don Edwards said Thursday.... He suggested, though, that changes designed to ease Administration concerns could be fairly modest. "We're going to be discussing one or two items that could make them feel a little better," he said. (Mike Robinson, AP)

UNDER ATTACK, HOUSE RESTORES ANTI-DRUG FUNDS

The House, responding to a barrage of criticism from national drug policy director Bennett, Thursday voted to restore $231 million in anti-drug treatment and prevention funds eliminated last week by the Appropriations Committee.

But the amendment to restore the money, ordered by the Democratic leadership, was adopted only after several House members took the floor to attack Bennett for what on called his "reckless" remarks. Instead of quietly contacting members to voice his objections, they charged, the drug policy director had called up the news media and made insulting comments.

"Bill Bennett has lost his effectiveness on the Hill," said Rep. Rangel. "He feels far more comfortable talking to reporters than trying to work out differences with the Congress.... What right does Bill Bennett have to bring partisanship to such a sensitive national security issue as this?"

Bennett was traveling in Montana and Colorado Thursday. In a statement released by his office, he said he regretted the "rancor this has caused" but contended that his blunt tactics had succeeded in preventing up to 100,000 drug abusers from losing access to treatment programs. "I know Democrats are upset. I know some Republicans are upset," Bennett said. "But we needed this money. We were taken completely by surprise on these cuts and raising a ruckus seemed the only way to get the money back."

(Michael Isikoff, WASHINGTON POST, A4)

Bennett Gets Slap And Bucks

Congress took Drug Czar Bennett to the woodshed Thursday, scolding him for calling its members "clowns," but then softened the blow by restoring money for his drug programs.

"I think Bill Bennett has lost his effectiveness with the Congress," said Rep. Range;. "The fact that he has now seen fit to insult the Congress rather than consult the Congress is unfortunate." But Rangel, in an unusual move, took Bennett's side to call on the House to restore $231 million for drug education and treatment....

"Instead of calling us a bunch of clowns, that's pretty rough, pick up the phone. Why didn't he call me?" Rep. Conte said....

Rep. Obey took the floor to criticize Bennett, saying, "If he's going to wind up hyperventilating in public every time he doesn't get a dollar that he wants, I'd recommend he go back to chain-smoking so he can calm down."

Bennett said he was "very pleased" the money was restored and he sort of apologized. (Bryna Brennan, NEW YORK DAILY NEWS, 20)

The Senate Thursday, [by 66 to 30], defeated an amendment to the 1990 farm bill that would have excluded rich farmers from receiving agricultural subsidies....

REPORT SEES 15,000 NEW JOBS FROM LOG EXPORT BAN

The Pacific Northwest, facing severe logging curbs to save the spotted owl, would gain 15,000 new jobs if President Bush exercised his authority to ban the export of all raw timber from the region, according to an Administration report disclosed Thursday.

Halting overseas sales of logs harvested from public and private lands in the West was one of two dozen options the study presented for offsetting job losses associated with protection of the northern spotted owl. The 52-page report, dated May 1, was prepared by the U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management.

Rep. DeFazio, who said he obtained the report from "someone, somewhere in the Administration," told reporters the number of new jobs the study projects from all the alternatives comes to 21,000....

The newly disclosed report was supposed to have accompanied the economic analysis, but apparently was "suppressed" by the OMB and "free-trade ideologues" in the Administration, DeFazio said. DeFazio said he was outraged that the Administration issued its gloomy economic forecast and "at the same time, in their left hand, they had a report that said how they could mitigate that job impact, and they put that report behind their backs."

INTERIOR JOINS FIGHT FOR BATTLEFIELDS

Secretary Lujan this weekend will announce a plan to block commercial development on key Civil War battlefield sites, according to Interior Department sources.

Under what Lujan has labeled the "American Battlefield Protection Plan," a partnership of federal and private interests, including corporations and foundations, will acquire the sites of some of the nation's bloodiest military moments -- and thorniest development controversies.

Preservationists...applauded the proposal....

"We've been like the first Minutemen out there fighting, and now we feel that reinforcements are on the way," said Brian Pohanka, a preservation advocate.

CONCESSION POLICY FOR PARKS REVISED
Lujan Seeks To End Firms' Monopolies

In an effort to end the virtual monopolies that restaurant and hotel operators enjoy in national parks, Secretary Lujan announced Thursday a revamped contracting policy designed to make services more competitive and substantially raise franchise fees for businesses that earn "excessive profits."

"We're not looking top break anyone or be unreasonable," Lujan said, adding that he expected no price increases for park visitors. "I am very happy with the system; I just want a greater return."

Department officials said they were optimistic that Lujan's proposals will be well received next week before the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee's public lands, national parks and forests subcommittee. The fee changes, however, do not require legislation.

POLLUTION DISPUTE TRIGGERS OIL FLOW DISRUPTION

ANCHORAGE -- A shutdown of the 800-mile-long trans-Alaska oil pipeline Friday was averted but only after pipeline operators reduced oil flow by 25 percent and threatened to stop pumping crude through the oil artery because of government demands that the company comply with pollution laws.

A federal judge late Thursday gave the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. a one-week reprieve from EPA enforcement action while the company worked out an accord with state and federal regulators to comply with pollution laws and thus stave off civil or criminal actions.

LAND ALLOCATION FOR HOMELESS LAGS

The government's efforts to turn over surplus land to homelessness support groups for housing has lagged significantly since the passage of the Stewart McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, with leases executed on 27 of more than 5,000 available parcels since 1987.

Representatives from the GAO, the National Law Center on Homelessness and Poverty, the National Governors' Association and several other groups involved in addressing homelessness told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee Thursday that the federal effort is greater than it has been in the past, but has fallen short of goals set by law.

It also referred materials to the Justice Department and FEC for possible investigation.

INFORMANT DIDN'T TELL ALL, JUDGE IN COCAINE CASE TOLD

A federal court judge will be asked Thursday to dissolve a plea agreement with a former Pennsylvania prosecutor who has told federal investigators about alleged cocaine use by public officials, including a longtime aide to Attorney General Thornburgh.

The former prosecutor, Richard Guida, allegedly violated terms of the agreement when he provided terms of the agreement when he provided FBI agents with what they said was incomplete information about alleged cocaine use by the officials, including Henry Barr, who worked for Thornburgh for more than 15 years until his resignation from the Justice Department in 1989.

U.S. District Judge Edwin Kosik will be told by Assistant U.S. Attorney Gordon Zubrod during a 10 a.m. hearing in Scranton, Pa., that while Guida provided crucial information about cocaine use by Barr and others, he failed to tell investigators everything he knew.

KHMER ROUGE FORCES SAID TO BE RESURGENT

U.S. intelligence reports show a pattern of military activity by Cambodia's feared Khmer Rouge guerrillas much like the moves that led them to power 15 years ago, say sources familiar with the reports.

The information, including indications of military cooperation and shared supply lines between the Khmer Rouge and the U.S.-backed non-communist rebels, was contained in briefings the CIA and Defense Intelligence Agency gave to congressional and executive branch officials, the sources said....

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said U.S. intelligence sees the events in 1974 and 1975 that led to the takeover of Cambodia by the Khmer Rouge as a virtual "model" for events occurring now. Those events include attacks on provincial capitals and other significant targets, a near-permanent presence in the northern part of the country and deeper penetration since Vietnamese occupation forces withdrew last year....

CHINA SAYS IT STILL BACKS KHMER ROUGE

BEIJING -- China, reacting to a major U.S. policy shift on Cambodia, indicated Thursday that it will continue to support and arm the Cambodian Khmer Rouge guerrillas.

Diplomats said that Chinese officials likely were caught off guard by secretary Baker's announcement Wednesday of a new U.S. policy that calls for seeking talks with Vietnam and dropping U.S. recognition of a coalition of insurgent groups that includes the Khmer Rouge.... "So long as Vietnam does not withdraw all its troops genuinely from Cambodia, China will continue to support the Cambodian people against the foreign invaders," said Chinese Foreign Ministry Jin Guihua at the ministry's weekly press briefing. VIETNAM WELCOMES U.S. TALKS ON CAMBODIA,
BUT SAYS IT WON'T INTERFERE

HANOI -- Vietnam has quickly welcomed the surprise U.S. proposal to open a dialogue on ending the bloodshed in Cambodia.

However, senior Vietnamese officials cautioned that they would not interfere in the internal affairs of their embattled neighbor, despite a critical need for improved relations with the U.S....

In a brief press statement Thursday, Foreign Minister Nruyen Co Thach said Vietnam "is ready to negotiate with the countries concerned on the Cambodian problem," and "therefore, welcomes Secretary of State Baker's statement" proposing the talks....

Nevertheless, other Vietnamese government officials warned that the Bush Administration should not expect Vietnam to dictate policy changes to the government of Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen. "The United States is still using the embargo as a card," Thach's chief aide on U.S. affairs, Assistant Foreign Minister Dang Nghiem Bai said in an interview.... PERSIAN GULF CRISIS SWELLS; IRAQI IS GIVEN NEW TITLE

CAIRO -- Iraqi President Hussein, pressing his campaign to become the preeminent leader in the Arab world, won approval Thursday for a revised constitution for life in a legislative vote later this year. The new demonstration of the Iraqi leader's unchallenged authority in Baghdad came on the heels of a series of ominous public threats by Hussein against Kuwait and other Persian Gulf states that sent the worried Kuwaitis in search of diplomatic support and drew a strong reaction from U.S. officials....

In Washington, Secretary Cheney said Thursday that the U.S. commitment to come to Kuwait's defense if it is attacked remains in force, but a former U.S. envoy in the Persian Gulf said the U.S. commitment has always been stated as protection "against the spillover from the Iran-Iraq war" and does not address aggression growing out of the current oil and territorial dispute between Baghdad and Kuwait. Asked if a general U.S. pledge to come to Kuwait's aid still applied, Cheney said: "Those commitments haven't changed." He would not speculate, however, on how the U.S. might respond if Iraq moved to seize Kuwaiti territory.

SPECULATION OF U.S. PRESSURE ON ISRAEL LIKELY AFTER AID MEETING IS POSTPONED.

The State Department Thursday abruptly postponed a scheduled meeting of the committee that coordinates the huge U.S. program of military aid to Israel. The move seemed certain to stir speculation throughout the Mideast that it was intended to put pressure on the Jewish state.

"Absolutely not," State Department spokesman Boucher said Thursday night when asked whether the U.S. was sending a new signal of impatience at the reluctance of Prime Minister Shamir's new rightist government to show flexibility in the Mideast peace process. Boucher and other officials said that Secretary Baker had ordered postponement of the annual session of the Joint Security Assistance Planning Conference here Tuesday, which had been scheduled to begin here Tuesday, because the size of America's aid commitment to Israel next year is an issue in the ongoing budget summit between the White House and Congress.

The officials said Baker had decided that the meeting of diplomats and military officers from the two countries would not be able to make any meaningful decisions now about the use of the eventual U.S. aid that will flow in the fiscal year ahead. They said Baker felt it made more sense to wait until September when the Administration expects to have a better idea of whether Israeli military aid for the 1991 fiscal year will differ substantially from this year's level of $1.8 billion.

U.S., SOVIETS COOPERATE ON FOOD AID TO ANGOLA

In a pattern of cooperation already seen in other parts of the world, the U.S. and the Soviet Union have agreed to work together in delivering food aid to Angola, U.S. and Angolan officials said Thursday.

Ambassador Manuel Pedro Pacavira, Angolan representative at the U.N., said the U.S.-Soviet operation, working with the International Red Cross and Catholic Relief Services, must move quickly. He said 1.5 million people are at risk of starvation because of a prolonged drought and the difficulties caused by 15 years of civil war.

State Department officials put the number of people facing starvation somewhat lower -- around 800,000 -- but agreed that speed is necessary. (Jim Anderson, UPI)

U.N. ENVOY PLEDGES COOPERATION ON ANGOLAN DROUGHT AID

The Angolan ambassador to the U.N. said Thursday that his government is willing to "work closely" with the State Department to bring immediate relief to drought victims in Angola, including those in rebel-held areas.

The diplomat, Manuel Pedro Pacavira, said a State Department delegation will visit Luanda this weekend to discuss supply routes and also to "see if we can find a way to normalize relations."

Pacavira, however, said in a prepared news statement that his government was still concerned about the creation of "special corridors" into parts of southern Angola controlled by Jonas Savimbi's rebel army. (George Lardner, WASHINGTON POST, A14)

BLOCH TRYING TO RESIGN FROM STATE
Spy Suspect Target Of Dismissal Move

Felix Bloch, target of a U.S. spy investigation, is trying to quit the Foreign Service but the State Department will continue its investigation in an effort to fire him on national security grounds, a spokesman said Thursday....

State Department spokesman Boucher, confirming an account in THE WASHINGTON TIMES, said Bloch submitted his resignation July 5 and withdrew a request for a hearing on the State Department's attempts to fire him.

"The department has informed Mr. Bloch that it will continue with the proceedings initiated last February to remove him from the Foreign Service for national security reasons," Boucher said. "The department will take no action on Mr. Bloch's tendered resignation pending the outcome of these proceedings."

BREEDEN URGES MODERNIZATION OF FINANCIAL SERVICES

Richard Breeden, chairman of the securities and Exchange Commission, urged a Senate panel Thursday to push for the modernization of the U.S. financial services industry as a hedge against foreign competition.

Breeden, testifying before the Senate Banking Committee, said the U.S. capital markets, led by the $3.5 trillion equity securities market, are the "storehouse of funds from which we must create tomorrow's prosperity and economic growth."

He said "modernization of the industry is an "important objective," given the increasing presence as do their U.S. counterparts.

"Where unnecessary overhead costs can be eliminated without harm to the safety or stability of the system, then we should be prepared to act," he said.

S&L

ABC'S PETER JENNINGS: The Washington bureaucrats responsible for solving the financial end of the S&L scandal have told Congress today they're about to need more money. In this taxpayers' nightmare they've almost used up all the money which Congress has allocated so far.

ABC'S STEPHEN AUG: Over the past year, the government has spent about $25 billion paying off depositors of more than 200 insolvent S&L associations and paying new owners to take them over. The government expects to spend another $13 billion by this fall, and then will have to ask Congress for more.

(PETER MONROE, RTC Oversight Board: "We have enough funds to get us through a portion, perhaps through October into November.")

Monroe says after that another 400 to 500 S&Ls would still have to be shut down. That might cost at least another $60 billion. But this does not count the interest, because most of this money has to be borrowed. And just who should pay? Members of Congress from the northeast and the midwest say the problem was lax state regulation in Texas, where so many S&Ls failed. So Texans should pay.

(REP. SNOWE, Maine: "We are paying more in our region than the state of Texas is which caused 72 percent of the problem.")

(REP. ROTH, Wisconsin: "This is like the victim having to pay the mugger for restitution.")

The coalition wants to tax those states where lax regulation led to the worst S&L problems. The money would go to the Federal Deposit Insurance fund. Ralph Nader and Rep. Kennedy want an extra tax on the wealthy to pay the cost.

(REP. KENNEDY: "The working people of America should not be made to pay for a party that they were never invited to.")

When the bailout law was passed last summer, a lot of congressmen said it would not be long before the government would be back asking for more money. So they were right. The question is, how often?

(ABC-Lead)

CIVIL RIGHTS

JENNINGS: The Bush Administration jumped all over the civil rights bill today that the Senate passed just last night, charging that it would force businesses to set quotas for minority employees. White House officials say they will work to get it changed when the House tackles another version in the next few days. (ABC-12)

CAMBODIA

JENNINGS: Prince Norodom Sihanouk criticized the U.S. today for withdrawing its recognition of the coalition which is dominated by the particularly vicious Khmer Rouge. Sihanouk said it was an act of very serious injustice.... China said today it will continue to support the Khmer Rouge. (ABC-11)

NIXON LIBRARY

JENNINGS reports that in California today Richard Nixon opened his presidential library. Four of the five living presidents were there with him in Yorba Linda, next door to Mr. Nixon's birthplace. Only Jimmy Carter, who pleaded a prior commitment, was missing.

ABC'S BRIT HUME reports:

[TV COVERAGE of presidents Reagan, Nixon, Bush and Ford standing together.]

The nation's last four Republican presidents had never been seen together before. What was most remarkable was what brought them together -- the opening of the Nixon Library, yes, but more than that, the political rehabilitation of Nixon himself. He knew it, too.

(NIXON: "I feel as good as the rest of them look.")

The $21 million privately funded Nixon Library will have a section devoted to Watergate. But most of the exhibits will deal with the other renowned episodes in his controversial career. On the platform today in the speeches of his presidential colleagues, the emphasis was on Nixon the foreign policy maker -- on the eased relationship he struck with the Soviets and the diplomatic opening he made to communist China in 1972. President Bush was especially strong in his praise.

(PRESIDENT BUSH: "Today as the movement toward democracy sweeps our globe, you can take great personal pride that history will say of you, here was a true architect of peace.")

At the end, a spectacular balloon display worthy of a presidential campaign. Could it be? No. Nixon's 77 after all, and there are limits to political rehabilitation, even in America. (ABC-2)

CBS'S LESLEY STAHL reports that the opening of the Richard Nixon Library in Orange County 16 years after he was forced to leave office drew four presidents. Someone called it a political redemption. As President Bush got up to speak he was heckled, as several people here protested the event.

(WOMAN: "This kind of circus that's just glorifying a man who had to resign in shame, the only president who had to resign in shame in this country, is absolutely ridiculous.")

But President Bush paid Nixon a ringing tribute, calling him a true architect of peace. In the library he said people will learn about his six crises.

(PRESIDENT BUSH: "And the seventh crisis, Watergate. And yes, Mr. President, they will hear again your answer to my vision thing: 'Let me make this perfectly clear.'")

Nixon urged people to visit his library and revue his legacy.

(CBS-2)

NBC'S TOM BROKAW reports that for Richard Nixon today was a colorful celebration of his carefully orchestrated comeback. For the small print of history, this was the first time ever four presidents and their wives shared a common platform.

(GERALD FORD, opening his remarks: "Mr. President, Mr. President, Mr. President. [laughter] If I overlooked a president, will you please stand up.")

BROKAW continues: The only mention of Watergate was fleeting.
(PRESIDENT BUSH: "Of the book 'Six Crises,' and the seventh crisis Watergate --")

For most of his remarks, President Bush stuck to a common theme.
(PRESIDENT BUSH: "You can take great personal pride that history will say of you, here was a true architect of peace.") (NBC-Lead)

BROKAW talks with NIXON:

BROKAW: ...The world has changed enormously in the last year and a half. The Germans are now striking deals with the Soviet Union. The Japanese are about to provide massive aid to the Chinese. Is there a danger that the U.S. is being dealt out of the first great deals of the post Cold War era?

NIXON: Neither Germany nor Japan is a superpower in the total sense. Neither has nuclear weapons, neither will ever acquire them or be allowed to acquire them. The United States is the only true superpower, and the United States is needed in Asia and in Europe at this time.

BROKAW: Do you think that Gorbachev's going to make it?

NIXON: I'm in a minority on that. I think Gorbachev will stay in power, but he is going to have to change to do it. For Gorbachev to retain power indefinitely in the future, he's going to have to go much further in his reform. What he has to do is to move toward Yeltsin and the others who say we're going to move away from doctrinaire Marxism-Leninism.

BROKAW: This administration is now about to strike a deal with Vietnam in an effort to hold off the Khmer Rouge in Cambodia.

NIXON: It's a Hobson's choice. I'm glad -- I had some hard decisions to make, but I'm glad I didn't have to make this one. The Khmer Rouge, of course, cannot be allowed to return after what they did, and they have not changed. But we have to recognize that as far as Vietnam is concerned the leader of Vietnam is a former Khmer Rouger. And it's certainly not in our interest to have that kind of domination of Cambodia. The people of Cambodia should determine its future.... (NBC-8)

FELIX BLOCH

JENNINGS reports that it was revealed today that just as he was about to face a hearing that might have gone against him, Mr. Bloch blinked.

ABC'S DAVID ENSOR reports that U.S. officials say they believe Bloch withdrew his appeal of allegations against him because he didn't like the list of witnesses and evidence that the government planned to produce against him, including extensive wire taps of his telephone calls. At the State Department a spokesman said Bloch's resignation will not be accepted. The Department wants to fire him instead.

(STATE DEPT. SPOKESMAN RICHARD BOUCHER: "The department has informed Mr. Bloch that it will continue with the proceedings initiated last February to remove him from the foreign service for national security reasons.") -more-

ENSOR continues: At this point, Secretary Baker has a choice -- fire Bloch now or keep him on suspension without pay until the Justice Department completes its criminal investigation. That investigation has dragged on for over a year with no indictment. FBI sources insisted again today they still expect to arrest Felix Bloch, but they won't say when. (ABC-5)

EAST GERMANY/TERRORISTS

CBS'S DAN RATHER reports that CBS News has confirmed that while communist East Germany echoed the Soviet line in denouncing international terrorism, it was in fact a training ground and a base of operations for the world's most ruthless terrorists. (CBS-6)

CHEMICAL PLANT EXPLOSION

JENNINGS: At least one person has died and more than 40 others were hurt during an explosion and fire in Cincinnati. The explosion at the BASF chemical plant could be felt more than a mile away and shattered windows in nearby homes and businesses. It is not clear yet what caused it. (ABC-7, NBC-3, CBS-10)

BRITISH BUS CRASH

RATHER reports that two American high school students were killed and 56 other people injured when a double-decker bus overturned on a highway in England today. The bus was carrying gifted teenage students from the U.S. enrolled in a summer program at Oxford University. (CBS-7)

NAACP/HELMS

RATHER: The head of the NAACP called on Sen. Helms today to discipline a top aide for controversial remarks he made about delegates to the NAACP convention and about black politicians. The Helms aide is himself black and a veteran of the civil rights movement.

CBS'S BRUCE HALL reports that civil rights pioneer James Meredith started a political firestorm of controversy by saying that all prominent black government officials are puppets of an elite group of powerful liberal whites. Meredith is also quoted as saying the liberal white elite wants to keep blacks in a second-class position under the pretext of helping them. In one of the ironies of this campaign, Senate candidate Harvey Gantt and Meredith both gained fame by being the first black students at major universities. In the release, printed on Sen. Helms' stationery, Meredith also attacked the NAACP, saying that at its convention last week in Los Angeles 60 percent of the delegates were drug users; 80 percent were involved in immoral or criminal activities. Helms said he generally agreed with Meredith's statement and his aide is free to express any of his own opinions. Here in North Carolina this is seen as a means of injecting race into the bitter political campaign, pushing other issues to the background. (CBS-3)

CAMPAIGN FINANCING

RATHER: The consumer lobby group Public Citizen charged today that House Democratic leaders are blocking campaign finance reform partly because, it is said, they depend heavily on contributions from PACs. According to Public Citizen, the Democratic leaders from the speaker down to subcommittee chairmen received more than half of their 1988 campaign warchests from so-called PACs. Their Republican challengers got only 11 percent of their campaign funds from PACs. (CBS-4)

REP. FRANK

NBC'S DEBORAH NORVILLE: After months of investigating Rep. Frank, sources tell NBC News that the House Ethics Committee tomorrow will recommend unanimously that Frank be reprimanded by the full House for his relationship with a male prostitute. (NBC-6, CBS-5)

NATIONAL PARK CONCESSIONS

RATHER: The federal government is looking for a bigger cut of the action from businesses that operate in our national parks. The secretary of the Interior said today some park concessions are making what he called "excessive profits" and he wants to boost their franchise fees.

CBS'S JERRY BOWEN reports:

(SECRETARY LUJAN: "The fees have been too low. And who was losing out? It was the investment back into the parks.")
The 561 concessionaires doing business in the national parks took in more than $500 million in 1988. But the government earned just $15 million. The Interior Department plan calls for not only increasing those fees but returning the money to the park system. The proposed overhaul is prompted in part by disclosures that the Yosemite Park and Curry Company, a division of entertainment giant MCA, paid just $635,000 last year on sales of $85 million. Interior would raise that fee and have Congress change the law that has always given the concessionaires an automatic contract renewal, opening the door to competition. Increasing the fees could bring an additional $50 million to an already cash-starved park system. In these tight budget times, that may be the only way the parks see more money. (CBS-9)

HOME PRE-/POST-NATAL CARE

ABC'S CAROLE SIMPSON reports that if the government were to pay for registered nurse home visits for young pregnant women and those with babies all over the country, studies show it would be well worth the price. The result, better mothers and healthier babies. (ABC-13)

ROSE

JENNINGS: In Cincinnati today, the bad news for Pete Rose: He will go to jail for cheating on his income tax. The good news is he could have been put away for much longer. Five months in prison, 1,000 hours of community service, a $50,000 fine, and still a shot at the Hall of Fame. It could have been a lot worse.

GORBACHEV'S MOM

NORVILLE: Mikhail Gorbachev has another problem. A Soviet newspaper reports that the Soviet president isn't a very attentive son. The paper says that 79-year-old Maria Gorbachev complains that her son never visits. Apparently it's been 3 1/2 years since Mikhail came home, and then for only 40 minutes. (NBC-10)

PRESIDENTS AND THE PRESS

NBC'S ANDREA MITCHELL says that George Bush has tried to restore decorum, along with accessibility.

(PRESIDENT BUSH at a news conference: "One, two, three, four, and then I'm out.")

But no matter how kind and gentle toward the press, no president can expect the lack of scrutiny that preceded Vietnam and Watergate.

(PRESIDENT BUSH: "Get out of here.")

Get out of here? If a real crisis hits, he may actually mean it. (NBC-12)

EDITORIALS

S&L WATCH: TOURIST ATTRACTION -- "While he's in Orange County for the Nixon library opening, President Bush should look at a tourist attraction of the future. It's the $1.9-million gated estate in Newport Beach, with two Mercedes out front, where an S&L figure who claimed he was broke now lives. Denver developer Bill Walters had been a business partner of the President's son, Neil, before defaulting on a $96-million real estate loan made by the failed Silverado Banking, Savings & Loan Assn.... With reasonable cause and due process, the government could initiate attachment proceedings on suspect properties. If an S&L kingpin's wife proved independently wealthy, fine -- one less case to resolve. But lost time affords the real crooks more opportunities to hide assets. Presidents know all about symbols. This estate powerfully suggests the public's exasperation. Bush should see where a penniless man lives. It costs $800 to cut the lawn." (Los Angeles Times, 7/19)

THE $150 BILLION QUESTION -- "For their money -- something upwards of $150 billion of it -- taxpayers are entitled to a better explanation of the S&L disaster than they are now getting.... One possibility is a presidential commission, appointed equally by the president and the speaker of the House. Alternatively, Congress might find one person with sufficient reputation for impartiality to accomplish the job.... A full and reliable account would serve two highly valuable purposes. It would tell voters what happened to the public trust and allow them to fix blame on the basis of good information rather than on rumors and accusations. It would also help the government itself to avoid similar mistakes in the future. The entire banking system is now under great strain, and there may be serious trouble ahead. A short historical inquiry into the causes of the S&L collapses would be insurance against more expensive errors in the 1990s." (Washington Post, 7/18)

NEIL BUSH MEETS THE SYSTEM -- "...Some congressional Democrats, smelling blood, have called for the appointment of a special prosecutor to investigate Neil Bush. This looks like political grandstanding in the face of obvious investigatory diligence by the duly appointed authorities. Though his off-the-cuff exoneration of the younger Bush from criminal wrongdoing was gratuitous and possibly prejudicial, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh was right to turn thumbs down on a prosecutor.... No question, the American people are mad as hell about the S&L mess. But they're not about to finger only one party for the blame."

(Atlanta Constitution, 7/18)

HERE'S TO POLITICIZING THE S&LS -- "...Politicizing the issue is the best thing that's happened to taxpayers since the dimension of the enormous banking scandal became better known...[and] it's about time. Americans couldn't stand much more of the bipartisan harmony that allowed the scandal to fester over the past decade.... Now that the public understands that it may have to pay as much as half a trillion dollars to clean up the mess, and is angry about it, Republicans and Democrats are pointing the finger of blame at each other. That's fine, because it has resulted in action.... If this is an indication of what partisan politics does, let's have more of it."

(Hartford Courant, 7/18)

PARTISAN PANIC, FUTILE FUROR -- "...Last week some Democratic grandstanders -- goaded by a petulant partisan, Rep. Schroeder -- tried to force the Justice Department to appoint a special prosecutor in the Silverado case. Such an extraordinary step may become necessary if criminal charges are lodged against Neil Bush. But an independent counsel is usually reserved for executive-branch officials who face criminal indictments -- and, clearly, neither standard applies.... A special prosecutor would be premature at this stage of the Silverado case.... Scoring partisan points is less important, in the long run, than getting to the bottom of the S&L debacle -- and crafting safeguards that protect taxpayers from any such fiascos in the future."

(Cleveland Plain Dealer, 7/18)

BUSH BASHING -- NEIL BUSH'S ROLE IN THE GROWING S&L SCANDAL DESERVES TO BE SCRUTINIZED -- "...If Neil Bush's conduct merits criticism, his father's does not. The President says that he has every confidence both in his son's integrity and that government investigations will be handled fairly. That's the right note to hit. But we wish we were as certain. Would any agency of the federal government really have the guts to throw the book at the son of the president of the United States? We'd feel more comfortable if Bush came right out and publicly instructed the regulators to give his son no special treatment. It's too soon to make judgments, though; maybe Neil Bush's actions weren't colored by his own business dealings. It may be hard to assess Bush's conflict of interest even with all the facts -- just as it's hard to know how much members of Congress were influenced by big campaign contributions from the S&L industry when they made banking policy."

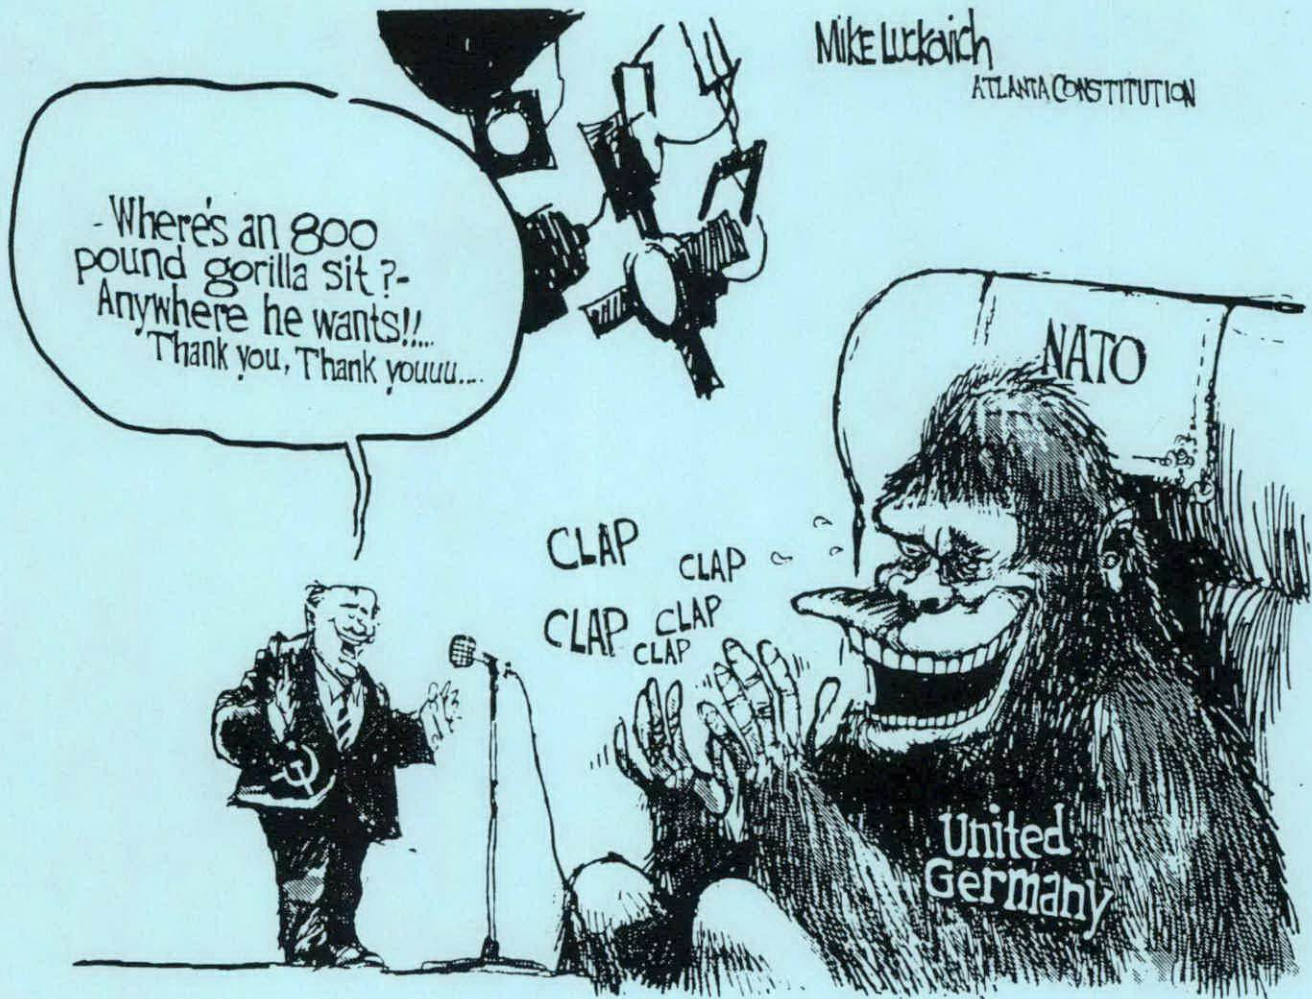

(Newsday, 7/15)

CONGRESS AND THE S&LS -- "...For federal lawmakers to look for scapegoats only in private enterprise, and not on Capitol Hill, is downright dishonest.... The package of S&L penalties that the U.S. Senate adopted last week...is fundamentally sound. If passed into law, the proposals...would triple the amount spent on investigating bank and S&L fraud to $162.5 million this year, and set up a special Justice Department unit to handle these cases. The package also calls for much stiffer prison terms and fines for people convicted of bank or thrift fraud. The progress of this measure is one sign that Uncle Sam finally is getting off his duff and onto the S&L mess."

Volume 26, Number 115

Today in Congress

Floor Action: The Senate will continue debate on a $54 billion farm bill (S 2830), which will set agriculture policy for the next five years.

The House will resume debate on a major education initiative (HR 5115) that aims to increase the high school graduation rate to at least 90 percent, promote math and science education, combat adult illiteracy and boost the recruitment of quality teachers.

Legal Services: The House Judiciary Subcommittee on Administrative Law is expected to approve draft legislation to reauthorize the Legal Services Corporation (LSC), which funds and sets guidelines for state and local programs providing legal aid to the poor.

The proposal does not include a dollar figure, a detail that will be left to the Appropriations Committee. The LSC is requesting $343 million, up from the $321 million appropriated last year.

The bill also lacks specifics on what activities legal aid lawyers can undertake — a key issue in past reauthorizations. Aides expect panel Chairman Barney Frank, D-Mass., to fill in some of the blanks at today's session.

The LSC has drawn fire from conservatives who charge that the agency has launched class-action suits to advance liberal causes, instead of providing basic legal advice to the poor. To head off Republican efforts to rein in poverty lawyers, Frank is trying to craft a compromise bill that would set some limits on legal aid activities.

Today's markup should go smoothly, aides say, because Republicans will probably save their amendments for the full committee session.

Uranium Enrichment: The House Science Subcommittee on Energy Research and Development will mark up a bill (HR 2480) that would restructure the U.S. uranium enrichment enterprise.

The domestic uranium enrichment program, which is run by the Energy Department, has been criticized as being inefficient. The U.S. effort, which once nearly monopolized the non-communist market for enriched uranium, now supplies about 45 percent of the market.

The bill would create a government-owned corporation to take over the Energy Department facilities and run them as a profit-making business. Members will take up a substitute amendment that provides more specific instructions to the corporation for the study of decontamination and decommissioning of nuclear facilities and would require the corporation to spend more of its revenues on waste cleanup.

And the substitute would designate Oak Ridge nuclear power plant, located in the district of subcommittee Chairwoman Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn., as the first of the federal uranium-enriching plants to be cleaned up and equipped with the latest technology.

Asbestos Removal: The Transportation and Hazardous Materials Subcommittee of House Energy and Commerce is slated to mark up legislation (HR 3677) to double aid to schools to remove hazardous asbestos.

Members and staff were still trying to craft a compromise yesterday, and it remained possible that the markup would be postponed for a fourth time.

Republicans, along with real estate interests, have objected to proposed language that they say could be read to require asbestos inspections in other public and commercial buildings.

The bill would raise the annual authorization for asbestos cleanup from $125 million to $250 million and extend funding through fiscal 1995. More schools are expected to need federal funds because of a 1986 law that requires all school districts to inspect their schools for asbestos and to implement removal plans.

Hill News

SENATE FLOOR: Consideration of 1990 farm bill begins.

The Senate yesterday began consideration of the 1990 farm bill (S 2830), a five-year reauthorization of farm programs that would cost $54 billion.

The legislation would reauthorize a wide range of agriculture and nutrition programs and make changes in the crop subsidy programs.

Subsidies would be frozen at 1990 levels for wheat, cotton and other crops. The legislation also would keep dairy price supports at the current $10 per hundredweight level.

Senators approved an amendment by Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the Agriculture Committee, to reduce commodity subsidies by about $1 billion, but the bill still costs about $3 billion more than what President Bush has requested.

An amendment by Harry Reid, D-Nev., that would end subsidies for farmers who have averaged gross sales of more than $500,000 during the past five crop years was defeated, 66-30. Reid had argued that the government pays large farmers $1.2 billion a year in subsidies.

Consideration of S 2830 is expected to continue today and next week.

• The Senate late Wednesday approved, 65-34, legislation (S 2104) that would make it easier for workers to sue for job discrimination.

Final passage came after key senators and White House representatives failed to reach a compromise that would convince the president not to veto the bill.

Many Republicans and the White House particularly disliked a key provision that they claimed would result in hiring quotas for minorities in order for employers to avoid civil rights litigation.

Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., inserted an amendment stipulating that no provision in the bill could be construed as HOUSE FLOOR: Labor-HHS spending bill easily passes.

The House yesterday passed a $170 billion fiscal 1991 appropriations bill (HR 5257) for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services (HHS) and Education. The measure, approved 359-58, includes provisions to prohibit federal Medicaid financing of abortions except when the life of the woman is in danger.

The annual fight over whether to expand federal abortion funding is expected to erupt later this year when conferees meet to reconcile House and Senate versions of the measure.

William H. Natcher, D-Ky., chairman of the House Appropriations Labor Subcommittee, agreed yesterday to restore to the bill $231 million in drug abuse education and treatment money sought by the administration, one day after National Drug Policy Director William J. Bennett attacked the panel for trimming the request. Members adopted the restoring amendment by voice vote.

Members defeated two amendments calling for across-the-board cuts in discretionary funds contained in the bill and three other amendments to cut small amounts from specific portions of the bill. The bill would provide about $136 billion for HHS, $26 billion for Education, more than $7 billion for Labor and $1 billion for related agencies.

It would raise total spending for the departments by $17.3 billion from fiscal 1990, more than $4.2 billion beyond that requested by President Bush.

Also yesterday, members began work on a bill (HR 5170) to authorize funding for projects to improve airport and airway capacity and safety.

D.C. SPENDING bill for 1991 approved by House Appropriations.

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday approved by voice vote a fiscal 1991 spending bill of $4.3 billion for the District of Columbia that contains abortion language that should be heavily debated on the floor.

The draft legislation (HR 5313) would allow the District government to use its funds — whether derived from federal or local sources — to pay for some abortions for poor women.

Under this year's spending bill, the District could use locally raised funds as it saw fit and could use federal funds to pay for abortions in cases of rape, incest or when the woman's life is in danger.

The same language was approved by the House last year, but President Bush vetoed the D.C. spending bill twice because of the abortion language. The House eventually had to restrict the use of District government funds only for abortions to save the woman's life.

The spending bill includes $519.3 million in federal funds to the District, the same as requested by the president. The District also has committee approval to spend an additional $3.8 billion raised through local taxes and other means.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION spending reduced by House panel.

The House Appropriations Committee yesterday approved by voice vote an $8.3 billion fiscal 1991 spending bill (HR 5311) for military construction that reflects reductions in the overall defense budget and uncertainties about the future role of the U.S. military overseas.

The measure would appropriate $450 million for construction at overseas military installations, a 60 percent reduction from 1990. Subcommittee Chairman W.G. "Bill" Hefner, D-N.C., said $300 million allocated for 1990 would be rescinded under the fiscal 1991 spending bill. Those figures reflect the United States' plan to reduce troops in Europe and other foreign locations.

The bill's $8.3 billion total, for new military facilities and military family housing, is $700 million below last year's appropriation. The total is $850 million less than what President Bush had requested and $220 million less than the amount allocated to the subcommittee by the full Appropriations Committee.

Other highlights of the bill include:

- $988 million to be appropriated for environmental cleanup at military bases ordered closed. The amount is $82 million above what the president requested.

- A provision, sought by Jerry Lewis, R-Calif., that would stop an Air Force plan to relocate the Ballistic Missile Organization (BMO) at Norton Air Force Base in California. Norton is scheduled to be closed, but the BMO, which is run independently from the rest of the facility and employs 2,000 workers, was not originally included in the base closure plans.

ENERGY, WATER spending bill advances to Senate floor.

The Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday gave approval to a $20.8 billion fiscal 1991 spending bill for energy and water development (HR 5019).

The measure, which contains only about $7 million more than the House-passed version and about $580 million more than requested by the administration, is due on the Senate floor next week.

The bill is the first of 13 regular fiscal 1991 spending bills to advance to the Senate calendar.

The Appropriations Committee made only minor changes in the measure as approved by the Energy and Water Development Subcommittee on Wednesday.

About half of the money in the bill — almost $11 billion — is for atomic weapons development and production and cleanup of nuclear waste at weapons plants.

The measure also contains almost $4.4 billion for Army Corps of Engineers and Bureau of Reclamation water projects, $2.7 billion for research and development of various energy supply projects and $830 million for general science and research projects.

The measure also would fund regional power marketing administrations, the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, the Tennessee Valley Authority and the Appalachian Regional Commission.

EASTERN EUROPE aid package advances despite GOP boycott.

Overcoming a Republican boycott, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday approved a $535 million Eastern Europe aid package.

The panel's Democrats approved the measure, 10-0. All nine Republicans on the panel were absent.

The draft measure would give President Bush a long menu of ideas for advancing economic reform in the former Warsaw Pact nations, including "technical assistance" for the Soviet Union.

The bill would make assistance available to any Eastern European country that President Bush believes needs help on its road to democratic and economic reform.

The committee's senior Republican, Jesse Helms of North Carolina, complained in a letter that the measure was being rushed without time for Republicans to review it. A Helms aide said the Bush administration had an extensive list of concerns about the measure's overall cost and its specific provisions.

Pell said the measure would provide "an expanded American role in the effort to transform Eastern Europe" by helping U.S. businesses invest in the countries, and promoting trade, development and educational and cultural exchanges.

The bill contains $100 million for environmental, housing and medical assistance. It also includes $70 million for the first U.S. payment to start up the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development, an institution set up to encourage East Europe's emergence into the economic mainstream.

The committee also approved:

- S 2436, which would authorize about $443 million for the Peace Corps for fiscal 1991-92.

- A draft measure that would permanently authorize a development fund for Africa.

- A treaty (Doc. 100-20) that would require signatories to outlaw torture and to assist other signatories in prosecuting accused torturers.

VOLUNTEER SERVICE bill emphasizes student involvement.

The nation's volunteer efforts were given a boost yesterday when the House Education and Labor Committee approved, by voice vote, a measure (HR 4330) to establish school- and college-based community service programs.

HR 4330 would authorize $183 million in fiscal 1991 for grants to states to promote volunteerism by students. One provision would allow college students to have their student loans forgiven or deferred if they did community volunteer work.

The committee rejected, 13-22, an amendment by Tom Tauke, R-Iowa, that would have required states to make assurances that a volunteer for a nonprofit organization could not incur any personal financial liability for injury or damages that occur while volunteering, unless they were caused by willful or wanton misconduct.

Tauke said people were becoming reluctant to volunteer for fear of being sued.

But Pat Williams, D-Mont., objected to the amendment, arguing that it would force the bill to be referred to the Judiciary Committee where similar legislation (HR 911) has been pending for over a year.

The committee accepted an amendment by George Miller, D-Calif., stating that it was the sense of Congress that states should provide uniform standards for the donation of food by grocery chains and restaurants to food banks for the homeless to protect those donating the food from liability.

The committee also approved an amendment by Thomas C. Sawyer, D-Ohio, suggesting that states give special attention to projects that give students academic credit for volunteering.

CRIME BILL markup moves toward completion in House panel.

The House Judiciary Committee, continuing work yesterday on a major anticrime bill (HR 5269), voted to increase penalties for certain firearms violations but defeated an amendment to outlaw the manufacture and import of cheap, easily concealed handguns.

Moving toward completion of the massive bill, the panel finished all 19 original titles, including provisions to streamline the death sentence appeals process.

The committee still faces work on two new titles added yesterday — on child abuse and disability grants to families of federal law enforcement agents — and on a savings and loan fraud amendment. Members will resume work on the bill on Monday afternoon.

Over the objections of committee Chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas, members adopted, 19-15, an amendment by Dan Glickman, D-Kan., to increase from five to 10 years the mandatory prison sentence for use of a sawed-off shotgun or rifle in drug crimes. The amendment, which reflects provisions in the Senate-passed anticrime bill (S 1970), also calls for a 30-year sentence for the use of destructive devices such as bombs and grenades during drug-related offenses.

In action on other amendments, the panel:

- Rejected, 12-23, an amendment by Lawrence J. Smith, D-Fla., to outlaw the manufacture and import of cheap handguns, such as Saturday Night Specials.

- Approved, 23-13, a compromise amendment by Robert W. Kastenmeier, D-Wis., and William J. Hughes, D-N.J., to streamline habeas corpus laws involving state court capital offense trials — an attempt to clear the courts of excessive death row appeals and to assure competent, court-appointed counsel for indigent defendants.

It beat out a competing, more restrictive amendment offered by Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., that would have made death penalty appeals even more difficult to pursue.

- Defeated, 18-18, an amendment by Glickman and D. French Slaughter Jr., R-Va., to increase penalties for the distribution of illegal drugs at truck stops.

- Approved, by voice vote, a Hughes amendment to create an interagency council to study "ice," or crystalline amphetamine, an extremely dangerous, synthetic, smokable drug.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION conferees find no compromise.

Conferees on legislation (HR 7) to reauthorize vocational education programs yesterday were unable to find a compromise on how to allocate funding to states.

Both measures would authorize about $1.5 billion in fiscal 1991, an increase of $600 million, and would abolish the complicated set-asides in the programs that are aimed at guaranteeing a fixed percentage of funds for certain student populations.

The Senate version, however, would require that a majority of the funding go to secondary schools rather than postsecondary schools. It also would require states to match dollar for dollar the federal funds for state administration of the program. The House does not have the matching requirement.

The conferees ordered the staff to try to find a compromise on the issue.

The conferees also agreed to drop a House provision that would have withheld funds from institutions that denied students voluntary school prayer.

JOBS TRAINING bill is delayed by House Education, Labor panel.

The House Education and Labor Committee yesterday began work on a bill (HR 2039) that would target job training programs to the most needy. But the panel failed to reach agreement on how to award state funding for the programs.

HR 2039 would amend the incentives portion of the Jobs Training Partnership Act (JTPA). It also would authorize a JTPA funding increase of $500 million in fiscal 1991.

The committee was able to approve several minor amendments but stalled on an amendment by William D. Ford, D-Mich., that would have changed the funding formula.

Ford's amendment would base grants to states on the number of people enrolled in the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program. Currently, the grants are based on a state's unemployment rate.

The committee will continue working on the bill July 26.

DEFENSE CONVERSION and preparedness bills approved.

The House Banking Subcommittee on Economic Stabilization approved two measures yesterday to improve the military preparedness of the U.S. industrial base and to soften the economic consequences of cuts in the defense budget.

Approved by voice vote, HR 486 would reauthorize the 1950 Defense Production Act, which gives the president broad powers to ensure defense-related production in times of war and military preparedness during peacetime. Under the act, the president has the authority to ration certain strategic materials and provide loans and purchase guarantees to ensure the production of necessary products.

The measure would authorize the president to exempt from competitive bids certain goods that the administration deems should be produced by a domestic firm. Members approved an amendment offered by Norman D. Shumway, R-Calif., to include Canada within that definition of a domestic firm.

- The panel also approved a bill (HR 3999) to authorize a $200 million transitional program to assist workers displaced by the reduction in defense spending. Chairman Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, said that to help expedite passage of the measure, HR 3999 could be added to another defense bill, such as Defense Department authorization legislation.

IMMIGRATION bills sail through Judiciary subcommittee.

The three members of the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Immigration and Refugee Affairs — consisting of Chairman Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., Paul Simon, D-Ill., and Alan K. Simpson, R-Wyo. — quickly disposed of four bills yesterday, sending all of them to the full committee.

The only discussion occurred over a measure (S 1629) that would clarify that U.S. citizens and aliens can use U.S. courts to take civil action against those who have engaged in torture in other countries, if the courts of that country do not respond.

Simpson, who voted against the bill, said it involved too many legal questions and could compromise the president's foreign policy prerogative.

The House approved, 362-4, a similar bill (HR 1662) on Oct. 2, 1989.

The other measures approved included:

- S 953, to revise the grounds on which people are excluded from admission into the United States. The measure was prompted by recent examples of foreigners who have unexpectedly been denied entrance into the country because of past ties to the Communist Party. Simpson said he has been working closely with Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., to reach a compromise on the bill's language.

- S 1263, treating Hong Kong as a separate foreign state rather than a colony for purposes of applying limitations on immigration. As a colony, Hong Kong is allowed only 5,000 visas. But if designated as a separate country, its visa allocation would rise to 20,000.

- HR 639, to provide special immigrant status for aliens who have served honorably in the U.S. Armed Forces for 12 years. The House had approved the bill by voice vote Nov. 13, 1989.

CIGARETTE SAFETY compromise satisfies tobacco industry.

After reaching a compromise that satisfied the tobacco industry, the House Energy Subcommittee on Commerce, Consumer Protection and Competitiveness approved a bill (HR 293) aimed at developing a cigarette that extinguishes itself before starting a fire.

The subcommittee approved the measure by voice vote after adopting a substitute amendment offered by Rick Boucher, D-Va. The amendment dropped a provision in the original bill that would have required the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) to establish a mandatory fire safety standard for cigarettes.

Instead, the bill would direct the CPSC to supervise a study of cigarette safety, with an eye toward developing safer cigarettes that would also be acceptable to smokers. Previous studies of such cigarettes have shown that a safer cigarette is technically feasible but did not address whether they are commercially feasible.

Subcommittee Chairman Doug Walgren, D-Pa., said the compromise struck a balance in an area of "substantial economic interests and substantial health and safety interests."

BEACH PROTECTION bill wins Merchant Marine subcommittee OK.

A House Merchant Marine subcommittee yesterday approved, by voice vote, bills to bring beach waters under stiffer federal regulation and to protect the Antarctic from environmental damage.

The coastal waters bill (HR 4333) has been pushed by the New Jersey delegation, which wants beaches to be held to uniform national water testing and monitoring standards. New Jersey has one of the toughest laws in the nation, inspired by beach closures in the summers of 1987 and 1988 due to washed-up medical waste and other pollution that cost the state billions of dollars in tourism revenues.

The bill, sponsored by William J. Hughes, D-N.J., and approved by the Subcommittee on Oceanography and Great Lakes, would require the Environmental Protection Agency to develop water quality criteria within one year.

Members from some other coastal states, particularly Gerry E. Studds, D-Mass., will try to weaken the bill.

- During a joint markup, the Oceanography and Fisheries and Wildlife Conservation subcommittees approved a bill (HR 3977) that would bar U.S. citizens from mineral exploration and development in Antarctica and press for negotiation of a permanent international ban. It would also direct the under secretary of Commerce for oceans and atmosphere to regulate tourism in the Antarctic.

THRIFT BAILOUT funds needed soon, regulator says.

Congress must provide regulators more money to clean up the S&L industry before it adjourns this year, a government official said yesterday.

Peter Monroe, chairman of the Oversight Board of the Resolution Trust Corporation, said that unless Congress acts, the government will be forced to slow down the closing of failed savings and loans.

Monroe said the government expects to have less than $8 billion available to spend on S&Ls after the fiscal year ends Sept. 30.

"It is absolutely clear that if those are all the proceeds that we had to work with in the following quarter, it would cause us to very significantly reduce the pace of resolutions," Monroe said.

In May, the administration raised its estimate of the cost of cleaning up the S&L mess from $73 billion to a range of $90 billion to $130 billion, excluding interest.

THRIFT BAILOUT costs to be shifted under proposed House bills.

Members of the House yesterday proposed two separate bills to shift the burden of the savings and loan bailout, both geographically and by income level.

Legislation suggested by members of the Northeast-Midwest Congressional Coalition would establish a formula to determine each state's fair share of the savings and loan bailout.

Those states whose thrifts are found to have incurred "excessive costs" would be required to pay into a federal fund that would insure all thrifts after 1992. If a state declined to pay into the federal fund, its state-chartered thrifts would no longer be eligible for federal deposit insurance.

According to Howard Wolpe, D-Mich., the proposed legislation recognizes that a major but little-discussed cause of the S&L crisis was lax regulation by state governments, particularly those in the South and West.

The 18 states in the Northeast-Midwest region contributed only $1.3 billion, or 5 percent of the costs associated with aiding state-chartered thrifts, he said. Aid to Texas-chartered thrifts will cost $20.9 billion or 72 percent, he said.

- In a related action, Reps. Joseph P. Kennedy II, D-Mass., and Sam M. Gibbons, D-Fla., and consumer advocate Ralph Nader said at a news conference that they would propose legislation to target wealthy investors, many of whom used the federal protection for savings and loans deposits to gain substantial interest income on their deposits.

The proposal would raise more than $100 billion in bailout costs over five years by imposing three new taxes, including a 7.5 percent surtax on interest, dividends and capital gains for high-income taxpayers; a 5 percent surtax on most corporations and elimination of an inheritance tax provision dealing with capital gains.

Not As Scheduled

Yesterday's scheduled Senate Budget Committee markup of draft legislation to make changes in the budget process was canceled, largely due to the resumption of budget summit talks between administration and congressional leaders.

The budget process markup will resume next week.

The committee late Wednesday voted, 20-1, to recommend the removal of the Social Security Trust Fund from Gramm-Rudman deficit calculations.

Removing the huge social security surplus from the deficit calculations would substantially raise the deficit, but the panel rejected an amendment by Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., to raise the Gramm-Rudman deficit target. Other members noted that the Gramm-Rudman target will have to be raised anyway, as part of any deficit-reduction package negotiated between Congress and the White House.

The panel on Wednesday also rejected amendments to give the president increased authority to rescind appropriations already made and to remove the Highway and Airport trust funds from Gramm-Rudman deficit calculations.

ELECTION★90

Outlook for the 102nd Congress

Thursday Nov. 8, 1990 ♦ National Press Club ♦ Washington, D.C.

America Speaks November 6. CQ Interprets November 8.

On Nov. 6, American voters are going to make choices that will have a profound effect on congressional policy-making and politics in the 1990s. They will set the stage for what could be a rare watershed year in congressional politics — 1992.

Just 36 hours after the election, CQ and political experts will analyze the people's choices to show you how your interests and legislative strategies will be affected: now, through 1992 and beyond. Don't miss this chance to understand the real importance of the '90 races. Noted political figures and experts will discuss:

- ♦ Key congressional races and seats that have changed
- ♦ Domestic and foreign policy issues likely to dominate the congressional agenda
- ♦ How committee changes and leadership politics will affect legislation
- ♦ President Bush's legislative agenda in the 102nd Congress
- ♦ How the growing stigma of campaign fundraising and the prospects for campaign finance reform will affect PACs, corporations, unions and trade associations
- ♦ The odds of a Republican takeover of the Senate in 1992
- How politics in the House will change after reapportionment
- How changes in the size and partisan makeup of key state delegations could shift the balance of power in the House in 1992
- ♦ Potential shakeup in House committee leadership positions if a dozen or more senior members retire in 1992

CHAMBERS OF JUSTICE WM. J. BRENNAN, JR.

July 20, 1990

The President
The White House
Washington, D.C.

My dear Mr. President:

The strenuous demands of court work and its related duties required or expected of a Justice appear at this time to be incompatible with my advancing age and medical condition.

I, therefore, retire effective immediately as an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Respectfully,

W. J. Brennan, Jr. —

THE WHITE HOUSE

WASHINGTON

July 23, 1990

Dear Mr. Justice:

It is with deep regret that I acknowledge your letter of retirement.

Your 33 years of service on our Nation's highest court, spanning eight Presidents, have been marked with great distinction and honor. Your powerful intellect, your winning personality, and your commitment to civil discourse on emotional issues that at times tempt uncivil voices have made you one of the great figures of our age.

You have served our country admirably, and I know the American people join me in wishing you every blessing in your years of retirement.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in dark ink, appearing to be "G. H. W. Bush", written in a cursive style.

BRIDGET --

PLEASE emphasize to him that this MUST NOT be seen by anybody else until it comes out in the papers on Thursday.

They did Vic a huge favor, letting him have it early -- because they're always terrified of being "scooped" by somebody else, they guard this sort of stuff like the Crown jewels.

DALE

TUESDAY, July 24, 1990United Feature Syndicate*JACK ANDERSON and DALE VAN ATTA*WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND*Annunzio should look before leaping*By Jack Anderson*and Dale Van Atta

WASHINGTON — The member of Congress who is boasting about exposing the shortcomings of first son Neil Bush lives in one of the biggest glass houses on Capitol Hill.

Rep. Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., is chairman of the House Subcommittee on Financial Institutions Supervision, Regulations and Insurance. He sports a lapel button demanding jail time for the "S&L crooks."

That is the new Frank Annunzio — born again in an election year when it is fashionable to whip the savings and loans. The old Frank Annunzio was not nearly so harsh.

That is because he takes his cues on the S&L issue from his chief banking assistant, Curtis A. Prins. And not long ago, Prins was eating dinner in the home of Charles H. Keating Jr.

Keating is the former owner of Lincoln Savings and Loan. The taxpayers own it now, and its collapse will cost them about $2 billion. It has been fashionable to blame the "Keating five" — five senators who took big campaign contributions from Keating and then went to bat for him against S&L regulators who knew better. But from the look of things, the "Keating five" had better make room for more.

Our associates Michael Binstein and Tim Warner have learned about two trips Prins took at the invitation of the generous Keating.

On March 2, 1987, Prins flew to Southern California and Arizona to, in his words, acquaint himself with the operation of Lincoln Savings and Loan. He also acquainted himself with the swank Crescent Hotel, then owned by Keating, where Prins stayed, for free. And he was a dinner guest at Keating's home.

Traveling with Prins was Dave Evans, a Washington lobbyist for Keating's holding company, American Continental Corp. Evans, a former Democratic congressman from Indiana, has been one of the most visible and aggressive advocates for Keating on Capitol Hill. Last year, for example, he sought to short circuit a House Banking Committee investigation into Keating and Lincoln.

Annunzio and Prins have been among the most outspoken critics of a regulation that Keating also sought to kill. It would have reined in the investment powers of industry high flyers.

After Prins enjoyed Keating's hospitality in Arizona — including a round of golf that Prins doesn't remember who paid for — he and Evans took a side trip to Las Vegas on Keating's jet. They stayed at Bally's Casino and Resort, and Evans picked up the bill.

Within a month, Prins was the dinner guest of Evans and another Keating lobbyist, James Grogan, at the pricey Washington, D.C., restaurant, Lion D'Or.

In line with the ethics rules of the House of Representatives, Prins reported the trip to California and Arizona on his financial disclosure form. He listed the reason, to "visit savings and loans to discuss ... recapitalization legislation." The form says Evans paid the bills. Prins failed to mention the side trip to Las Vegas on his financial disclosure form. He now claims that he repaid Evans "in cash."

When asked about the favors from Keating, Prins told us, "Keating snookered me. I wasn't the only one."

After the fact, Prins is trying to make himself and his boss Annunzio look like tough guys in the fight to bring the S&L owners to justice. But the record says otherwise.

Annunzio has taken $3,000 in campaign contributions from Keating. He is caught in a tough re-election race in Chicago where his opponent is making claims that Annunzio is more responsible than others for the S&L fiasco.

The revelations about Annunzio's staffer hint that there is plenty of blame to go around.

Dear Mr. President,

I cannot thank you enough for giving so graciously of your time to help us with the research on our film BUSH'S WAR. As I explained to Mrs. Bush, I love to listen to family histories, and yours was clearly an exceptional and compelling family. The details that you provided about your war experiences will be invaluable in completing the portrait of an era in American history that is clearly lost to most young television viewers today.

Again, we are indebted to you for your hospitality and your generous cooperation in helping us develop this movie. Now we roll up our sleeves and begin the process of scripting your story, which we hope will be a true reflection of your early life that makes you proud.

Yours sincerely,

Ilene A. Berg

KOLSTAD FUNDRAISER, ANTI-DRUG RALLY

Both events open press. Text available. One note regarding anti-drug rally speech. The woman Bush paid tribute to as a "True American Hero," the late Janet Rogers, according to motorcade driver was a Hardin County Sheriff Deputy who died following shootout with bank robber in Hardin, Montana sometime in the past two months. She was 35 years old. Her husband also was a Sheriff Deputy and was on duty with her at the time of the bank robbery. He also pursued the bank robber who was shot and killed in the incident. Janet Rogers died within four hours of the robbery.

There were more than 2,000 participants at the anti-drug rally. There were perhaps 100 D.A.R.E. youths seated to the right of the President's lectern at the event. He shook hands with many of them as he arrived and also on departure. One of the policemen seated with the young people gave the President a black carryall with red piping that appeared to be one of the organization's insignia items.

Motorcade to both events uneventful. There were scattered, curious onlookers. No protest placards in sight.

FITZWATER COMMENTS HOLIDAY INN
Billings, Montana

Marlin talked briefly to the pool in holding area at Holiday Inn before motorcade left for airport. He had no comment on developments related to Korea. And he would not comment on Ollie North situation. Asked why he was reluctant to comment on North, Marlin said, "We have never commented on this case. We just don't think it is appropriate" to do so.

Regarding aircraft carrier event tomorrow at Newport News, Spence said Doro Bush LeBlond will christen the USS George Washington.

Regarding Bush's visit to MX site and christening event tomorrow, Marlin was asked about the kind of signal this sends in an era of detente. He replied, "It is important to maintain U.S. military strength. But we are adjusting our defense posture to adapt to new world realities. But there clearly is going to be a reduction in military forces...at the same time we need the basic defense strength of the United States....The United States is a superpower. It requires certain military defense needs....Certainly we are a Naval power. Carrier forces are the backbone of our navy."

Asked what kind of congressional reaction is expected following the president's tough language in address at Kolstad fundraiser this morning, Marlin replied: "Fast action on legislative package."

Asked why tougher language had been used, he said, "Thought it was appropriate. Congress needed a strong push."

WARREN AIR FORCE BASE VISIT

The President had three stops on this visit. The first, to what look like a white concrete 60 - 80 foot high tower. Major William Rimp, the base PR guy, said the tower is called an "implacer" and that an MX missile stage is rolled into it to be lowered underground. This implacer held not an actual missile but a simulated one because this is a training facility. Marlin said that the President went down underground about four stories where he could walk around the nosecone and look at the launcher room. The President then went a few feet into an adjoining silo, which looked like a brown concrete square cap on the ground. This holds a Minuteman 3 missile seven stories down. Marlin said that the President and his entourage looked down at the missile and that Senator Simpson briefed the group on the base and its good relationship with the community. Finally, Bush emerged from a trailer-like truck to make his remarks in the drizzle to about 100 - 150 service men and women. As he sat in the limo preparing to leave he used the limo P.A. system to say, "Thanks a lot, guys," and remarks to that effect.

When he emerged Bush was asked whether he had anything to say to the Congress for refusing to fund MX modernization. He declined to take the bait twice. Fitzwater, asked why Bush decided to do this said, "General Scowcroft thought we should visit one, for the morale of the troops and two, to make a point in light of the budget negotiations."

Major Rimp, briefing the pool on this base, said that it is the home of the 50 MX missiles and 150 Minuteman missiles in the U.S. arsenal. The 50 MX's are all located within Wyoming and the Minuteman missiles in three States, Wyoming, Nebraska and Colorado. They are all in their unmanned, underground silos between 40 - 120 miles from the base where they are brought for repair and maintenance.

One final note: Paul Bedard could not keep himself from shouting a question at Simpson on the kind of bait Bush and party plan to use fishing. There ensued a lengthy Simpson soliloquy on the advantages of various lure and bait which you may have heard and wondered about.
