WASHINGTON, DC 20510

Brent - All Yours. GO for it!!

October 12, 1990

GB 932A

Dear Mr. President:

I appreciate the opportunity to speak with you about my Cuba embargo language, prohibiting U.S. subsidiaries abroad from trading with Cuba.

On Monday the conference committee on the Export Administration Act will consider this language. It is in the Senate bill, but not the House version, though the House Foreign Affairs committee previously passed it unanimously.

We have been told that the Administration will state its opposition to this amendment. I am asking you to instruct Administration representatives at the conference to respond favorably on behalf of the embargo language. Short of that, I would hope that the Administration would remain neutral on the Cuba language.

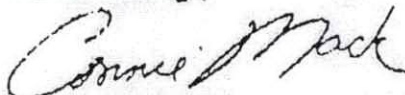

This amendment is of great significance to the people who are struggling for Cuba's freedom. It is their top legislative priority in Congress today. But even more important, I'm convinced that this language can have a real impact on hastening the dawn of freedom in Cuba.

I know that all of your advisors will recommend that you oppose this Cuba language. But there are times when the principle of freedom overrides business-as-usual between our trading partners.

At its heart, this is not a debate about legalities but about differing policies towards Cuba. Canada wants to improve relations with Cuba through increased trade; the United States believes that economic pressure will help limit Castro's era of tyranny.

As surprising as it may seem, I have been able to convince Claiborne Pell, long known to be a vocal opponent of the Cuba embargo, to accept this language. House Democrats will only have a chance to remove the provision if the Administration states its opposition to the tightened embargo.

Sincerely,

Connie Mack

FACT SHEET -- MACK CUBA EMBARGO AMENDMENT

October 12, 1990

- Brings foreign subsidiaries owned or controlled by U.S. companies under the existing Cuba trade embargo. This would conform the Cuba embargo to current embargoes on Cambodia, Vietnam, and North Korea, which do now apply to subsidiaries abroad.
- According to the Treasury Department, U.S. subsidiaries total trade with Cuba was $2.685 billion from 1980 to 1989.
- Affected subsidiaries are located mainly in the United Kingdom, Canada, and Switzerland.
- The provision passed the full Senate three times, first by a 82 to 13 vote (7/24/89), then by voice votes. It has also passed the House Foreign Affairs Committee unanimously.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

October 12, 1990

Mr. President:

Jim Baker believes a call to Prime Minister Thatcher is important to try to get the UN Resolution moved tonight. Otherwise, he feels it may be permanently bogged down.

We have checked and the Prime Minister is still up and available for a call.

Brent Scowcroft

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS FOR THE PRESIDENT'S
CALL TO UK PRIME MINISTER THATCHER

-- We've been working hard in New York to get a balanced workable resolution concerning on the tragic incident in Jerusalem.

-- As the Council President, your Perm Rep is obviously in a most difficult position. Frankly, though, we are concerned that successive texts are getting further and further from a text we can support -- the current NAM amendments are terrible.

-- I want a resolution approximating the text you circulated yesterday. I have been actively engaged all week marshalling support for this text. Jim Baker and our people in Washington, New York and at our UN Security Council posts have been beating on foreign ministries all around the world. I trust you and your people have been doing the same.

-- The net effect of what is going on in New York is to put the focus on non Iraq-Kuwait matters for four to five days; therefore, we're playing into Saddam Hussein's hands. We should grab the bull by the horns and use our procedural advantage by virtue of your presidency to ram this thing through.

-- You and I both are keenly aware of the stakes involved. We cannot afford to see the Council split. But at the same time, fundamental U.S. concerns are at stake in the Middle East, and I've gone as far as I can to compromise -- all week there has been an unprecedented tough text on the table. We need to find a way to get the NAM back to basics -- is the Council going to be relevant -- and act responsibly now -- or will the opportunity pass it by.

Prez vows dying boy will get his last wish

"WOW!"

That's what brave little cancer patient Jimmy Kilanowski roared yesterday as he heard the great news — President Bush will grant his wish.

Bush will meet the 8-year-old Long Island boy on Oct. 23.

The news ended a bureaucratic battle between Kilanowski's family, the Oval Office and two rival foundations that grant the last wishes of the terminally ill.

It came at 3:30 p.m. as Jimmy and his mom Lori sat in their Ronkonkoma home.

That's when Sen. Al D'Amato (R-N.Y.) called to tell them Bush will meet Jimmy. The president will send a car for Jimmy and whisk him off to Stamford, Conn., where they will meet, D'Amato said.

"When we heard, Jimmy's eyes opened wide and his jaw dropped. He said, 'Wow!'" Lori said.

Jimmy said, "I'm going to give him [Bush] a great big hug."

"We couldn't ask for anything more," said his dad, Peter.

The couple thanked D'Amato,

The Post and other media.

The problem began when Jimmy used the "wrong" group to make his wish — the local Wish is Granted foundation instead of the national Make a Wish group recognized by the White House.

Bush sent the boy a personal note after aides decided he wasn't eligible for a visit.

Jimmy has an inoperable brain tumor. His survival chances are less than 5 percent. However, the tumor is in remission and his family is praying he'll survive.

"All we know now is that a little boy is happy. And the president's going to get one big hug and that can't be all bad," Jimmy's mom said.

Bill Hoffmann
