HIS UPCOMING FILM CALLED NECESSARY ROUGHNESS..... IT'S REALLY
THE HELEN THOMAS STORY.

I ASKED MARLIN IF I WAS SUPPOSED TO DO THE SAME THING TONIGHT THAT I DID AT THE GRIDIRON DINNER..... HE SAID NO, YOU'RE SUPPOSED OT BE FUNNY!
SPEAKING OF MARLIN... HE HAS AGAIN JOINED THE RANKS OF TOMMY LASORDA,
AND ED KOCH... YOU KNOW THEY ^{3 are} ALL USING ULTRA SLIM FAST..... WORKED GREAT LAST TIME WHEN THEY WERE ALL ON ULTRA BALD FAST.

ISNT IT GREAT TO SEE GEN NORMAN SCHWARZKOPF HERE TONIGHT JUST BACK FROM THE GULF.....THE GENERAL JOINED US FOR LUNCH AT THE WHITE HOUSE THE OTHER DAY. AFTER * MONTHS OF MRE'S HE WAS PRETTY HUNGRY.
HE BROUGHT HIS STAFF WITH HIM. ONE COL., ONE SGT, AND ONE DOMINO PIZZA MAN.

NORM HATES SADDAM HUSSEIN. SO DOES BARBARA. FIRST, BARBARA SAYS
HE SHOULD BE HANGED. ... NOW SHE WANTS TO TAKE HIM SLEDDING.

BARBARA WANTS EVERY AMERICAN TO LEARN HOW TO READ. NOW SHE SAYS
MILLIE SHOULD READ. I SCOFFED AT THIS.... BAR SAID "WHY NOT?" She can Write.
I SHOULDN'T MAKE FUN OF MILLIE. LAST YEAR SHE MADE MORE MONEY THAN I DID.

BUT WE LOVE LIVING IN THE WHITE HOUSE... THERE IS ONE THING THOUGH, YOU REALLY DON'T HAVE A LOT OF PERSONAL FREEDOM....I USED TO LOVE GOING TO THE SUPERMARKET....READSING THOSE TABLOIDS AS I STOOD IN THE CHECKOUT LINE....BUT IT'S

But before Sinbad performs tonight, I'd like to say a few words about his extraordinary dedication to young people. He's touring the country right now, performing at ~~some~~^{many} of the Historically Black Colleges and Universities. // Before every performance, Sinbad makes a point of visiting a home for runaway kids, or a local school or a summer program. // He urges the young people to keep off drugs and stay in school -- because that's what he did. // And he tells them how important family is -- because his five brothers and sisters are so important to him. Most importantly, he tells kids that with hard work, confidence, and a good education, they can be anything they want to be. He's right.

Take a look at Marcus Stevens, tonight's scholarship winner. Here's a young man who holds the world in the palm of his hand. A true scholar-athlete, he's collecting trophies in four sports and making the honor roll -- all the while, saving money for college and tutoring other students. He hasn't had it easy, either -- we all know how tough it is for young people. Marcus, congratulations on the fine job you've done, and keep up the good work in college. You've made your family -- and all of us -- very proud. //

And to our hosts, the White House Correspondents Association, Barbara and I say thank you. We always enjoy ourselves at your wonderful dinner, and this year has been no exception. Thank you all and good evening.

AND OF COURSE, OUR ABLE PRESS SECRETARY, MARLIN FITZWATER, IS HERE.

YOU KNOW, MARLIN HAS AGAIN JOINED THE RANKS OF ED KOCH AND TOMMY LASORDA -- THEY'RE ALL USING ULTRA SLIM FAST. WORKED GREAT LAST TIME -- WHEN THEY WERE ALL ON ULTRA BALD FAST.

MARLIN'S GREAT WITH THE REPORTERS. AND I KNOW SOME OF THE QUESTIONS CAN BE PRETTY TOUGH.

MARLIN WAS COMPLAINING THE OTHER DAY

WHEN HE TOOK SIXTY QUESTIONS

ABOUT GOVERNOR SUNUNU'S TRAVEL. ///

AND THAT WAS ONLY ONE QUESTION PER FLIGHT.

THE GOVERNOR HAS TAKEN A LOT OF HEAT LATELY, AND SOME PEOPLE THINK IT'S JUST BECAUSE HE'S A CONSERVATIVE.

BUT LET ME TELL YOU,
JOHN SUNUNU HAS THE HEART OF A LIBERAL.
MOST PEOPLE DON'T GET TO SEE THIS SIDE OF HIM, BUT THOSE CLOSEST TO HIM SEE IT EVERY DAY.
IN FACT, HE KEEPS IT IN A JAR ON HIS DESK.

I ASKED GOVERNOR SUNUNU IF I'M SUPPOSED TO DO
THE SAME THING TONIGHT THAT I DID AT THE GRIDIRON.
HE SAID, "NO, YOU'RE SUPPOSED TO BE FUNNY."

AND I KNOW THAT GENERAL NORMAN SCHWARZKOPF IS HERE
TONIGHT, JUST BACK FROM THE PERSIAN GULF. NICE TO HAVE YOU BACK, SIR. ///

THE GENERAL AND I HAD LUNCH THE OTHER DAY,
AND AFTER 8 MONTHS OF MRE'S,
I GUESS HE WAS PRETTY HUNGRY.
HE BROUGHT HIS STAFF WITH HIM TO THE WHITE HOUSE
-- THE SERGEANT, /// THE CAPTAIN ////
AND THE DOMINO'S PIZZA MAN.

I'M TOLD THAT WHEN GENERAL SCHWARZKOPF
LANDED BACK IN THE STATES, HE ORDERED A NEW INITIATIVE:
OPERATION STORM DESSERT. ////

IN HIS FIRST BRIEFING FOR US BACK AT THE WHITE HOUSE,
GENERAL SCHWARZKOPF EXPLAINED THE DIFFERENCE
BETWEEN THE IRAQI AIR FORCE AND JOHN SUNUNU: //
THE GOVERNOR FLEW 45 MORE SORTIES.

BARBARA WAS SORRY SHE MISSED MEETING THE GENERAL
AT LUNCH THAT DAY. SHE'S ACTUALLY BECOME VERY INTERESTED IN MILITARY STRATEGY.

SHE WANTED TO TELL US THAT
SHE REALLY DIDN'T THINK SADDAM SHOULD BE HANGED.
BARBARA JUST WANTS TO TAKE HIM SLEDDING ///
AND WHATEVER HAPPENS -- HAPPENS.

SHE'S A TOUGH ONE. AND THERE'S ONE THING SHE'S REALLY TOUGH ABOUT -- WANTING EVERY AMERICAN TO LEARN HOW TO READ. BUT WE HAVE A CONFESSION TO MAKE:

BARBARA AND I WERE SENT A COPY OF KITTY KELLEY'S BOOK, BUT WE DIDN'T READ IT. WE GAVE IT TO MILLIE. ////

AS SISKEL AND EBERT WOULD SAY,
SHE GAVE IT "ONE LEG UP." ////

ACTUALLY, I SHOULDN'T MAKE FUN OF MILLIE.

LAST YEAR, SHE MADE MORE MONEY THAN I DID. //

BUT I'M BEHIND BARBARA'S LITERACY CAMPAIGN 100 PERCENT. IN FACT, WE HAD "READ ALOUD DAY" LAST WEEK, THE DAY BEFORE WE UNVEILED THE ADMINISTRATION'S EDUCATION STRATEGY, CALLED "AMERICA 2000."

THAT STRATEGY IS BASED UPON OUR 6 NATIONAL EDUCATION GOALS. AND NOW, I'D LIKE TO ANNOUNCE OUR SEVENTH NATIONAL GOAL:

TO HAVE EVERY 8 YEAR-OLD RECOGNIZE THEIR PRESIDENT
ON SIGHT. ///

I'M GOING TO SIT DOWN AND LET SINBAD PERFORM, BUT BEFORE I DO, I'D LIKE TO SAY A FEW WORDS ABOUT HIS EXTRAORDINARY DEDICATION TO YOUNG PEOPLE. HE'S TOURING THE COUNTRY RIGHT NOW, PERFORMING AT SOME OF THE HISTORICALLY BLACK COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES. BEFORE EVERY PERFORMANCE, SINBAD MAKES A POINT OF VISITING A HOME FOR RUNAWAY KIDS, OR A LOCAL SCHOOL OR A SUMMER PROGRAM. HE URGES THE YOUNG PEOPLE TO KEEP OFF DRUGS AND STAY IN SCHOOL -- BECAUSE THAT'S WHAT HE DID.

AND HE TELLS THEM HOW IMPORTANT FAMILY IS -- BECAUSE HIS FIVE BROTHERS AND SISTERS ARE SO IMPORTANT TO HIM. MOST IMPORTANTLY, HE TELLS KIDS THAT WITH HARD WORK, CONFIDENCE, AND A GOOD EDUCATION, THEY CAN BE ANYTHING THEY WANT TO BE. HE'S RIGHT.

TAKE A LOOK AT MARCUS STEVENS, TONIGHT'S SCHOLARSHIP WINNER. HERE'S A YOUNG MAN WHO HOLDS THE WORLD IN THE PALM OF HIS HAND.

A TRUE SCHOLAR-ATHLETE, HE'S COLLECTING TROPHIES IN FOUR SPORTS AND MAKING THE HONOR ROLL -- ALL THE WHILE, SAVING MONEY FOR COLLEGE AND TUTORING OTHER STUDENTS. HE HASN'T HAD IT EASY, EITHER -- WE ALL KNOW HOW TOUGH IT IS FOR YOUNG PEOPLE. MARCUS, CONGRATULATIONS ON THE FINE JOB YOU'VE DONE, AND KEEP UP THE GOOD WORK IN COLLEGE. YOU'VE MADE YOUR FAMILY -- AND ALL OF US -- VERY PROUD. //

AND TO OUR HOSTS, THE WHITE HOUSE CORRESPONDENTS ASSOCIATION, BARBARA AND I SAY THANK YOU. WE ALWAYS ENJOY OURSELVES AT YOUR WONDERFUL DINNER, AND THIS YEAR HAS BEEN NO EXCEPTION. THANK YOU ALL AND GOOD EVENING.

PRESIDENTIAL REMARKS: WHITE HOUSE CORRESPONDENTS DINNER
THE WASHINGTON HILTON
SATURDAY, APRIL 27, 1991
10:00 P.M.

Thank you, Bob, for that warm introduction. Members of the Correspondents Association and invited guests, it is a pleasure for Barbara and me to join you tonight. I understand the comedian Sinbad is here. He's very excited about his upcoming film, called "Necessary Roughness." ///

It's really "The Helen Thomas Story."

And of course, our able press secretary, Marlin Fitzwater, is here.

You know, Marlin has again joined the ranks of Ed Koch and Tommy Lasorda -- they're all using Ultra Slim Fast. Worked great last time -- when they were all on Ultra Bald Fast.

Marlin's great with the reporters. And I know some of the questions can be pretty tough.

X Marlin was complaining the other day when he took sixty questions about Gov. Sununu's travel. And that was only one question per flight.

The Governor has taken a lot of heat lately, and some people think it's just because he's a conservative.

X But let me tell you,
John Sununu has the heart of a liberal.
Most people don't get to see this side of him, but those closest to him see it every day.
In fact, he keeps it in a jar on his desk.

[I asked Governor Sununu if I'm supposed to do the same thing tonight that I did at the Gridiron. He said, "No, you're supposed to be funny."]

You remember when he said you for return that it was a great day to be a father, a mother of a laborer, soldier, etc. Well I can tell you

And I know that General Norman Schwarzkopf is here tonight, just back from the Persian Gulf. Nice to have you back, sir. /// from his children

The General and I had lunch the other day, and after 8 months of MRE's, I ~~guess~~ that it was a he was pretty hungry. great day
~~He brought his staff with him to the White House --~~
~~the sergeant, the captain and the Domino's pizza man.~~ for the

I'm told that when General Schwarzkopf landed back in the States,
he ordered a new initiative: Operation Storm Dessert. dominos

X In his first briefing for us back at the White House,
General Schwarzkopf explained the difference between the Iraqi Air Force and John Sununu. Pizza
The Governor flew 45 more sorties. John

Barbara was sorry she missed meeting the General at lunch.
She's actually become very interested in military strategy.

✓ She wanted to tell us that
she really didn't think Saddam should be hanged.
Barbara just wants to take him sledding ///
And whatever happens -- happens.

She's a tough one. And there's one thing she's really tough about -- wanting every American to learn how to read. But we have a confession to make:

Barbara and I were sent a copy of Kitty Kelley's book, but we didn't read it. We gave it to Millie.
As Siskel and Ebert would say, she gave it "One Leg Up."

Actually, I shouldn't make fun of Millie.
Last year, she made more money than I did. //

But I'm behind Barbara's literacy campaign 100 percent. In fact, we had "Read Aloud Day" last week, the day before we unveiled the Administration's education strategy, called "America 2000."

That strategy is based upon our 6 national education goals.
And now, I'd like to announce our seventh national goal:
To have every 8 year-old recognize their President
on sight. // [PAUSE]
And have every 18 year-old recognize me by November of 1992.

GEORGE BUSH

The General and I had lunch at the White House the Other Day. After 8 months of MRE's he was pretty hungry. He brought his staff with him to the White House . 1 Colonel, one Sergeant and one Domino Pizza Man.

Norm hates Saddam Hussein. So does

Barbara. First ~~she~~ ^{Barbara} says ~~she think~~ he should be hanged. Now she wants to take him sledding.

Barbara wants every American to learn how to read. I think she's overdoing it when she says Millie should read.... I scoffed at this....

Bar said "Why not, she can write!"

Actually I shouldn't make fun of Millie. Last year she made ~~more~~ more money than I did.

But we love living in the White House ... There is one thing, though; You don't have a lot of personal freedom.... I used to love going to the Super Market. Reading those tabloids as I stood in the Check Out Line..... But it's not all bad... I can still read the N.Y. Times

Dear Mr. President,

I have been thinking of you and praying for you daily, especially as you handle the many problems as a result of the war. Peace is often more difficult than war. You have been doing magnificently. I believe God has been with you.

Friday I attended the Enthronement of the new Archbishop of Canterbury. As the leader of Anglicans and Episcopalians throughout the world, he will be a giant. At his Enthronement, he gave one of the most powerful addresses I have ever heard a clergyman give. The leadership of Britain was there, including Prime Minister John Major, the leader of the Labour Party, Mr. Kinnock, the Roman Catholic Cardinal, etc. etc. There was a large delegation from Rome. It was one of the most ecumenical gatherings in which I have ever been involved.

We love your whole family, and thank God for your years of friendship.

Please give my warmest affection to Barbara. I will never forget the evening of January 16 and am deeply grateful for the autographed picture that you sent me of that historic time.

I was able to follow you a little in the press and on television when you were in Jupiter, and I knew you must be visiting your mother.

P.S. Naturally, I have been sick over all the publicity concerning the book about Ron and Nancy.

BILLY GRAHAM
MONTREAT, NORTH CAROLINA 28357

April 7, 1991

Dear Mr. President,

I am writing you on the 7th of April, the weekend that you have proclaimed as a time for thanksgiving for the victory in the Gulf, the comparatively few casualties, and the brevity of the war.

When I visited you on the 16th of January, these are the things we prayed for. I believe God did intervene for you, and your staff both in the Pentagon and in Saudi Arabia.

This war has united the country more than anything that I can remember since the second World War. It has also given us a new spirit and a renewed patriotism.

This past week I have been preaching in the Tacoma Dome in Tacoma, Washington and now this weekend in the Kingdome in Seattle. Last evening we had 47,000 people in attendance, and this afternoon we are expecting even more. In all these services we have thanked God. Most of our service this afternoon will be patriotic and I intend to read your Proclamation. A woman is going to speak whose son was killed in his helicopter two days before the end of the war. She carried in her pocket a letter from him to be read if he was killed. In it he wrote, "Please don't worry about me. I am all right. For once, I know something you don't. What Heaven looks like." We are hearing so many stories of military people who were converted to Christ during Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Everyone is thanking God that you are our President at such a time as this.

Last weekend I spent Easter with the Reagans. They took me to church and then I had the opportunity of having lunch at their home afterward. He was delighted with his visit with you in Washington.

I am leaving this week for Europe and will not be back in America until almost the first of August.

On April 19th I am going to the Enthronement of the new Archbishop of Canterbury, whose wife was converted to Christ in one of our Crusades, and who himself was greatly impacted in his spiritual life many years ago. In addition to the invitation, he wrote me a personal letter urging me to come.

After that, I am going to take a few days in France to work on my memoirs, and then we go to Scotland for three major Crusades. I will also have an opportunity to address the General Assembly of Scotland.

Then we go to the Soviet Union where in Moscow we will have several thousand clergy coming from all over the country to the Lenin Stadium complex. Our delegates will be housed and fed at the University of Moscow.

You can count on our prayers every day for you that God will continue to give you wisdom and courage as you face many domestic as well as foreign problems. The same God that stood by your side during the Gulf War will be with you on other fronts.

It is a great privilege to be your friend. Give my warmest greetings to Barbara and other members of the family. - with your mother

Most affectionately yours,

"Walker"

TRIP REPORT

On April 18-22, 1991, a 12 member bipartisan congressional delegation led by Congressman G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery (D-Miss.) and ranking minority member Bill Emerson (R-Mo.), visited Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iraq, and Bahrain to review the military situation, to receive a status report on the evolution of international events in the region, to receive reports on the performance of the National Guard and Selected Reserves, and to find out when those forces would be brought home. Other members of the delegation were Mr. Austin Murphy (D-Pa.), Mr. Earl Hutto (D-Fla.), Mrs. Barbara Vucanovich (R-Nev.), Mr. Al McCandless (R-Cal.), Mr. Martin Lancaster (D-N.C.), Mr. Lewis Payne (D-Va.), Mr. Claude Harris (D-Ala.), Mr. Arthur Ravenel (R-S.C.), Mr. John Tanner (D-Tenn.), and Mr. Gene Taylor (D-Miss.). This may be the last House delegation to visit the Middle East before the final withdrawal of troops and equipment from the region.

The delegation stopped at Riyadh for a briefing by General Norman Schwarzkopf, Commander-in-Chief, CENTCOM. The delegation then proceeded to Dhahran, for a briefing by Lieutenant General William (Gus) Pagonis, the ARCENT Logistics Commander, on the redeployment of personnel and equipment from Southwest Asia. The delegation received an Air Force briefing at Al Karhij Air Base, met with the Marines at the forward base at Jubail, and received a Navy briefing from Vice Admiral Stanley R. Arthur, Commander of the Seventh Fleet, aboard the U.S.S. Blue Ridge, docked in Bahrain. With respect to nonmilitary issues, the delegation traveled to Southern Iraq to inspect the refugee camp at Safwan and met with Crown Prince and Prime Minister of Kuwait, Sheik Saad Ab Abdullah Al Sabah. At every opportunity throughout the trip the delegation stopped to converse with the soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines who made our stunning victory possible.

Over the course of the delegation's visit, several major issues were reviewed, and the following summarizes the major findings of the trip.

THE CURRENT MILITARY SITUATION

At the peak of the war, the United States' troop strength in the Persian Gulf region exceeded 541,000. The delegation was impressed with the completeness of the military victory. Of Iraq's total military equipment, 85% of the tanks, 50% of the armored vehicles, and 90% of the artillery pieces were destroyed. American losses totaled just 146 killed in action and 476 wounded in action. Most of our weapons systems had operational readiness rates in excess of 90%. After our victory, we occupied all of Kuwait and the southeastern third of Iraq.

In the days since the war, American forces have pulled back to within ten kilometers of the Kuwaiti border. Redeployment of both personnel and equipment is well under way, but much remains to be done. Over 274,000 troops have been sent home. In the last month alone, over 180,000 soldiers and 56 ships have left the theater. The focus is now shifting to the question of what sort of continuing American military presence in the region is advisable. General Schwarzkopf indicated that three countries have expressed interest in hosting a small, residual CENTCOM headquarters staff. It also seems likely that joint military exercises with the Saudis and other coalition forces will be conducted in the theater. As a result, some U.S. equipment is being stored for future use in the Persian Gulf region.

PROGRESS OF THE REDEPLOYMENT

The redeployment of over 540,000 personnel and their equipment back to the United States is a formidable undertaking involving many logistical, administrative and other difficulties. The swift victory of coalition forces has meant that 150 fully loaded ships en route to the Middle East had to be turned around. Although over 30 ports in the United States were used to ship supplies to the theater, all personnel and equipment must be returned through just two ports in Saudi Arabia. As a result, there is a substantial equipment backlog at both Dhahran and Jubail. The process is further complicated by a requirement, imposed by the Department of Agriculture, that each piece of equipment be thoroughly cleaned to remove any dirt or other debris that might harbor insects or diseases. In the case of tanks, engines have had to be removed to meet the cleanliness standard. The removal and reinstallation of engines requires several hours and slows the shipping process. Clearly, this policy needs to be reexamined. It should be noted that the Saudi government is filling each wheeled or tracked vehicle returning to the United States with 3/4 of a tank of gas for free, helping to reduce shipping costs for our government.

PERSONNEL AND THE REDEPLOYMENT

With respect to the redeployment of personnel, there have also been a variety of complications. First, about 65-70% of the troops needed to get the people and equipment back home is in the reserve component forces. This is because under the Total Force policy, much of the Army's combat support and combat service support functions are in the reserve components. As a result, many active duty personnel are going home before their reserve and national guard counterparts. In cases where the active units came to the Southwest Asia after the national guard or reserve unit that is literally putting them and their equipment on the plane or boat to go home, a perception of unfairness has been created. A related problem had been that the Department of Defense and CENTCOM had failed to announce a unit-by-unit redeployment schedule. Although generally a policy of "first in, first out" had been announced, the uncertainty about which units were to return home when was eroding unit morale. Fortunately, and as a result of our visit, the Army in particular is publishing a redeployment schedule so that our troops will know when they will be coming home. The goal is to ensure that all reserve and national guard units return home within nine months of mobilization. Current Department of Defense policy is that reserve component units will not serve on active duty for more than one year.

Other aspects of personnel redeployment policy warrant mention. CENTCOM has approved ordinary leave for soldiers assigned to the Persian Gulf region, provided those individuals agree to stay until the end of the year or the return of their unit, whichever is earlier. This policy will permit those reservists with pressing business or family problems to return home to resolve those matters. The possibility that reserve component units in theater might be replaced by other similar units that have not deployed is also being explored. Finally, the current policy that all members of the Individual Ready Reserve and those held on active duty past their date of separation or retirement be permitted to leave the area by July 7 was unexplained. The services thus need to fine tune the use of active and reserve forces in the redeployment effort.

PERFORMANCE OF THE RESERVES

By all accounts, our military victory would not have been possible without the outstanding performance of members of the Selected Reserve and National Guard. General Schwarzkopf told the delegation that the reserve components were magnificent in their performance. This trip yielded several insights into the overall operation of the Total Force policy as it pertains to the integration of active and reserve component forces. The integration and performance of the reserve components seems to have worked best in the cases of the Air National Guard, Air Force Reserve, and Marine Corps Reserve. Although the Army

National Guard and Army Reserve artillery, combat support, and combat service support units performed well, the best way in which to use the Army National Guard combat units needs to be revisited. We really don't know how well these units would have performed because the Army did not deploy them. The call-up of Navy reserve units could also have been better conducted. Although volunteers served well and some support units (such as shore patrol and medical units) were activated, the failure to call-up reserve combat aviation units for use in the war should be carefully reviewed. Overall, the Total Force Policy seems to have worked, but the active Army needs to pay more attention to the reserve component combat units, and the Navy needs to employ its reserve combat aviation units.

MORALE, WELFARE & RECREATION

The delegation came away impressed with the job the services did in providing off-duty recreational activities for the troops with so little advanced preparation. The difficulties associated with providing extracurricular activities in a wartime environment and in a host country with such a different culture demonstrate that the services need to consider including recreational equipment kits in the deployment equipment for each unit and the establishment of a cadre of recreation experts (perhaps reservists) who could deploy with units and quickly establish activities to keep the troops in a positive frame of mind. The Air Force and Marine Corps are to be commended for having included morale, welfare and recreational personnel in the unit structure that deployed.

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service accomplished the herculean task of establishing fairly complete military exchanges at large bases and small, sometimes mobile retail outlets throughout the theater of operation. Most items needed in theater were generally in stock, after initial shortages, and customer satisfaction was high. The downsizing and ultimate closure of exchange facilities is proceeding according to an effective plan.

OTHER PERSONNEL ISSUES

One of the surprises of the trip was the extent to which service members were uninformed or misinformed about the benefits for which they would be eligible by virtue of their service in the Persian Gulf. For instance, a widely held belief was that the Saudi Arabian government had offered every American service member a bonus of $10,000 for having served during the conflict but that the United States had declined the offer. This rumor was compounded by the rumor that the same offer had been extended to British and French troops, only those governments had let their troops take the money.

There was widespread ignorance about virtually all of the Desert Shield and Desert Storm legislation passed recently by Congress. Many soldiers with whom we spoke were simply unaware of any legislative action on their behalf, including such important matters as increases in combat pay and G.I. bill benefits. Others were misinformed. Several pilots with whom we spoke asked about a tax exemption for so much of their monthly salary as exceeds $500 (the first $500 is exempt under current law). Although bills to this effect have been introduced, none has passed the Congress. The bottom line here is that the Department of Defense must do a better job of disseminating accurate information the benefits available to our service men and women.

THE SITUATION IN IRAQ

Based on the delegation's visit to the Safwan refugee camp in Southern Iraq, it is apparent that the lives of many Iraqis have not significantly improved since the victory of the coalition forces. Some 25,000-30,000 people live in the Safwan camp, relying on the United States and the Red Crescent for food handouts every three days. Judging by the comments of the refugees, many would fear for their lives if they returned to their homes in Iraq. The two open issues that came from our visit were how fast the United Nations forces will be in place so that U.S. troops guarding the camp may go home and whether the United Nations forces should have a role solely as observers. It seems clear that the American forces protecting the camp do more than observe. They are a legitimate deterrent to the encroachments of the Iraqi military, and the delegation was left with the impression that the lives of the refugees would not be guaranteed by the presence of a force whose only purpose was to observe what was going on. In the longer run, some political solution will have to evolve before many of the refugees will feel free to leave the camp or safe from Iraqi police in the camp after U.S. troops withdraw.

THE SITUATION IN KUWAIT

In the 50 days since the liberation of Kuwait, the government has begun the daunting task of rebuilding the country. Much needs to be done. Without electricity, water and telephones, most of the country's infrastructure will have to be replaced. American civil affairs units, known as Task Force Freedom and composed largely of members of the reserves, are helping to do the job. Current estimates are that the cost of restoration will ultimately be about $25-30 billion. About $1.5 billion has been spent so far on quelling the oil fires. Only 51 of the wells have been capped, less than ten percent of those either burning or gushing. In general, most of the American effort is going toward the restoration of water, power, transportation, communications, and other vital services.

The Crown Prince reiterated his country's gratitude to the United States for freeing his country. He also confirmed an earlier announcement that the Kuwaiti government will be holding elections in the future, and the right of women to vote may be considered. Expanded citizenship eligibility may also be forthcoming. The prince stated the government's view that a continued American military presence in Kuwait is desirable as long as Saddam Hussein remains in power. So far, the Kuwaiti government has promised to contribute $18.5 billion to the Defense Cooperation Account to pay for the costs of the Persian Gulf war, and $8.5 billion has been paid. The Kuwaiti government is paying for the restoration of the country of Kuwait entirely.

American companies have been awarded $558 million in contracts for this effort, 66% of the total value of all contracts awarded. On balance, Kuwait seems to be on track in its rebuilding effort, but the devastation is such that a return to the country's former state is years away.

CONCLUSION

The complexion of the situation in the part of the Middle East we saw is changing. The fully functioning fighting force of a few months ago is shrinking, and the military emphasis is clearly on the redeployment home and positioning some equipment for use in future exercises. Significant problems in the wise use of available active and reserve component manpower still exist, but the services seem to be making an effort to reach a satisfactory accommodation. American humanitarian aid to Iraqi refugees is providing a stable platform from which some political solution to this region's conflicts may emerge, but an indefinite continuation of the status quo should be avoided. Kuwait is on the road to recovery. A meaningful shift toward a more democratic form of government could be just over the horizon.

The members of the delegation wish to thank the Speaker and the Minority Leader for the opportunity to take this most interesting and informative trip. The members also wish to recognize the men and women of our armed services whose extraordinary cooperation and assistance made our visit possible and meaningful.

TRIP REPORT

On April 18-22, 1991, a 12 member bipartisan congressional delegation led by Congressman G. V. (Sonny) Montgomery (D-Miss.) and ranking minority member Bill Emerson (R-Mo.), visited Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iraq, and Bahrain to review the military situation, to receive a status report on the evolution of international events in the region, to receive reports on the performance of the National Guard and Selected Reserves, and to find out when those forces would be brought home. Other members of the delegation were Mr. Austin Murphy (D-Pa.), Mr. Earl Hutto (D-Fla.), Mrs. Barbara Vucanovich (R-Nev.), Mr. Al McCandless (R-Cal.), Mr. Martin Lancaster (D-N.C.), Mr. Lewis Payne (D-Va.), Mr. Claude Harris (D-Ala.), Mr. Arthur Ravenel (R-S.C.), Mr. John Tanner (D-Tenn.), and Mr. Gene Taylor (D-Miss.). This may be the last House delegation to visit the Middle East before the final withdrawal of troops and equipment from the region.

The delegation stopped at Riyadh for a briefing by General Norman Schwarzkopf, Commander-in-Chief, CENTCOM. The delegation then proceeded to Dhahran, for a briefing by Lieutenant General William (Gus) Pagonis, the ARCENT Logistics Commander, on the redeployment of personnel and equipment from Southwest Asia. The delegation received an Air Force briefing at Al Karhij Air Base, met with the Marines at the forward base at Jubail, and received a Navy briefing from Vice Admiral Stanley R. Arthur, Commander of the Seventh Fleet, aboard the U.S.S. Blue Ridge, docked in Bahrain. With respect to nonmilitary issues, the delegation traveled to Southern Iraq to inspect the refugee camp at Safwan and met with Crown Prince and Prime Minister of Kuwait, Sheik Saad Ab Abdullah Al Sabah. At every opportunity throughout the trip the delegation stopped to converse with the soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines who made our stunning victory possible.

Over the course of the delegation's visit, several major issues were reviewed, and the following summarizes the major findings of the trip.

THE CURRENT MILITARY SITUATION

At the peak of the war, the United States' troop strength in the Persian Gulf region exceeded 541,000. The delegation was impressed with the completeness of the military victory. Of Iraq's total military equipment, 85% of the tanks, 50% of the armored vehicles, and 90% of the artillery pieces were destroyed. American losses totaled just 146 killed in action and 476 wounded in action. Most of our weapons systems had operational readiness rates in excess of 90%. After our victory, we occupied all of Kuwait and the southeastern third of Iraq.

In the days since the war, American forces have pulled back to within ten kilometers of the Kuwaiti border. Redeployment of both personnel and equipment is well under way, but much remains to be done. Over 274,000 troops have been sent home. In the last month alone, over 180,000 soldiers and 56 ships have left the theater. The focus is now shifting to the question of what sort of continuing American military presence in the region is advisable. General Schwarzkopf indicated that three countries have expressed interest in hosting a small, residual CENTCOM headquarters staff. It also seems likely that joint military exercises with the Saudis and other coalition forces will be conducted in the theater. As a result, some U.S. equipment is being stored for future use in the Persian Gulf region.

PROGRESS OF THE REDEPLOYMENT

The redeployment of over 540,000 personnel and their equipment back to the United States is a formidable undertaking involving many logistical, administrative and other difficulties. The swift victory of coalition forces has meant that 150 fully loaded ships en route to the Middle East had to be turned around. Although over 30 ports in the United States were used to ship supplies to the theater, all personnel and equipment must be returned through just two ports in Saudi Arabia. As a result, there is a substantial equipment backlog at both Dhahran and Jubail. The process is further complicated by a requirement, imposed by the Department of Agriculture, that each piece of equipment be thoroughly cleaned to remove any dirt or other debris that might harbor insects or diseases. In the case of tanks, engines have had to be removed to meet the cleanliness standard. The removal and reinstallation of engines requires several hours and slows the shipping process. Clearly, this policy needs to be reexamined. It should be noted that the Saudi government is filling each wheeled or tracked vehicle returning to the United States with 3/4 of a tank of gas for free, helping to reduce shipping costs for our government.

PERSONNEL AND THE REDEPLOYMENT

With respect to the redeployment of personnel, there have also been a variety of complications. First, about 65-70% of the troops needed to get the people and equipment back home is in the reserve component forces. This is because under the Total Force policy, much of the Army's combat support and combat service support functions are in the reserve components. As a result, many active duty personnel are going home before their reserve and national guard counterparts. In cases where the active units came to the Southwest Asia after the national guard or reserve unit that is literally putting them and their equipment on the plane or boat to go home, a perception of unfairness has been created. A related problem had been that the Department of Defense and CENTCOM had failed to announce a unit-by-unit redeployment schedule. Although generally a policy of "first in, first out" had been announced, the uncertainty about which units were to return home when was eroding unit morale. Fortunately, and as a result of our visit, the Army in particular is publishing a redeployment schedule so that our troops will know when they will be coming home. The goal is to ensure that all reserve and national guard units return home within nine months of mobilization. Current Department of Defense policy is that reserve component units will not serve on active duty for more than one year.

Other aspects of personnel redeployment policy warrant mention. CENTCOM has approved ordinary leave for soldiers assigned to the Persian Gulf region, provided those individuals agree to stay until the end of the year or the return of their unit, whichever is earlier. This policy will permit those reservists with pressing business or family problems to return home to resolve those matters. The possibility that reserve component units in theater might be replaced by other similar units that have not deployed is also being explored. Finally, the current policy that all members of the Individual Ready Reserve and those held on active duty past their date of separation or retirement be permitted to leave the area by July 7 was unexplained. The services thus need to fine tune the use of active and reserve forces in the redeployment effort.

PERFORMANCE OF THE RESERVES

By all accounts, our military victory would not have been possible without the outstanding performance of members of the Selected Reserve and National Guard. General Schwarzkopf told the delegation that the reserve components were magnificent in their performance. This trip yielded several insights into the overall operation of the Total Force policy as it pertains to the integration of active and reserve component forces. The integration and performance of the reserve components seems to have worked best in the cases of the Air National Guard, Air Force Reserve, and Marine Corps Reserve. Although the Army

National Guard and Army Reserve artillery, combat support, and combat service support units performed well, the best way in which to use the Army National Guard combat units needs to be revisited. We really don't know how well these units would have performed because the Army did not deploy them. The call-up of Navy reserve units could also have been better conducted. Although volunteers served well and some support units (such as shore patrol and medical units) were activated, the failure to call-up reserve combat aviation units for use in the war should be carefully reviewed. Overall, the Total Force Policy seems to have worked, but the active Army needs to pay more attention to the reserve component combat units, and the Navy needs to employ its reserve combat aviation units.

MORALE, WELFARE & RECREATION

The delegation came away impressed with the job the services did in providing off-duty recreational activities for the troops with so little advanced preparation. The difficulties associated with providing extracurricular activities in a wartime environment and in a host country with such a different culture demonstrate that the services need to consider including recreational equipment kits in the deployment equipment for each unit and the establishment of a cadre of recreation experts (perhaps reservists) who could deploy with units and quickly establish activities to keep the troops in a positive frame of mind. The Air Force and Marine Corps are to be commended for having included morale, welfare and recreational personnel in the unit structure that deployed.

The Army and Air Force Exchange Service accomplished the herculean task of establishing fairly complete military exchanges at large bases and small, sometimes mobile retail outlets throughout the theater of operation. Most items needed in theater were generally in stock, after initial shortages, and customer satisfaction was high. The downsizing and ultimate closure of exchange facilities is proceeding according to an effective plan.

OTHER PERSONNEL ISSUES

One of the surprises of the trip was the extent to which service members were uninformed or misinformed about the benefits for which they would be eligible by virtue of their service in the Persian Gulf. For instance, a widely held belief was that the Saudi Arabian government had offered every American service member a bonus of $10,000 for having served during the conflict but that the United States had declined the offer. This rumor was compounded by the rumor that the same offer had been extended to British and French troops, only those governments had let their troops take the money.

There was widespread ignorance about virtually all of the Desert Shield and Desert Storm legislation passed recently by Congress. Many soldiers with whom we spoke were simply unaware of any legislative action on their behalf, including such important matters as increases in combat pay and G.I. bill benefits. Others were misinformed. Several pilots with whom we spoke asked about a tax exemption for so much of their monthly salary as exceeds $500 (the first $500 is exempt under current law). Although bills to this effect have been introduced, none has passed the Congress. The bottom line here is that the Department of Defense must do a better job of disseminating accurate information the benefits available to our service men and women.

THE SITUATION IN IRAQ

Based on the delegation's visit to the Safwan refugee camp in Southern Iraq, it is apparent that the lives of many Iraqis have not significantly improved since the victory of the coalition forces. Some 25,000-30,000 people live in the Safwan camp, relying on the United States and the Red Crescent for food handouts every three days. Judging by the comments of the refugees, many would fear for their lives if they returned to their homes in Iraq. The two open issues that came from our visit were how fast the United Nations forces will be in place so that U.S. troops guarding the camp may go home and whether the United Nations forces should have a role solely as observers. It seems clear that the American forces protecting the camp do more than observe. They are a legitimate deterrent to the encroachments of the Iraqi military, and the delegation was left with the impression that the lives of the refugees would not be guaranteed by the presence of a force whose only purpose was to observe what was going on. In the longer run, some political solution will have to evolve before many of the refugees will feel free to leave the camp or safe from Iraqi police in the camp after U.S. troops withdraw.

THE SITUATION IN KUWAIT

In the 50 days since the liberation of Kuwait, the government has begun the daunting task of rebuilding the country. Much needs to be done. Without electricity, water and telephones, most of the country's infrastructure will have to be replaced. American civil affairs units, known as Task Force Freedom and composed largely of members of the reserves, are helping to do the job. Current estimates are that the cost of restoration will ultimately be about $25-30 billion. About $1.5 billion has been spent so far on quelling the oil fires. Only 51 of the wells have been capped, less than ten percent of those either burning or gushing. In general, most of the American effort is going toward the restoration of water, power, transportation, communications, and other vital services.

The Crown Prince reiterated his country's gratitude to the United States for freeing his country. He also confirmed an earlier announcement that the Kuwaiti government will be holding elections in the future, and the right of women to vote may be considered. Expanded citizenship eligibility may also be forthcoming. The prince stated the government's view that a continued American military presence in Kuwait is desirable as long as Saddam Hussein remains in power. So far, the Kuwaiti government has promised to contribute $18.5 billion to the Defense Cooperation Account to pay for the costs of the Persian Gulf war, and $8.5 billion has been paid. The Kuwaiti government is paying for the restoration of the country of Kuwait entirely.

American companies have been awarded $558 million in contracts for this effort, 66% of the total value of all contracts awarded. On balance, Kuwait seems to be on track in its rebuilding effort, but the devastation is such that a return to the country's former state is years away.

CONCLUSION

The complexion of the situation in the part of the Middle East we saw is changing. The fully functioning fighting force of a few months ago is shrinking, and the military emphasis is clearly on the redeployment home and positioning some equipment for use in future exercises. Significant problems in the wise use of available active and reserve component manpower still exist, but the services seem to be making an effort to reach a satisfactory accommodation. American humanitarian aid to Iraqi refugees is providing a stable platform from which some political solution to this region's conflicts may emerge, but an indefinite continuation of the status quo should be avoided. Kuwait is on the road to recovery. A meaningful shift toward a more democratic form of government could be just over the horizon.

The members of the delegation wish to thank the Speaker and the Minority Leader for the opportunity to take this most interesting and informative trip. The members also wish to recognize the men and women of our armed services whose extraordinary cooperation and assistance made our visit possible and meaningful.

April 26, 1991

The Honorable George Bush
The President
The United States
The White House
Washington, D.C. 20500

Dear Mr. President:

Watching the unjustified attacks on your Chief of Staff and having been in that bull's-eye, it occurred to me how history repeats itself. Certain partisan elements in the press and the usual gang of defeatists are profoundly unhappy at our victory in the Gulf and your outstanding leadership of the Presidency. They hope to get at you by getting at your Chief of Staff and National Security Advisor, who should and must be entitled to government supported travel under long-standing reimbursement provisions.

These mini-firestorms have as their real purpose an over-reaction in the Executive Branch so that the Presidency itself is harmed. I think Dick Cheney had it about right in Wednesday's interview. You may wish to consider asking him to review current procedures and report to you since the Secretary of Defense is the custodian of our air assets and accountable for their use. I am confident Dick will be sensitive to avoiding unnecessarily restrictive new regulations which will become part of the permanent landscape.

You can be sure that as we get into the baseball season, a few more foul balls will be headed your way.

Best wishes.

Respectfully yours,

4-27-91 BUSH'S Remarks To The White House Correspondent's Association
Washington Hilton

Bush confined his very brief remarks to joking with ~~those~~ those attending the association's 77th annual dinner. He did note that the attention ~~had been focused on the dinner~~ of those attending the dinner was focused on Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Colin Powell and Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf.

Among his jokes:

He said he missed going to supermarkets where he could read tabloids in the checkout lines. "It's not all that bad, I can still read the New York Times."

The other - He said Barbara Bush hated Saddam Hussein. "First she wanted to hang him. Now she wants to take him sledding."
