DEPARTMENT OF STATE
WASHINGTON

April 30, 1991

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~
DECL: OADR

MEMORANDUM FOR: THE PRESIDENT

FROM: Lawrence S. Eagleburger, Acting

SUBJECT: Official Working Visit of Finnish President
Mauno Koivisto

I. SETTING

- o Reacting to rapid change in East-West relations, the Finnish public and foreign policy elite have begun to reassess Finland's place in post-Cold War Europe.
- o Wary of reactionary forces in the USSR, Koivisto has ensured that official GOF policy remains cautious on relations with the Soviets. (He plans to visit Moscow in June.)
 - Last fall Koivisto approved reinterpretation of Finland's postwar treaty obligations to emphasize Finnish sovereignty, but only after first informing Gorbachev and ensuring that nonaggression commitments to the Soviet Union would clearly remain intact.
 - Trade and business ties with the Soviet Union have fallen to an all-time low. The longstanding bilateral barter agreement has been terminated and Soviet enterprises can no longer obtain foreign exchange.
 - Koivisto has urged moderation on Baltic leaders, particularly Landsbergis, and stressed respect for CSCE obligations. He would like the Balts and Moscow to negotiate step by step on practical issues.
- o There is growing public speculation about EC membership in Finland. However, Koivisto has warned that such a move would be premature; Finland should concentrate on getting the most from an EC-EFTA agreement.

- Development of EC security cooperation would be a major barrier to any Finnish application, although Finnish officials think the current level of EC political consultation would be acceptable.
- Polls show solid public support for EC membership if Sweden applies first. As Finland is orienting its attention toward the EC, there is some shift of focus away from ties to us.
- Bilateral trade and economic issues will be separately discussed during this visit by Koivisto and Finnish officials with Secretary Mosbacher, Chairman Greenspan, and U.S. Trade Representative Hills.
- o An opportunity for strengthening the bilateral relationship is the possible sale of our fighter aircraft.
 - Finland's modern and professional military, particularly the Air Force, plays a stabilizing defense role in the North.
 - Our own national interest is served by a strong Finnish air defense against the Soviet Union, as well as the closer bilateral military ties such a sale would produce.
 - The F-16 and F-18 are competing with the French Mirage 2000 and Swedish Gripen for a sale of up to 67 aircraft, worth up to $3 billion.
- o Overall bilateral relations are excellent. As UNSC member until January and since then, the GOF has supported us fully on Gulf issues.
 - Finland is contributing seven observers to the UN force, as well as $26 million for humanitarian assistance and a mobile field hospital to be located near southern Iraq. Commitment of troops outside a UN command is not politically possible.
- o Elections on March 17 replaced a Social Democrat-Conservative government with a new Center-Conservative grouping.
 - No significant changes in foreign policy will result, however. Koivisto's broad foreign policy lines will continue at least until his term ends in 1994.

II. OBJECTIVES:

- o Encourage Koivisto's efforts to move the Baltics and Soviets toward negotiation on practical issues.
- o Express U.S. support for Finland's continued orientation toward Western economic and political institutions.
- o Make clear the benefits of a Finnish decision to buy U.S. fighter aircraft, as part of U.S. economic/technological cooperation that will keep Finland's military strong and industry competitive.

III. STRATEGY:

- o Welcome Koivisto on his first official visit since 1983 and thank him for Finland's superb international cooperation with us during his tenure as President.
- o Ask for his views on Soviet internal difficulties and relations with the Baltics, sharing with him your analysis and focusing on areas of common ground.
- o Outline your thinking on European architecture topics such as the role of NATO, CSCE, and importance of CFE to our relationship with the Soviet Union; use the discussion to single out common approaches to development of European security institutions.
- o Explore Koivisto's attitude toward EC expansion, and highlight common interests.
- o Mention the military, economic, and political advantages of buying U.S. fighter aircraft. (Koivisto will remain above the detailed selection process, but his favorable political assessment is vital.)
- o Express appreciation for Finnish peacekeeping forces and humanitarian aid in the Gulf, as well as effective control of technology transfer.

THE WHITE HOUSE
Tuesday, May 7, 1991

1:30 PM
Select Group of House Members on Fast Track

- I want to thank all of you for coming down today to talk about extension of fast track negotiating authority. I'm firmly committed on this issue and for good reason.
- Exports of U.S. goods have fueled our economic growth in recent years. We need fast track negotiating authority so we can get trade agreements that will open markets, keep our exports strong, create jobs, and sustain our leadership in the world economy.
- A vote for extending fast track is not a vote on an actual agreement. It is a vote on a procedure that will allow us to get the best agreement possible for ultimate submission to you in Congress.

- You in Congress will have the final say. And you have my personal assurance that the Administration will work closely with you throughout the process of negotiating and implementing trade agreements.
- Last week, each of you received our blueprint for action which lays out in detail our approach to concerns about negotiations with Mexico raised by Members of Congress on labor issues, the environment, and other critical areas.

- This plan of action was drawn up after extensive discussions with Members of Congress and representatives of the various affected segments of our economy. I think you will find that, while we have not done everything that every group wants, we have been responsive to all concerns.
- I hope you have had a chance to look at the action plan and if you have any questions, Jules (Katz) or I will be happy to answer them.
- Mainly, I want to hear from you. This is an important issue for us, both economically and in terms of our foreign policy. I'd like to have your support.

POINTS TO BE MADE
TELEPHONE CALL TO PRESIDENT TURGUT OZAL

FYI: President Ozal is in Christchurch, New Zealand where he is paying a state visit and will leave for Australia in a few hours.

Ozal also intends to visit the U.S. on a private visit during the third week of May. He will stay only in New York where he will make several speeches and meet with business leaders.

Ozal has no plans to come to Washington.

SITUATION IN NORTHERN IRAQ

- ✓ Turgut, I want you to know we continue to appreciate very much the excellent cooperation with your officials on the Kurdish refugee situation.
- ✓ Together with our allies, Turkey and the U.S. have done a very fine job during the past month.
- We have stabilized the refugee situation and the Kurds are beginning to come down from the mountains.
- It will take some time to finish the job but I believe we will get there.
- We continue to focus our efforts on creating a secure environment in northern Iraq for the refugees.
- If Raised: We have made no decision as yet on entering the Dhohuk area. Regardless, we want to get the people out of the mountains and for the UN to take over responsibilities for their relief and security.
- I will see the UN Secretary General here on Thursday.
- I will urge him to have the UN take on a greater role in carrying on the relief operations and providing for their security. That remains our goal so that allied forces can leave.

-- I will also let the UNSYG know that we fully support his efforts to create a framework for negotiations on Cyprus.

-- I will be seeing President Vassiliou on May 28 and hope to do what I can to spur movement toward negotiations.

-- I would appreciate anything you can do to impress upon Mr. Denktash the need for movement on the UNSYG's plan.

MEMORANDUM FOR BRENT SCOWCROFT

THROUGH: RICHARD N. HAASS

FROM: C. DAVID WELCH

SUBJECT: Mubarak Telephone Call

Attached at Tab A are points for a proposed telephone call from President Mubarak of Egypt who would like to convey his wishes for a speedy recovery to the President. We are attempting to work out a time for the call with the Egyptians; these points are for the contingency. The President may want to take this occasion to tell him that he is sending Secretary Baker back to the Middle East to push the peace process.

- Hosni, I am pleased to tell you that I am back at work.
I'm feeling fine.
- I also want to tell you that I will be sending Jim Baker back to the region to push the peace process. You've been very helpful (sending a message to Shamir; Osama el-Baz to Damascus); now's the time to pitch in with extra effort to bring Syria in, keep out the PLO, and convince Israel the Arabs are serious about negotiations.

HEART EPISODE WASN'T BUSH'S FIRST

President Bush apparently had weathered at least two earlier bouts with the heart problem that hospitalized him Saturday.

Barbara Bush confirmed one episode Monday, and the President's personal physician, Dr. Burton Lee, said both were investigated without finding the cause....

Dr. Lee and consulting cardiologist Dr. Allan Ross of George Washington University said it was possible the erratic heartbeat starved the President's blood supply for weeks but he felt weak only when he ran....

Puzzled White House medics responded after Bush complained of sudden weakness during jogs at the Naval Observatory on Feb. 4 and at Fort McNair on April 25, but Bush's heartbeat was not erratic when they examined him, Dr. Lee said.

"By the time I got to him, he was completely normal and he felt normal. And it was a hot day and it was the beginning of the season," Lee said of the episode on April 25.....

From the start, White House spokesmen denied anything similar had occurred before.

(Paul Bedard & Frank Murray, Washington Times, A1)

Bush Back To Work; Heartbeat Reported Normal

President Bush returned to a full schedule of work at the White House Monday after doctors determined his heartbeat could be maintained at normal levels with monitoring and medication.

White House press secretary Fitzwater said late Monday that Bush's heartbeat, still irregular when he was released from the hospital, had returned to normal shortly after his White House arrival and remained normal throughout the day. "He told everyone he saw he feels fine, and there was no stopping him today," Fitzwater said. Bush went through his normal schedule of meetings and events.

Grinning broadly, Bush arrived at the door of the Oval Office at about 9:20 a.m. to applause from about 150 White House aides who stood in a light drizzle in the Rose Garden. "All right, back to work," he joked. "Back to work." A series of meetings were opened briefly to reporters and cameras so the President could be seen engaging in the business of government. He appeared slightly tired, but in good spirits.

The medical team that treated Bush...said in a briefing for reporters that he would curtail his exercise regimen for a week while the drugs he is taking are calibrated. But otherwise, they said, his condition would have no affect on his health or ability to perform his job. (Ann Devroy & John Yang, Washington Post, A1)

Bush Returns To Work, Had Complained Of Fatigue Before

President Bush, looking a bit tired but otherwise fine, worked a full day Monday after his release from Bethesda Naval Medical Center....

Doctors said it is possible that Bush had been suffering from an irregular heartbeat before the weekend incident that led to his treatment....

"We have lots to be grateful for," Bush told visitors at a White House reception. "I really do feel wonderfully well, so we're very lucky. I'm glad to be here in more ways than one."

During a briefing at the hospital Monday, Bush's personal physician, Dr. Burton Lee, said Bush had complained of fatigue during exercise in the last couple of weeks but that he could find nothing wrong with the President. "He has said to me in the last couple of weeks, 'gee-whiz, maybe I'm getting older.' But at that time, there was nothing there. And I'm getting older, so I sort of sympathized with him," Lee said.... "We didn't do any tests."
(Steve Holland, Reuter)

Prognosis For President Concerns Some Doctors

Doctors found cause for elation and concern Monday as President Bush's heartbeat finally settled into a normal pattern after two long episodes of atrial fibrillation.

The fact that drugs alone could produce and maintain normal rhythm for a number of hours makes it unlikely that the President will need an electrical shock to restart his heart. But the fact that the President's irregular heart rhythm was unusually resistant to medicines raises the odds that the rhythm will recur and that he will need drug therapy for months, maybe longer.

"It still appears to be a benign condition, but the rhythm is more resistant than one would like," said Dr. Valentin Fuster, chief of cardiology at Mount Sinai Medical Center in New York, who is unconnected to the President's case. "That means this is probably not a freak one-time incident and the President may have a predisposition to the rhythm."

(Elizabeth Rosenthal, New York Times, B10)

Bush Image Strictly Business For 1st Day Back On The Job

No fun, no games.

For President Bush, the image for the first day back from the hospital was that of a chief executive hard at work doing the nation's business and not fooling around with his heart.

"I feel alright. I've just got to get over and get back to work," Bush told reporters as he left Bethesda Naval Medical Center....

Aides insisted they were making no effort to alter Bush's schedule to heighten the image of a vigorous President because with Bush they do not need to. "This President is visible and accessible," said one aide. "You don't need to take any extra steps."...

On Monday the desired image was clear. "It's business as usual," said David Beckwith, Vice President Quayle's press secretary. "It's business as usual," said a second White House official.
(David Lauter, Los Angeles Times, A20)

President's Health

President Bush's doctors told the 66-year-old chief executive Monday to temporarily suspend vigorous exercise, but it appeared unlikely that Bush's bout with an irregular heartbeat would bring major changes in his work-hard, play-hard lifestyle. Meanwhile, one of the President's Yale classmates, Sen. Chafee, also had some advice for Bush: Act your age. "I personally have been alarmed at the pace the President keeps," Chafee told a group of reporters. "He's up early, he's always on the go. My father always used to say, 'Act your age,' and I think that he has a pretty good point there." (Gaylord Shaw, Newsday)

POLL: CONCERNS ABOUT QUAYLE APPEAR TO RISE

President Bush's heart problems, viewed as relatively minor by most Americans, appear to have rekindled public concerns about the qualifications and competence of Vice President Quayle, according to a new ABC News/Washington Post poll. The survey found that 57 percent of those interviewed Sunday said Quayle was not qualified to be President, up from 49 percent in a post survey conducted in February. The proportion of those who said it was a mistake for Bush to have selected Quayle as his running mate also increased from 39 percent in February to 50 percent in the latest poll. And a 54 percent majority now say that Bush should dump Quayle from the ticket in 1992....

Still, six out of 10 persons in the latest poll continue to be unconcerned with Quayle as Vice President and nearly as many - 56 percent -- said they approve of the job Quayle is doing as Vice President. Those numbers suggest that "basically people aren't pretending that they are agonizing over the whole question," said Everett Ladd, professor of political science at the University of Connecticut and director of the Roper Center for Public Opinion Research there. (Richard Morin, Washington Post, A17)

POLL: 51% Say Drop Quayle

Vice President Quayle would be dumped from the 1992 Republican ticket by 51% of those responding in a USA Today poll Monday evening. But they split almost evenly on whether he is qualified to become President, if needed; 43% say he is, 46% say not.... Only 38% would keep Quayle as Bush's running mate in '92. Even among Republicans, 45% suggest Bush look elsewhere. Among possible contenders...., Secretary Baker does best, with 54% rating him "qualified." If Quayle is on the ticket, 27% say the Quayle issue would be "very important" to their vote; 34% call it "somewhat important." (Steve Davis, USA Today, 1A)

Bush Declares Full Support For Quayle

President Bush on Monday proclaimed his "full support" for Vice President Quayle after Bush's hospitalization refocused attention on the question of Quayle's competence for the presidency....

White House officials dismissed renewed talk of public reservations about Quayle.

"No one here is doing anything other than being thankful that Dan Quayle is the Vice President," said Ron Kaufman, head of the White House political office.... "It's a passing fancy," he said of the talk that Bush might reconsider keeping Quayle on the 1992 ticket. "By six months from now everyone will have forgotten about it."...

But others, commenting only on condition of anonymity, worried aloud that the focus on Quayle could be damaging at a time when he had been sailing along relatively free of negative publicity and establishing himself as a workmanlike and loyal vice president.

"It's not good for him," aid one Administration official. But the official added that Quayle's image problem..."is sort of always there. It's never going to go away, in the short term. It's something that you have to live with."...

One Administration official said Quayle would "demonstrate his competence over the long haul."

But a Republican strategist, looking at the political ramifications, said, "It is not helpful to the Republicans to have the issue resurface with this magnitude."

On the other hand, a conservative Quayle backer, Gary Bauer of the Family Research Council, raised the possibility that "a lot of media attention to this could end up backfiring to the Vice President's benefit." He said he had run across an attitude of public exasperation, and a give-the-guy-a-chance feeling toward the negative stories about Quayle. (Rita Beamish, AP)

Bush's Condition Sets Off Flutters Of Worry About Quayle

President Bush strongly endorsed Vice President Quayle on Monday as Bush's heart condition set off flutters of worry among Republicans about Quayle's suitability for his job.

"He has my full support, always had. And he's doing a first-class job," Bush praised Quayle to reporters....

Republican strategists and other political analysts agreed that Bush was unlikely to dump Quayle despite renewed attention to his poor public image. But some suggested that Bush's health was likely to aggravate internal party divisions that might not have surfaced until the 1996 presidential campaign....

Todd Domke, a Republican consultant in Boston, said concern over igniting internal rivalry too early would be one reason that Bush is likely to keep Quayle on for the 1992 campaign. "Bush would not want to kick off 1996 presidential internal Republican conflicts by picking someone who would be considered a threat to one side of the party or the other," Domke said.

Bush's Hospitalization Puts Spotlight On Quayle Before He's Ready

For Dan Quayle, President Bush's sudden hospitalization this weekend may have undone a carefully orchestrated plan to overcome the Vice President's lingering image problems....

"This is the worst thing that could have happened to Quayle at the worst possible moment," Democratic consultant Raymond Strother said. "This is the time, before the conventions, when you can still dump a guy. What Bush has now is time to work his way out of Quayle."...

"This was a settled issue," prominent Democrat Robert Shrum said. "Bush had put it off the table. [Quayle] had looked and acted like a guy who was 55 years old. I think this reopens all of it." (Carl Cannon, Knight-Ridder)

Quayle Factor A Topic Of Conversation At Democrats' Parley

CLEVELAND -- Middle-of-the-road Democrats who gathered Monday to seek a new party identity instead found a political opportunity in the spotlight that suddenly has been cast on Vice President Quayle....

"I think (Bush) made it very clear that he was not interested in the line of succession should anything happen to him," said Gov. Wilder....

Sen. Nunn said Bush's heart irregularity would elevate Quayle and the Vice President's job in people's minds. "Dan Quayle, unfortunately, came in with a lot of jokes. It's very hard to rise above that as vice president," Nunn said. But Nunn said he believed that Quayle would "be able to handle it" if thrust into the President's job....

Paul Tsongas predicted that the President's heart ailment could prompt more Democrats to join the race. "I suspect that a lot of (Democrats') discussions in the mirror with themselves were pretty interesting," Tsongas said. But he warned against "Quayle-bashing," saying that it would distract from the Democratic Party's effort to reshape itself for the next presidential election.

Concerns About Quayle's Competence Dominate World Press Reports

PARIS -- From Madrid to Moscow, press reports Monday about the hospitalization of President Bush focused on concerns that his vice president, Dan Quayle, would not be a capable successor....

Liberation, a Paris daily, said an ascension to the presidency by Quayle "would make all of America and the rest of the world very nervous."

"The possibility of a Quayle presidency sends a chill running through the United States," said a report from Spain's left-of-center El Pais. "In more than two years as vice president (he) has been unable to convince the country he could successfully carry out the presidency."

There was little official reaction to Bush's condition, beyond get-well messages sent from various world leaders, including Prime Minister Major and President Mitterrand. (David Crary, AP)

European Press Reports Nervousness About Quayle

LONDON -- The possibility that Vice President Quayle might have been left in control of the U.S. because of President Bush's heart problems brought harsh comments Monday from a number of newspapers in Europe.

In Britain, the liberal Guardian said: "You cannot, for a second, talk of a new world order and pretend that J. Danforth Quayle is the man most fitted to inherit it."

The Daily Mail, a tabloid which supports the Conservative Party government, said the reminder which the Bush health scare had provided that "the synthetic and inadequate Danforth Quayle remains only a heartbeat away from the most powerful job on earth is enough to give even America's staunchest allies the vapours.... [Bush] must pick himself a more credible vice presidential running mate."

In Norway, the daily Dagbaldet said Bush's heart problem eroded Quayle's chances of running for re-election as vice president in 1992. It said the thought that Quayle might take over as president "could make Americans vote for the Democrats...."

The influential daily Le Monde described Quayle as "a man who, rightly or wrongly, inspires more mockery than confidence, and the choice of whom in 1988 was seen as a blunder, or at least as a strange caprice of Mr. Bush." (Reuter)

DEMOCRATS OFFER PLAN TO SHIFT TAXES

Four veteran Democratic members of Congress Monday proposed cutting $20 billion in taxes for middle-class families and paying for it with a tax hike of the same size on the richest 6 million Americans. "This proposal would provide an enormous amount of tax relief to working families with children," said Sen. Gore....

There was no reaction to the bill Monday from either the Treasury Department or the OMB.... The proposal received a warmer reception -- if few outright commitments of support -- from Democratic congressional leaders. Speaker Foley called it an "interesting...efficient" way to provide middle class tax relief. Sen. Mitchell and Rep. Gephardt said they supported the concept, and Gephardt issued a statement "applaud(ing)" the bill itself.

Sen. Bentsen said he would like to provide tax relief for the middle class, but noted that Administration opposition will make it "very difficult to enact something like this."

Rep. Rostenkowski issued no statement, but Rep. Downey said the chairman had "smiled knowingly" when Downey outlined the bill to him.

Congressional Democrats Seek Tax Relief For Middle-Class And Lower-Income Working Families By Boosting Taxes On The Wealthy

Sen. Gore and three House Democrats Monday unveiled a legislative package aimed at bringing tax relief to middle- and lower-income working families by raising the top tax rate to 35 percent and slapping the wealthy with an 11 percent surtax....

"We drew a line in the sand in Saudi Arabia," said Sen. Gore. "We believe it's time now to draw a line down Main Street and show American families that we're on their side."... He conceded, however, that President Bush "probably would balk at the 35 percent rate."... He...maintained his leadership role on the bill had nothing to do with presidential ambitions. BUSH URGES CONGRESS TO SUPPORT 'BROAD-BASED' BANK-REFORM PROPOSAL

President Bush urged congressional leaders Monday to support the Administration's proposal to completely overhaul the nation's banking industry, saying "the time has come to address fundamental problems of our banking system."...

Bush said in letters to House Banking Committee chairman Gonzalez and to Sen. Garn that the Administration "stands ready to work with you in every stage of the process." (UPI)

'TOO-BIG-TO-FAIL' SEEN AS MAJOR ISSUE
IN U.S. HOUSE BANK-FUND ACTION

The biggest controversy likely to emerge Tuesday in Congress' opening effort to shore up the bank deposit insurance fund is how far to pare back the "too-big-too-fail" doctrine.

A House banking subcommittee is acting on a bill to provide the FDIC with authority to borrow up to $25 billion to cover losses from the resolution of failed banks....

Banking industry officials and congressional aides said attempts would be made to at least soften if not eliminate Rep. Gonzalez's "too-big-too-fail" restrictions.

BANK INSURANCE FUND INSOLVENT, SURVEY SAYS

NEW YORK -- The nation's bank insurance fund has been in "de facto" insolvency since Dec. 31, a survey of the U.S. banking industry said Monday.

"Veribanc's independent study of year-end data for the nation's 12,795 commercial banks and saving banks confirms the GAO's findings that the bank insurance fund is de facto insolvent," said Veribanc, an independent research firm based in Wakefield, Mass. The fund's insolvency "ranges between $3.6 billion and $7.6 billion when the financial difficulties of banks with assets exceeding $1 billion are considered," Veribanc said.

DEMOCRATS ARGUE OVER QUOTA WORDING

CLEVELAND -- Moderate Democrats skirted a potentially divisive fight over racial quotas here at a conference designed to reshape the party's image to attract middle-class voters and win back the White House....

At issue was a paragraph that included the following language: "We affirm the Democratic Party's historic commitment to secure civil, equal and human rights. We oppose discrimination of any kind -- including quotas."

Tony May, executive director the Pennsylvania Democratic Party, urged the delegates to wipe out the phrase "including quotas," saying it "plays into the hands of the Republicans." He and others accused the Republicans of playing politics with civil rights and urged the Democrats not to mimic them.

"Whether we like it or not, quotas will be an issue in the next presidential campaign," Rep. Slattery responded. "When issues are made, whether we like them or not, whether they're phony or not, the issues cannot be left on the table. We should not be afraid to say we are opposed to a quota system."

(Dan Balz & David Broder, Washington Post, A3)

Democratic Dispute On Racial Quotas Flares As Would-Be Presidential Candidates Begin To Test Party Reaction

CLEVELAND -- Deep Democratic divisions on racial quotas and free trade with Mexico Monday dominated the opening day of a convention designed to provide the party's potential presidential candidates with both a showcase and a new, more-moderate platform for 1992....

A compromise offered by Sen. Breaux, [who told Democratic delegates, "We don't want to give the President and the Republican Party a hammer to beat Democrats over the head with,"] left anti-quotas language intact, but added "that women and men who suffer the burden and injustice of discrimination be afforded the legal means and economic opportunity to right those wrongs."

No similar compromise was in sight Monday night on [free-trade].... Everywhere they turned in this heavily unionized city, Democrats encountered union-inspired opposition to Bush's request for "fast-track" authority.... "If it is fast-track without proper provisions it becomes free trade, but not fair trade," Jesse Jackson said, decrying "a shifting of jobs across the border and a shift of ownership that exploits workers on both sides."

Other complaints about "fast-track" were aired in regional meetings of delegates Monday night. But, after what one official called "a vigorous debate," efforts to water down support for a trade agreement were defeated by "a solid margin," making any further amendments on Tuesday unlikely. One loud voice in favor of the agreement Monday was Paul Tsongas. (George Condon, Copley)

Centrist Democrats Endorse Several Republican Policies

CLEVELAND -- Any doubts about the Democratic Leadership Council's stand on domestic issues was resolved Monday in speeches and a resolution espousing a conservative message that included several Republican themes.

The "New Choice" resolution was unveiled at the group's convention here.... It contained such Republican ideas as tenant ownership of public housing and support for the trade agreement with Mexico. In addition, Gov. Clinton embraced President Bush's plan to expand choice in public education, and Gov. Wilder called for a $25 billion yearly cut in the federal budget....

Clinton said there is a need to invest in people on welfare, but then added: "We should demand that everybody who can go to work do it. For work is the best social program this country ever devised."

'DIVERSITY STANDARDS' ON CAMPUS

Secretary Alexander last month questioned the practice of the accrediting body for the mid-Atlantic states of requiring colleges to diversify -- by race and sex -- their student bodies, faculties and trusteeMonday, a panel that advises Alexander on college accreditation issues had no time to talk or hear about the controversial issue of cultural diversity, as defined by another private group that accredits college journalism programs....

Monday, Robert Phillips, chairman of the National Advisory Committee on Accreditation and Institutional Eligibility, said the panel did not want to hear about a similar diversity standard adopted by the Accrediting Council for Education in Journalism and Mass Communications. Twice he stopped John Lavine, the council's president, from turning to the subject. "Any comments along these lines will be unproductive," Phillips said.... Etta Fielek, a department spokeswoman, said the journalism council's "diversity standard has never been raised to the attention of anybody in the department."

Educators Speak Up For Accreditors' Demand For Faculty Diversity

Concern is growing within academic circles over Secretary Alexander's decision to challenge policies requiring recruitment of women and minorities on college campuses.

A board that accredits journalism programs said it is prepared to take the issue to court if the Education Department questions the board's requirement that participating colleges and universities have diverse student bodies and faculties.

Alexander has withheld renewing the recognition of another accrediting panel, the Middle States Association of Colleges and Universities, after the association warned a seminary that it must put a woman on its governing board of ordained ministers, even though the denomination has no female ministers....

The Administration's policies are causing concern on campuses around the country. At a meeting before an Education Department panel Monday, Northwestern University professor John Lavine, president of the Accrediting Council on Education in Journalism and Mass Communications, criticized the Administration and voiced support for Middle States' diversity policy.

UTILITIES GIVEN UP TO 21 YEARS TO REMOVE LEAD WATER

The EPA has decided to give nation's largest public utilities up to 21 years to remove dangerous levels of lead from household drinking water. In a regulation scheduled for release today, the EPA will prescribe a regimen of chemicals and water-service line replacements to achieve a level of public health protection that Congress had ordered met by last January.

While EPA officials predicted major reductions of lead far earlier than the new deadline, public health experts criticized the lengthy compliance schedule. "This (problem) requires a greater sense of urgency than is shown by the regulation," said Dr. John Graef, chief of the Lead and Toxicology Clinic at Children's Hospital in Boston. ARMS-PLANT FIRMS HID COST OVERRUNS BY SHIFTING FUNDS

The companies that operate the Savannah River nuclear weapons plant in South Carolina hid huge cost overruns by unlawfully transferring tens of millions of dollars in and out of a $400 million account meant for new construction, the Energy Department's Inspector General reported.

The transfer of funds..."resulted in budgetary laws and Department of Energy laws being circumvented," said the report, which was available to the public March 14 but not distributed.

ALLIES PLAN MAJOR EFFORT TO GET REFUGEES TO IRAQ

ZAKHU -- Allied commanders, racing against a deadline imposed by the increasingly hot weather, Monday announced a massive operation to bring more than 200,000 Kurdish refugees home to northern Iraq from the Turkish mountains by the end of the month.

Allied forces announced they had pushed another 25 miles east, beyond the town of Suriya, further expanding the security zone of Iraqi territory they hold -- a move that they hope will entice more refugees back. But the senior allied commander said coalition forces have not received authorization to enter and take control of Dahuk. Unless that city is made safe for them, allied commanders concede, many of the refugees could refuse to budge from Turkey. (Glenn Frankel, Washington Post, A23)

IRAQ, CITING NEED TO REBUILD, ASKS U.N. FOR REPRIEVE ON REPARATIONS

U.N. -- In a letter to the Secretary-General, Iraq has asked for a five-year delay on paying war reparations so that it can focus on rebuilding its shattered economy....

Asked about the letter today, U.S. Representative Pickering said the Security Council was not likely to ease that part of the cease-fire agreement to accommodate Iraq. "The compensation fund will be set up and functioning before we take the sanctions off Iraqi oil exports," he said. (Frank Priol, New York Times, A17)

CHENEY URGES ARAB-U.S. DEFENSE LINKS

RIYADH -- Secretary Cheney Monday opened efforts to negotiate sweeping reforms in U.S.-Arab military relations that would include permanently stationing weaponry and deploying large numbers of American troops during rotating exercises in the region.

Cheney's proposals, which will be presented to the leaders of six Arab nations, include prepositioning tanks and other equipment on the Arabian Peninsula, more aggressive U.S. training of Arab military forces and frequent air, ground and sea exercises in the region.

At the same time, Cheney also plans to discuss requests "on a case-by-case basis" from some of the Arab nations for increasing American arms sales in the region. "Clearly, the old system didn't work," Cheney told reporters. (Molly Moore, Washington Post, A25)

ARAB GULF STATES MAY EASE TRADE BOYCOTT OF ISRAEL

JERUSALEM -- Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and other Arab states are weighing a partial relaxation of the economic boycott they have maintained against Israel since its foundation, according to Israeli officials and Western diplomats.

The move, although expected to be limited in scope, would be the first concrete response by Gulf leaders to appeals by the U.S. for confidence-building steps to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict.... BAKER TO RESUME MISSION IN MIDEAST

Secretary Baker announced Monday that he would return to the Middle East this week because, with another diplomatic push, it might be possible to get the Arabs and Israelis to agree to attend a peace conference.

In keeping with his secretive approach, Baker declined to elaborate on why he believes his fourth swing through the Middle East in two months might overcome obstacles to a peace conference. Other Administration officials, however, insist that Baker has been making slow, steady progress in narrowing the differences between the two sides -- more than he has disclosed in public.

Baker is said to believe that with one more trip he might be able to bridge the remaining differences or make unmistakably clear which party...is the obstacle.

PRESIDENT'S HEALTH

ABC's Peter Jennings: Thirty-nine hours after he was taken to Bethesda Naval Hospital for treatment of that irregular heartbeat, Mr. Bush went home to the White House. This afternoon the President's doctors say his heartbeat is steady, his mood cheerful. Still, his illness was a jolt to millions of Americans, a reminder that the President is mortal and that his Vice President is not the invisible man.

ABC's Brit Hume: In the Oval Office this afternoon it looked like business as usual, George Bush meeting with Eduard Shevardnadze. But Shevardnadze is no longer the Soviet Foreign minister, and in a different sense, George Bush is no longer what he was, either. This most vigorous of presidents is now a heart patient, required for a time anyway, to wear an intravenous device for continual blood sampling. The treatment, though, seemed to be working.

(Reporter in the Oval Office: "Is your heartbeat back to normal, Mr. President?

President Bush: "Yeah."

Reporter: "How does the medication feel?

President Bush: "Don't feel it. Feel good."

Reporter: "Did you have this shortness of breath problem before?

President Bush: "Not that I've noticed. Talk to my doctor, will you? I'm just glad to be here.")

Until this morning there was some question whether he would be here and at his desk this soon. But after his heartbeat stabilized for a time overnight, doctors at Bethesda Naval Hospital decided against jolting the heart with electricity and sent him home to his obvious relief.

(President Bush leaving the hospital: "I feel all right. I've got to get over and get back to work, keep a little monitor going here.")

[TV COVERAGE of White House staffers cheering his arrival.]

Back at the White House he was met with cheers from staff happy to see him heading straight back to the Oval Office. Mr. Bush suggested he would soon also be back to his familiar whirlwind pace.

(President Bush: "I'm gonna work back into it, but I think it's okay."

Reporters: "What about jogging?

President Bush: "Yeah, we can start again. He said today if I want to, but I'm not sure I feel up to it yet.")

Late today, the White House was pleased to announce that the intravenous device had been removed from the President's arm. The message seemed clear: The President is okay and things are back to normal. But in political terms, the President's health is now an issue, and in that sense things can never be quite the same here again.

Jennings: White House physician Dr. Burton Lee said this morning the President is not a guy who likes to lie around his room. Dr. Lee said, however, the decision to send him home was a medical one. What led to it and what next?

ABC's George Strait reports that it was just before dawn when doctors at Bethesda Naval Hospital made the decision not to shock the President's heart back into normal rhythm. It was a calculated risk. Doctors decided to give the medications more time to work and let Mr. Bush go home.

(Dr. Bruce Lloyd, Bethesda Naval Hospital: "We can monitor him closer because of the excellent facilities available at the White House unit.")

After he got to the White House, the President's heart rhythm stabilized again. Doctors say Mr. Bush will have to remain on his two medications for the time being, and that they may never know what caused the problem. Some two million Americans have atrial fibrillation. When treated with medication the condition rarely slows people down. For the next few days the President will have to curtail his physical activity. While atrial fibrillation is not necessarily life-threatening, there is a 50-50 chance it could happen again.

Jennings talks with ABC's Dr. Tim Johnson:

Jennings: Tell us from a doctor's point of view what you do next immediately for the President.

Johnson: I think his doctors will face two issues: one, what to do about the medicines, that is, how long to continue them at what dosage. Of the two he is taking, they would most like to reduce or even eliminate the procaine amide, because that's the medication most likely to cause side effects over the long run. He probably will stay on Dig maybe forever. The second issue they face is how vigorously, if at all, to investigate a first-time atrial fibrillation patient for any evidence of hidden heart disease in the coronary arteries.

Jennings: How do you do that?

Johnson: I would assume they might consider re-doing a vigorous stress test, possibly adding...an X-ray study of the heart after a stress test. That would tell them two things: It would provide, if it were any evidence of hidden heart disease, and it would also help them decide how much exercise he can tolerate without threatening to go back into the rhythm problem.

Jennings: This is a man who likes exercise, everybody knows that. What can he expect to do? Is he really going to have to cut back?

Johnson: I think initially they're going to proceed cautiously, and as I said they may well do a stress test to try to find out exactly how much exercise he can do without getting into trouble. That's a standard thing to do after this kind of a problem.

NBC's Tom Brokaw: The President's health and the Vice President's future. They remain the subject of a good deal of discussion tonight, even though President Bush now is back in the White House after two nights in a hospital and a successful drug treatment for his irregular heartbeat. Politics and medicine.

NBC's John Cochran: A White House nurse checked the President's heartbeat several times this afternoon and found no problems. No one was happier when the President walked out of the hospital than the President.

(President Bush leaving the hospital: "I feel all right. I've got to get over and get back to work.")

At the White House he was welcomed by aides who were genuinely relieved to see him.

(Reporter: "Are you going to have to cut back on your schedule?

President Bush: "Not much. I'm gonna work back into it, but I think it's okay.

Reporters: "What about jogging?

President Bush: "Yeah, we can start again. He said today if I want to, but I'm not sure I feel up to it yet.")

Aides say the President complained of fatigue while running a few weeks ago. But his doctors do not blame his heartbeat problem on jogging. His pulse was still irregular this morning when he was released from the hospital. But by the time he met former Soviet Foreign Minister Shevardnadze, Bush said his heartbeat was back to normal.

(Reporter: "How does the medication feel?

President Bush: "Don't feel it. Feel good.

Reporter: "Have you had this shortness of breath problem before?

President Bush: "Not that I've noticed. Talk to my doctor, will you? I'm just glad to be here.")

Everyone was glad he was there, including Republicans alarmed by the prospect of Dan Quayle in the Oval Office. Quayle said today he and Bush discussed baseball's hard-throwing Nolan Ryan.

(Vice President Quayle: "Nolan Ryan, 44-years-old, same age I am [laughter], throwing another no-hit game, and I love it when I hear the media describe someone 44 years of age as mature and well-seasoned." [laughter])

In London, newspapers showed none of the understatement associated with the English. Try this one: "Five words America lives in dread of: 'Dan, I ain't feeling well.'" Bush thinks Quayle deserves better than that.

(President Bush: "Hey, he has my full support, always has, and he's doing a first-class job.")

And the President once told you, Tom, that about the only thing a vice president can expect is a lack of respect.

NBC's Robert Bazell says between 1 and 2 million Americans share the President's medical condition and most live normal lives.

(Dr. Burton Lee: "We want to reiterate that this man [the President] really has no symptoms of any kind, no problems, no physical problems that we can determine outside of this arrhythmia.")

For now, doctors say the only advice they have given the President is to briefly cut back his exhaustive program of physical exercise. [TV COVERAGE of President Bush kicking a soccer ball]

Bazell continues:

(Dr. Allan Ross, George Washington University Medical Center: "For a few days we're going to try to hold him down a little bit, but he can be expected to live the same life he was living last week.... It's really quite impossible so early in this go-round to firmly predict for you whether there'll ever be another episode. Certainly it's possible.")

Even though the danger is slight, the condition does increase the President's risk of a stroke, and perhaps more important, neither the President nor his doctors can now say that the President is in perfect health. (NBC-Lead)

CBS's Dan Rather: White House officials are accentuating the positive about President Bush's health. The President is out of the hospital. He is still on drugs for his heartbeat problem. All of this fairly or unfairly rekindles questions about Vice President Quayle's qualifications for presidential power.

CBS's Susan Spencer: The White House reported that the President's heartbeat has stayed normal all day. Doctors have taken periodic checks using a monitor just outside the Oval Office. The drugs appear to be working, and they describe President Bush as being in fine shape. From the time he returned to the White House this morning, the presidential image was just what the Administration wanted: a very fit, very vigorous 66-year-old. Requests for pictures of the President having his heartbeat checked were politely turned down. In the Rose Garden, crowds of cheering staffers welcomed the boss home. The boss was acting as if nothing had happened.

(Reporters: "What about jogging?

President Bush: "Yeah, we can start again. He said today if I want to, but I'm not sure if I feel up to it yet.")

[TV COVERAGE of President Bush sitting with former Foreign Minister Shevardnadze]

Mr. Bush stuck doggedly to today's schedule. An I.V. needle taped to his hand was taken out by late afternoon. Meanwhile, his doctors ended their two-day silence stressing that the President can resume his normal activities, but maybe not all and maybe not just yet.

(Dr. Ross: "For a few days we're going to try to hold him down a little bit, but he can be expected to live the same life he was living last week, next week I would assume.")

Treating the President with drugs instead of electric shock did get around the potentially touchy issue of Vice President Quayle having to temporarily assume power. But doctors swore politics had nothing to do with their decision.

(Dr. Lloyd: "Absolutely not. Under no circumstances were any political considerations ever added into the equation whatsoever in the treatment of the President.")

Reporters here have sometimes noticed Mr. Bush flag a bit on his runs. Mrs. Bush is said to have urged him to slow down a little bit. But given the political premium attached to his staying healthy and fit, and given his own lifelong love of exercise, slowing down seems pretty unlikely.

CBS's Edie Magnus says the White House is determinately optimistic about George Bush's recovery. But not everyone with atrial fibrillation is so lucky.

Magnus continues: This heart condition is believed responsible for some 100,000 deaths each year from stroke. But studies have shown that medication, including aspirin, can reduce the chance of that happening.

(Dr. Jonathan Halperin, Mt. Sinai Hospital: "The President's risk will be significantly diminished because he's now taking an aspirin tablet daily, and because we've been told that he has no structural or functional heart disease underlying the atrial fibrillation.") Nevertheless, the President's doctors said today they'll continue to carefully monitor their patient.

(Ross: "It's really quite impossible so early in this go-round to firmly predict for you whether there'll ever be another episode. Certainly it's possible.")

Most doctors agree George Bush and many others who suffer atrial fibrillation can, with treatment, resume a normal lifestyle.

Rather: Any significance to the fact the doctors still don't know what caused this?

Magnus: No, the doctors told us there is no significance to it. It happens in many cases. As a matter of fact at the news conference this morning with Mr. Bush's doctors, they likened this to a lightning bolt which can come out of the blue for no apparent reason. (CBS-Lead)

VICE PRESIDENT

Jennings: There is no question that Mr. Bush's illness is also a political story. From the moment that Mr. Bush surprised everyone by picking Dan Quayle to be his running mate in the last election there have been questions about the Vice President's abilities. But perhaps because of Mr. Bush's profile, they seem to go away, at least until now.

ABC's Carole Simpson: Dan Quayle was among the first people President Bush saw in the Oval Office today, and the President was quick to give him a strong vote of confidence.

(President Bush: "He has my full support, always has, and he's doing a first-class job. Hey, listen. It's great to be back.") The President is not alone. An ABC News/Washington Post poll taken over the weekend shows that 56 percent of the American people approve of the way Dan Quayle is handling his job as Vice President; [34 percent disapprove]. But 57 percent do not believe he's qualified to become president; [40 percent say he is qualified]. For two-and-a-half years, Quayle has been adding to his resume. He's been involved in all White House decisions, including pursuit of the war against Iraq, he's the President's key strategist for getting legislation through Congress, and he chairs government councils on space and competitiveness.

(Gov. Sununu: "He has been loyal to the President, he has worked hard for him, he has focused on significant issues.")

But many still perceive Quayle as a lightweight.

(Norman Ornstein, American Enterprise Institute: "He also looks younger than he is, looks more uncertain than he is, and when it comes to public presentation, simply doesn't look the part of a vice president much less a president.")

Simpson continues: Today, Quayle compared himself to no-hit pitcher Nolan Ryan.

(Vice President Quayle: "And I love it when I hear the media describe someone 44 years of age as mature and well-seasoned. [laughter])

White House officials say Dan Quayle will be on the ticket in 1992. If George Bush is re-elected, then Quayle will have four more years to persuade the American people he is qualified to be president.

(ABC-2)

NBC's Lisa Myers from Cleveland:

(AK Gov. Clinton: "As Americans, I think the appropriate thing to do this morning before we do any official business is to observe a moment of silent prayer for the health and well-being and speedy recovery of the President of the United States.")

That was the only official mention of the President's health at this convention of moderate Democrats. But in informal discussions, Democrats were licking their chops about re-emergence of the Quayle factor.

(Sen. Breaux: "When people found out that the President's heart was beating faster, their heart started beating faster, too, because of the great concern they had about the future of this country and the ability of the Vice President to handle the job.") Many were eager to put the focus on Bush, criticizing his judgment in selecting Quayle.

(Gov. Wilder: "It does raise some question as to the President's judgment in the first instance and as to whether he'll repeat that relative to his choice for 1992.")

Democrats tried and failed to turn the 1988 election into a referendum on Quayle.

The President's health problems could give that commercial more wallop in 1992. But the Democrats' only announced presidential candidate urged others to leave Quayle alone.

(Paul Tsongas: "For Democrats to begin Quayle-bashing is a mistake.")

Not even the most partisan Democrat argues that events of the last 48 hours alone will make Bush vulnerable.

(Frank Greer, Democratic consultant: "It's the beginning of raising some serious doubts. It's not enough in an of itself to do in George Bush.")

When most Americans heard the news about Bush, they didn't think about it as an opportunity for the Democrats. Their reactions ranged from anxiety to horror.

(Doug Bailey, GOP consultant: "When you hear that the President is hospitalized you're concerned about him, but within 15 seconds probably everybody had the second thought, 'My God, that means Quayle.'")

Despite various attempts to improve Quayle's image, a recent [CNN/Time] poll found that only 19 percent of Americans think he's qualified to be president. Still, when push comes to shove, Americans vote the top of the ticket. Even the most starry-eyed Democrats say it will take much more than the Quayle factor to beat Bush.

(NBC-2)

Rather: Beyond the medical consequences, President Bush's health problem has raised again the issue of Dan Quayle's fitness for office and his inclusion on the ticket in 1992.

CBS's Bob Schieffer: The Vice President himself was properly low-key, except for gracious words during a previously scheduled State Department speech....

(Vice President Quayle: "The President is back at the White House, and the President is doing great. When I was with him this morning we talked about a number of things.")

Ironically, it was Quayle who was topic A for many, including some high-profile Republicans who see the Vice President as a problem.

(Ken Phillips, GOP analyst: "The number of Americans who think he's qualified to be president has gone down in the last two years. When you have a vice president like that and you get a medical emergency that draws attention to the fact that he could be president, you've got the makings of a real mess.")

Polls already showed the thought of Quayle in the top job was unsettling to most Americans, and talk today in places like Miami underscored the President's illness has just deepened the concern.

(Woman: "That really scares me. I am very fond of President Bush, I voted for him, I'm a Republican, but I do have my concerns about Vice President Quayle taking over and being president.")

(Man: "I don't feel like that's the person that I want behind the wheel.")

The reaction is not surprising.

[TV COVERAGE of candidate George Bush announcing Sen. Quayle as his running mate]

The decision to put Quayle on the ticket stunned even George Bush's inner circle, and Democrats tried to make him an issue with commercials like this:

(Dukakis campaign commercial, with a slow zoom on what is supposed to be the Oval Office chair: "George Bush made his personal choice: J. Danforth Quayle. [sound of pumping heart in the background] Hopefully we will never know how great a lapse of judgment that really was.")

It didn't work, but Quayle's penchant for gaffes in an office where it's hard to show your best stuff anyway left him unable to build a national following. Even so, some advisers who had doubts in '88 believe he's gotten a bad rap.

(Budget Director Darman: "What we see, those who work closely with the Vice President, is seen largely in private. And we have a great deal of confidence in him, and the public doesn't get a chance to see the same kinds of things that give us a basis for that confidence.")

And today, Quayle's most important supporter endorsed him.

(President Bush: "Hey, he has my full support, always has, and he's doing a first-class job.")

Most of the Republican strategists we checked with today seemed convinced that for now the President is sticking with Quayle. But the commotion of these past two days just underlines how thin Quayle's support is. It all but guarantees there'll be more pressure on the President to change his mind. (CBS-2)

'92 ELECTION/DEMOCRATS

Jennings: At this point on the political calendar the conventional wisdom has been that George Bush would walk away with the election next year. Not only do the Democrats not have an obvious candidate, there was no obvious issue, either. But some Democrats sense an opening.

ABC's Chris Bury from Cleveland:

(AK Gov. Clinton: "I think the appropriate thing to do this morning is to observe a moment of silent prayer for the President of the United States.")

That was Gov. Clinton on the record as Democratic leaders paused to pray. But off the record, political issues of the President's health and the Vice President's competence were on many minds, though most Democrats were reluctant to try making much political hay in public.

(Paul Tsongas: "If you try to exploit the issue of health and the issue of Dan Quayle, I think it's a mistake, because it basically says we don't have anything else to say.")

But other ambitious Democrats were more ready to seize the Quayle issue. For Gov. Wilder, a likely candidate, it once again raises questions about the President's judgment.

(Gov. Wilder: "The issue will be whether the President has prepared the American people for an orderly line of succession to the extent that anything should happen to him.")

In another part of town, Jesse Jackson told students he, too, prayed for President Bush, but then Jackson could not resist.

(Jackson: "The thought of Quayle succeeding him will give all of us irregular heartbeats.")

Democrats, of course, have serious troubles of their own to worry about, including an identity crisis within their party. The Democrats meeting here want to put the party on a more conservative path. But they think too much like Republicans for party liberals, and would-be candidates are caught in the middle.

(Wilder: "We don't need to fight each other. We can win without each other.")

The President's heart may hand them a new issue. But Democrats are still squabbling over what they stand for and who they represent.

Jennings talks with CBS's Hal Bruno:

Jennings: We've heard what the Democrats have to say on the record. What are they saying when they close the door?

Bruno: When they're talking among themselves they all say they want the President to recover as fast as possible. But they also realize that if this is the start of ongoing medical problems, his health and the competency of the Vice President become a very legitimate campaign issue, and it gives them an opportunity in the election that at this point in time they didn't think they would ever have. If it's a minor episode of very short duration, then it has very little impact and it's going to fade away.

Jennings: In terms of Vice President Quayle and given the fact that the Democrats have been floundering, how much of an issue do they think the Vice President is?

Bruno: They think the vice presidency could be a tremendous issue, because the Republicans depend upon cross-over Democrats and independent voters to come on over and vote for him. And if they have questions about Dan Quayle's ability to handle the job, this could possibly cost anywhere from 3 to 5 points in the election. And in a very close election that could make a very big difference. (ABC-3)

REFUGEES/IRAQ

Jennings: The U.S. and other allied troops are taking over more Iraqi territory. It's all part of their continuing effort to make the Kurds feel safe enough to go home.

ABC's Jim Wooten reports that the allies have nearly finished carving out a spacious sanctuary for the Kurdish refugees. An Iraqi general was told today to get the rest of his troops out of the city of Dohuk in order to encourage refugees to come down from the mountains. U.S. Gen. Garner wouldn't say when the city is to be occupied, but probably tomorrow, and that would seem to be the extent of the allied advance into Iraq.

Jennings: The Iraqi government says today that foreign journalists will no longer be subject to censorship, although they will still have to have government escorts while they are visiting certain parts of the country. (ABC-4, NBC-5, CBS-4)

BAKER TRIP

Jennings says Secretary Baker is going back to the Middle East later this week. Administration officials are describing it as one last chance to get an Arab-Israeli peace process going. (ABC-5, NBC-4)

BANGLADESH

Jennings says six days after the cyclone in Bangladesh, things are getting worse. There was more bad weather today, more storms expected tomorrow -- all of which is making it even tougher to get help to nearly three million Bangladeshis who don't have any food, any water, or any shelter. (ABC-6, NBC-6, CBS-6)

SOVIET COAL MINERS

Jennings: In the Soviet Union, an agreement on the coal miners strike that will cost the central government both power and money: Mikhail Gorbachev has turned over control of more than half the country's mines to the Russian republic. It means that much of the foreign currency which coal earns will benefit the Russian republic rather than the Soviet Union as a whole. (ABC-7)

D.C. POLICE/CLASH WITH RESIDENTS

Rather: More tension is in the air tonight in the nation's capital; some sporadic incidents following a clash between police and a few community residents there last night. This comes amid new questions about whether the Los Angeles police beating case has promoted efforts to bridge the gap between police and communities or widen it. -more-

CBS's Rita Braver reports that citizen protest over police behavior exploded in Washington last night after a policewoman shot a man in a struggle during an attempted arrest. Rioters set fires, tossed rocks and bottles, looted stores and attacked police in a predominantly Hispanic neighborhood. Police said the man was shot only after he pulled a knife and lunged at the officer. But a rumor quickly spread that he was wounded while both hands were tied behind his back. The man is still in critical condition, 10 officers were injured, six police vehicles destroyed. Some neighbors claimed the incident was provoked by the police department's disdain for Hispanics. The city's mayor defended her police.

(Mayor Dixon: "While I understand the concerns that prompted that violence, violence is still violence and cannot be tolerated, and I think our police department responded accordingly.")

There were police problems in Houston this weekend, too. Officers cornered a gun-toting man who had argued with his girlfriend. Police talked to him for an hour, convinced him to put down the gun, then shot him at close range, claiming he made a sudden move. Both incidents took place in the wake of a recent Los Angeles police brutality case, at a time when many experts believe that some sectors of society have just lost confidence in the police.

(CBS-3)

LEAD IN DRINKING WATER/EPA

Brokaw: Lead in the drinking water is a potential danger for tens of millions of Americans, and tomorrow the EPA will announce a major new program to reduce that risk.

NBC's Robert Hager reports that sources say the new plan will eventually affect about half the cities and towns in this country, forcing an estimated 40,000 community water systems to spend millions of dollars to get excess lead out of their customers' tap water. Under terms of the new government rule, water companies will be required to conduct door-to-door surveys to test for lead in tap water starting next year. In communities where water in 10 percent or more of homes is found to exceed safe lead level, water companies will be forced to take action. Many communities will be able to clean up their water by adding more softening agents, phosphates or other substances that prevent the water from corroding lead pipes and solder. But many other cities and towns, perhaps 15,000 of them, will eventually have to replace their old lead pipes or water service lines -- an extremely expensive and time-consuming undertaking.

(Dr. Herbert Needleman, University of Pittsburgh, water lead researcher: "It's a historic moment in American medicine when the government moves from identifying and treating children to preventing disease at its source. The payoffs are going to be enormous.")

And later, the EPA will tackle another problem: homes with lead in old paint. Stripping that paint could also take huge amounts of money over time, according to EPA Administrator Reilly.

(Reilly: "We're looking, I think, at something in the range of $3 billion for the houses where you have peeling, lead-based paint that looks like it poses a serious health risk. You also have small children around.")

Hager continues: But lead in drinking water will be the first step, a problem that's seen as pervasive. And under this new rule, some cities with extensive lead-pipe systems -- cities like Philadelphia and Chicago and others -- will have to shell out big bucks to clean up." (NBC-11)

CUBAN IMMIGRATION

Jennings says federal immigration authorities are trying to cope with a sharp increase in the number of people risking their lives to reach the U.S. from Cuba. Since the beginning of this year more than 500 Cubans have been intercepted in the waters off the coast of Florida. (ABC-9)

AT&T/NCR

Brokaw: AT&T reached out today in a major corporate takeover. It gained new footing in the computer business by merging with NCR. This deal is valued at almost $7.5 billion. (NBC-12, CBS-7)

DISCOVERY

Jennings says there was a smooth landing for the space shuttle Discovery today, though not quite as planned. Discovery came down at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. The winds were too strong at the regular landing site at Edwards AFB in California. (ABC-8, NBC-8)

HEINZ SEAT/IACCOCA

Brokaw: Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca said he turned down an offer to fill the unexpired term of Sen. Heinz. (NBC-3)

News From the Hill

SENATE FLOOR: Consideration of price-fixing bill is debated.

Senators yesterday debated a motion to proceed to legislation (S 249) that would strengthen laws against vertical price-fixing, the practice of a manufacturer and a retailer conspiring to force a competing retailer to charge a certain price for the manufacturer's products and thus prevent discounting.

The bill would allow retailers to sue manufacturers that attempt to manipulate retail prices.

Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the bill's sponsor, said S 249 would promote retail competition. He has been trying to win passage of a such a bill for years, but has faced opposition from key Republicans such as Strom Thurmond, S.C.

FAMILY TAX plan unveiled by House and Senate Democrats.

Congressional Democrats yesterday unveiled a "family tax relief" plan that sponsors say would ease the tax burden on middle-income families and raise taxes on the nation's wealthiest income earners.

Sen. Al Gore, D-Tenn., joined Reps. Thomas J. Downey, D-N.Y., George Miller, D-Calif., and David R. Obey, D-Wis., in discussing the draft tax legislation they said would return "tax fairness" for the American family.

One of the key components of the Democratic proposal is the replacement of the personal exemption for children with a refundable tax credit worth $800 per child.

Supporters say this could double the current tax benefit of the existing exemption for each child for millions of American families.

To offset the lost tax revenue and thus comply with last year's budget agreement, a new 35 percent tax rate would be established for wage earners with taxable incomes of more than $130,000. The current top tax rate is 31 percent.

Gore predicted the administration

"might balk" at the idea of a new 35 percent tax rate, but he said there is broad national support for increased taxes for the wealthy.

TEXAS RUNOFF to feature two Republicans.

Republicans are assured of retaining control of the 3rd District of Texas after two GOP candidates won the most votes in last Saturday's primary.

As expected, Tom Pauken, a 47-year-old business executive, led the 12-candidate field, finishing with 28 percent of the vote in unofficial results. Pauken, who formerly headed the federal agency ACTION, led the pack of candidates in pre-primary polls.

Pauken will now face state Rep. Sam Johnson, who won 20.3 percent of the vote.

The lone Democrat in the race, retired building contractor Wayne E. Putnam, captured just 4.3 percent of the votes.

The runoff between Pauken and Johnson will be held either May 18 or May 25. When Gov. Ann W. Richards, D, validates the election results today, she is expected to announce the runoff date.

The winner of the general election will replace Steve Bartlett, R, who left the House March 11 to run for mayor of Dallas.

After the primary, both candidates were trying to solicit the endorsement of the losing candidates. Former state Rep. Bill Hammond, R, garnered 12.6 percent of the vote, while fellow Republicans Paul Zane Pilzer and Dan Branch both received over 10 percent.

Although Pauken was the acknowledged front-runner in the primary, his combative and outspoken manner could cause problems. Observers said an "anybody but Pauken" sentiment could make it hard for him to win the general election.

But the other candidates have not rallied behind Johnson, 60, who served as chairman of Bartlett's last two congressional campaigns.

Today

Senate Floor: The Senate will vote on a motion that would cut off debate and clear the way for consideration of a bill (S 249) that would strengthen laws against vertical price fixing, a practice in which a manufacturer and a retailer combine efforts to force a competing retailer to increase prices on products made by the manufacturer.

The cloture vote is the first hurdle the bill's sponsor, Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, must overcome if the Senate is to take up his bill.

Opponents to the bill say it would lead to increased litigation and would hurt the economy.

The bill would effectively be killed if fewer than 59 members vote in favor of cloture. The vote will be the first cloture vote of the session.

Soviet Credit. Also today, senators will consider a resolution (S Res 117) urging the administration to extend additional credit to the Soviet Union for purchases of U.S. grain.

President Bush last week indicated he was leaning against granting more grain credit to the Soviet Union.

House Floor: Lawmakers will take up three non-controversial land bills, including a measure (HR 479) to include the California National Historic Trail and Pony Express National Historic Trail as part of the national system of historic trails.

The measure also would direct the Interior secretary to study whether a Pony Express trail between Sacramento and San Francisco should be included in the national system.

The bills will be taken up under an expedited procedure that does not allow amendments.

Defense Authorization: Four House Armed Service subcommittees are scheduled to mark up the fiscal 1992-93 defense authorization bill (HR 2100). The full committee will begin consideration of the measure on Wednesday.

Plans for cleaning up nuclear weapons plants are likely to be discussed at the Procurement Subcommittee's markup. Funds for the cleanup are included in the Energy Department's appropriation, but the defense authorization bill sets the spending level and policy guidelines.

President Bush requested $3.7 billion for the program in fiscal 1992, $1.3 billion more than current appropriations. Panel members are likely to approve or increase that amount.

102nd Congress Sets Quick Early Pace

In achieving its primary function — making laws — the 102nd Congress has been more prolific in its first four months than any Congress since the 81st in 1949.

Through May 5, 39 bills and resolutions have been signed into law. For comparison, 32 measures had become law at this stage of the 100th Congress and 25 measures had been signed by President Bush two years ago, four months into the 101st Congress.

The situation in the Middle East accounted for the fast start this year: Thirteen of the first 39 public laws were directly or indirectly related to the U.S. military buildup and war in the Persian Gulf.

The international crisis brought Congress back to work earlier than it usually does at the start of a Congress. In January, a month that traditionally sees Congress in session for just a few days and then only for ceremonial activities, Congress conducted a solemn debate and vote on a resolution authorizing the use of force in the Persian Gulf.

Later, Congress cleared legislation authorizing and appropriating funds to pay for the war and a number of measures providing benefits for military personnel.

But, as usual, not all the measures that became law were so weighty. In fact, 20 of the 39 public laws enacted by the 102nd Congress have been commemoratives, including such annual measures as "National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week" and "Federal Employees Recognition Week."

Because such commemorative measures often take less time to complete their legislative journey than more substantive bills, the first months of a session often see a large proportion of commemoratives.

panel will consider Bush's $39.9 billion request for research, development, testing and evaluation of Defense Department programs. The R&D panel is unique in that — because of its purview — it has a say on all major weapons systems. The panel could discuss everything from the B-2 stealth bomber to the SSN-21 Seawolf submarine at the markup.

The Military Installations panel will address funding for construction projects at domestic and foreign U.S. military bases. The Pentagon requested $8.2 billion for fiscal 1992 for these projects, which include family housing for military dependents.

And at the Military Personnel Subcommittee session, members will debate the Bush administration's fiscal 1992 request of $78 billion for armed services personnel. That figure includes $2.6 billion for a 4.2 percent cost-of-living increase and takes into account planned force reductions.

Bank Insurance: The House Banking Subcommittee on Financial Institutions Supervision will begin marking up legislation (HR 2094) that would infuse $25 billion into the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation's (FDIC) nearly insolvent Bank Insurance Fund.

The bill would allow the FDIC to borrow the added funds from the Treasury and repay them by charging banks a higher insurance premium.

The measure would also give federal regulators added power to conduct more frequent audits and to close ailing banks before they run up substantial losses.

Because of a dispute on the panel over whether to move a more comprehensive bill that would restructure the banking industry, panel Democrats have agreed to mark up HR 2094 but to hold off on floor action for now.

Subcommittee Chairman Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., and full committee Chairman Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Texas, want early action on shoring up the insurance fund, which could become insolvent by the end of the year.

But other panel members fear that resolving the insurance fund's immediate problems in a narrow bill would steal the momentum from a broader measure.

The subcommittee is expected to begin drafting a broad restructuring measure in a couple of weeks.

NIH Authorization: The House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Health will revisit a controversial measure to reauthorize the National Institutes of Health (NIH).

The bill (HR 1532) would overturn an existing ban on NIH funding of research involving use of tissue from aborted fetuses. The administration and panel Republicans say that such use of fetal tissue may encourage women to have abortions.

Similar language to overturn the ban was removed last year when a stripped-down NIH reauthorization bill cleared.

HR 1532 also requires the NIH to include more women and minorities in clinical trials of new medical treatments. The administration says the language would harm the scientific accuracy of the trials.

The NIH is the principal sponsor of federal health research on a wide variety of health problems.

The measure also would require that the NIH examine the use of animals in scientific research and move toward supporting research that does not involve animals.

Forced Labor: The Senate Foreign Relations Committee will consider a treaty to abolish forced labor, submitted to Congress in 1963 by President John F. Kennedy. Though members of the United Nations signed the pact in 1957, concerns that it would force the United States to change its labor practices delayed its transmission to the Senate and stalled its progress once there.

But when a congressional delegation returned from China earlier this year, its members expressed concern that forced prison labor in that country produced goods sold to the United States. That revived interest in the treaty.

So far, the convention has been ratified by more than 100 countries, but not the Soviet Union and China. The Bush administration supports ratification of the pact.

Antarctica. The committee also will take up a measure (S Con Res 26) urging U.S. support for a new international agreement to ban commercial mineral development and related activities in Antarctica. ■

ELEMENTS OF BILL DRAFTING

Translate your ideas into legislation with this practical skills-building seminar from Congressional Quarterly's
Professional Education Service . . .

June 20-21, 1991 • Holiday Inn Crowne Plaza • Washington, D.C.

It used to be that arduous trial and error was the only way to eventually excel at bill drafting.

Today, there is a shorter route. Attend Congressional Quarterly's two-day Elements of Bill Drafting seminar and learn how to draft accurate legislation that effectively advances your policy objectives the first time around.

On Day One, our hand-picked experts will outline the necessary groundwork to be done before you commit pen to paper. Working with samples of actual bills, you will determine which format to use and when...how to organize your thoughts within established formats...and how to say exactly what you mean without ambiguity.

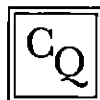

On Day Two, in a hands-on practicum, you will put your new skills to the test by drafting a sample bill to amend an existing law. Your sample legislation will be critiqued and evaluated by the experts. You will see where your language can be made more effective and where organization can be improved.

At the end of the two days you will possess the vital skills necessary to draft bills that communicate your organization's position with clarity, precision and confidence.

Act now! Call 1 (800) 432-2250 ext. 620

The full registration fee for this two-day seminar is $425, but register before May 20, 1991 and pay only $395 — a $30 discount. VISA and MasterCard accepted. Federal employees: Your P.O. may be mailed or faxed to us, but we must receive it at least 48 hours before each seminar. In D.C., call (202) 887-8620. Outside D.C., call 1-800-432-2250, Ext. 620. Fax: (202) 728-1863.

11:30 A.M. NEWS UPDATE

PRESIDENT'S HEALTH (Christopher Connell, AP) -- President Bush held to a full work schedule with no recurrence of the irregular heartbeat that put him in the hospital over the weekend. At the first event of a day crammed with meetings and appearances, Bush told a Rose Garden audience at a small business awards ceremony, "Welcome from the bottom of my previously fibrillating heart. I must admit I'm glad to be out of the hospital. It's just a little unsettling to turn on the news and see Peter Jennings pointing to a diagram of a heart with your name on it," Bush joked. "It isn't even Valentine's Day." Bush even showed reporters the white wires leading from pads on his chest to the small pager-size transmitter on his waist.

IRAQ/U.S. FORCES (Kuwait City/Reuter) -- The U.S. will withdraw all troops from southern Iraq by Thursday, but will leave an armored brigade in Kuwait "for the time being," Secretary Cheney said. Cheney said combat air patrols had stopped over southern Iraq as of Monday night, in line with the American withdrawal.

BAKER/BESSMERTNYKH (Cairo/Reuter) -- Secretary Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Bessmertnykh will meet in Cairo Sunday to discuss Middle East peace prospects, Arab diplomatic sources said.

IRAN/WESTERN RELATIONS (Tehran/Reuter) -- Iran wants to open up to Western nations and is willing to do what it can to win freedom for Western hostages held in Lebanon, German Foreign Minister Genscher said. After meeting with Iranian President Rafsanjani and Foreign Minister Velayati, he told reporters that Iran was also eager to help establish a new peaceful order in the region. Genscher said Iranian leaders supported his view that Saddam Hussein should be put on trial. "The interest in opening up to all our (Western) partners and friends is detectable," Genscher said, although he also noted that Rafsanjani had recently ruled out a renewal of ties with the U.S.

YUGOSLAVIA (Belgrade/UPI) -- Political leaders met under a threat of action by the communist-led army unless they took steps to end a "civil war" that has killed 18 people in the Croatian Republic. Apparently displaying its resolve in advance of the meeting, the military took control from Croatian police of three major Danube River bridges connecting the Croatian and Serbian republics. The Tanjug news agency also reported movement of tanks. In Belgrade, residents and diplomatic sources said local military reservists were summoned in pre-dawn call-ups. In Austria, meanwhile, the government placed military units in a "higher state of readiness" in response to the crisis in neighboring Yugoslavia.

SOVIET UNREST (Yerevan, U.S.S.R./AP) -- Armenia's president accused Soviet troops of waging "undeclared war" on his republic and said 23 people died when a village near neighboring Azerbaijan was razed. President Ter-Petrosian told a news conference that Soviet and Azerbaijan troops seized three more villages and arrested more than 20 people, mostly Armenian policemen. A news agency report later said six villages had been attacked.
