11:30 A.M. NEWS UPDATE

SOVIET SUMMIT/PRESIDENT (Chris Connell, AP) -- President Gorbachev is sending his foreign minister and top general to Washington this week in a redoubled effort to conclude a strategic arms treaty, the White House said. President Bush called it "a good sign" and said there was ample time to arrange a superpower summit in Moscow at the end of July. "I have said before that what we want to do is have a summit meeting with the Soviets, and I've also said I want this START agreement completed," Bush told reporters. "Whether these last difficulties can be ironed out, we just don't know. But this should be seen as a good sign," Bush told reporters as he met business leaders at the White House on his education plan.

G-7/NORTH KOREAN NUKES (Seoul/Reuter) -- President Bush has assured South Korean President Roh Tae-woo that next weekend's G-7 summit will discuss North Korea's controversial nuclear program, a senior South Korean foreign ministry official said. North Korea, meanwhile, threatened to go back on a decision to discuss outside inspection of its nuclear facilities if the G-7 summit tries to pressure Pyongyang on the issue. "The two presidents [Bush and Roh] agreed that the upcoming London summit should discuss the issue of North Korea's nuclear development and should urge North Korea to comply with the provisions of the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty," said South Korean Assistant Foreign Minister Lee Jung-bin.

G-7/JAPAN (Tokyo/UPI) -- Prime Minister Kaifu set down conditions for Japanese aid to Moscow, and reiterated Tokyo's demand for the return of four northern islands occupied by the Soviets since the end of World War II. Kaifu said Moscow had to prove to the world it had renounced militarism. "Is the Soviet Union going to stop using its capital for military purposes and move toward supporting its own people?" Kaifu asked.

THOMAS/NAACP (Houston/AP) -- Leaders of the NAACP said the group would make no immediate decision on endorsing or opposing the Supreme Court nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas. The civil rights group said it wanted to meet with Thomas and conduct a review of Thomas' record in public office. "We're not going to be stampeded into mass hysteria just because someone says we're waffling," said Benjamin Hooks, NAACP executive director.

YUGOSLAVIA (Brioni/Reuter) -- Yugoslav leaders said they had pulled the turbulent Balkan federation back from the brink of civil war by accepting an EC peace agreement after 16 hours of talks. "Peace starts from today," Yugoslav President Mesic told reporters.

IRAQ/SANCTIONS (Baghdad/Reuter) -- Iraq's trade minister said the Gulf war freeze on Iraq's foreign assets was preventing it from importing vital food and medicines. The minister, Mohammed Mehdi Saleh, said although U.N. sanctions had been eased to allow imports of food and medicine, Iraq had been unable to complete deals because it lacked the ready cash to pay exporters. Saleh said Iraq, using reserves and internal production, could only cover about half its food needs.

2:30 P.M. NEWS UPDATE

IRAQ/NUKES (U.N./Reuter) -- Saddam Hussein has given the U.N. a detailed list of nuclear materials, and specialists in Vienna and New York are analyzing the papers, a U.N. official said. Robert Gallucci, the American deputy director of a U.N. special commission in charge of scrapping Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, said the list had been transmitted to U.N. headquarters and the International Atomic Energy Agency on Sunday. An American diplomat said an initial glance of the papers revealed Iraq had been violating some international nuclear safeguards. "But we have a report that he wanted to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," he said.

(AP) -- The Iraqi government, contrary to its previous statements, has admitted to U.N. investigators that it has been engaged in a nuclear weapons program, the State Department said. The Iraqi admission, contained in a 29-page document, said the Iraqi effort includes a uranium enrichment program, State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler said. "Today's document was a step forward but we will judge Saddam Hussein's pledges by the actions of the Iraqi government, not by his words," Tutwiler said.

EDUCATION/THOMAS/PRESIDENT (Janet Bass, UPI) -- President Bush announced formation of a corporation charged with raising up to $200 million to develop innovative new schools "to meet the challenges of the future." "It's a private venture in the public interest," explained former N.J. Gov. Thomas Kean, who will head the New American Schools Development Corp. "The revolution begins right here," Bush said at a Rose Garden ceremony. "We've done enough hand-wringing about the state of our schools and now, let's act. Let's apply America's special genius for invention to our schools."

Bush put in a plug for Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas, saying he is an example for all to emulate. "He outdistanced poverty and racism because he possessed the greatest treasures of all -- love of family, faith of teachers -- remember what he said about teachers -- and a belief in himself. With that example, none of us should take no for an answer. So let's vow to create schools with which we can meet the challenges of the future." Bush said.

YUGOSLAVIA/U.S. EMBARGO (Reuter) -- The U.S. said it would join an EC arms embargo against Yugoslavia and urged other countries to do so as well. State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler said: "For its part the United States will join the EC in prohibiting all arms sales to Yugoslavia and in urging the rest of the international community to adopt a similar stance."

MIDEAST PEACE/ISRAEL/U.N. (Jerusalem/AP) -- Prime Minister Shamir rejected U.N. involvement in Mideast peace talks, saying the way to a settlement was through direct, unmediated negotiations between Israel and the Arab states. In a meeting with U.N. special envoy Edouard Brenner, Shamir accused Syria of delaying peace talks. He contended Syria's leaders "are not ready to recognize Israel or pronounce the word 'peace,'" a communique from Shamir's office said. Defense Minister Arens told Brunner that Syria pursues aggressive policies like those of Iraq, calling "Syria's annexation of Lebanon no different that Iraq's annexation of Kuwait," a Defense Ministry statement said. ###

5:00 P.M. NEWS UPDATE

THOMAS (AP) -- Sen. Mitchell said that President Bush's nomination of Judge Thomas showed the President was "against quotas for every position except the Supreme Court." Bush has denied that race was the reason he chose Thomas. But Mitchell said that contention was, "to put it charitably, overstating the case." "Mr. Thomas may well be qualified and I may well vote for him but I think it is manifest on its face that was a criteria, a factor, in the nomination," Mitchell said. He said Bush opposed the use of quotas by "everybody but himself." Meanwhile, the White House formally submitted Thomas' nomination to the Senate; Thomas began calling on key senators who will be voting on his confirmation.

(Reuter) -- A member of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission urged the Senate to reject the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court, calling it an insult to those who fought in the civil rights movement. Mary Frances Berry, who was appointed to the commission in 1980 after serving as an assistant secretary of education in the Carter administration, said Thomas had been a "time server" when he was head of the department's civil rights office during the Reagan administration.

ENERGY PLAN/GAO (UPI) -- The administration has refused to disclose working papers used in developing its National Energy Strategy, raising questions about the soundness of the plan, congressional investigators said. The investigators said the credibility of President Bush's energy plan also has been thrown into doubt by clear evidence that the administration has overstated the environmental benefits of its energy policy recommendations. Specifically, they said the administration is claiming its energy plan will achieve environmental improvements that actually are expected to flow from the new Clean Air Act passed last year. "We believe that the administration and the Energy Department created appearances...that may hurt the credibility of the package that was developed," Judy England-Joseph, the GAO's associate director of energy issues, told a House small business subcommittee.

LEBANON/ISRAEL (Beirut/Reuter) -- Lebanese Prime Minister Karami said Beirut was counting on the international community to force Israel to withdraw from its self-proclaimed security zone in south Lebanon. Asked about statements by Israeli officials that the Lebanese army's crushing of Palestinian guerrillas in the south was not enough for an Israeli withdrawal, Karami told reporters: "Do you expect Israel to pull out from the south so easily? Israel tries to hold onto any land it enters."

(AP) -- The State Department called on Israel to abandon the security zone inside Lebanon that has kept Palestinian guerrillas from reaching their targets in Israel. The department said Israel and Lebanon would be better off if the Lebanese army took over the enclave. State Department spokeswoman Tutwiler said: "We believe the security and safety of all the people of south Lebanon and northern Israel can best be assured by a strong, effective central government in Beirut."

S. AFRICA/NUKES (Pretoria/Reuter) -- South Africa signed the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty. ###

Volume 27, Number 109

This Week in Congress

When lawmakers return from the Independence Day recess, they will plunge back into a busy schedule. The Senate is expected to wrap up work on a comprehensive crime bill, and the House is scheduled to vote on a bill placing strict conditions on extending trade benefits to China.

The Senate Armed Services Committee will begin to mark up a fiscal 1992 defense authorization bill. A House Veterans' Affairs subcommittee will consider legislation to provide automatic cost-of-living adjustments to veterans and a Education and Labor panel will vote on a bill that would help miners suffering from black lung disease receive greater financial assistance.

Whip Race. House Democrats plan to meet on Thursday to elect a new majority whip to replace William H. Gray III, D-Pa. Two candidates, Steny H. Hoyer, D-Md., and David E. Bonior, D-Mich., are vying to replace Gray, who is leaving Congress in September.

Bonior says he has more than the 134 votes it will take to be elected whip, the third-ranking leadership position among House Democrats. Hoyer says the race is tight and is likely to be decided by 10-15 votes.

Senate Floor Action

Crime Bill. Members will continue consideration today of a $3.3 billion anti-crime package (S 1241) that would expand the use of the federal death penalty, limit the appeals that could be filed by death row inmates and increase penalties for violent crimes.

Pending is an amendment by Warren B. Rudman, R-N.H., that would direct $2.2 billion in the bill to states to increase the size of local police forces.

By redirecting the money, the amendment would strike numerous provisions in the bill, including ones that would provide millions of dollars in grants for anti-terrorism and anti-gang programs. The amendment would leave intact $1 billion designated for drug-abuse programs.

Judiciary Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., the bill's sponsor, will attempt to table, or kill, the Rudman amendment.

Members will also consider an amendment by Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., that would establish a federal grant program to assist states in offering literacy education in at least one major correctional facility in each state.

Energy, Water. The Senate this week may also turn to a fiscal 1992 spending bill (HR 2427) that would provide $22 billion for energy research and water construction projects.

Nearly half of the money in the bill would go to nuclear weapons and nuclear waste cleanup programs.

The bill also includes $508.7 million for the superconducting super collider project in Texas, $75 million more than the House approved and $25 million less than the president requested. The project received $244.8 million in fiscal 1991.

House Floor Action

China Trade Status. The House on Wednesday will debate U.S. trade policy toward China when it takes up legislation relating to President Bush's intention to give China most-favored-nation (MFN) trade status for another year.

The House plans to consider a bill (HR 2212) that would extend China's low-tariff trade status, but condition the extension on the country making changes in its policies on human rights, nuclear exports, forced labor and abortion.

Under the bill, China would receive MFN treatment only if it accounts for people detained during the Tiananmen Square revolt two years ago and releases any who are still imprisoned.

The Bush administration opposes the bill, arguing that it attaches too many

Last Week

Even though Capitol Hill was quiet last week while lawmakers took an Independence Day recess, a number of significant political developments occurred, including President Bush's nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas to the Supreme Court.

There was also the election of Illinois Republican Thomas W. Ewing to the House and the surprise announcement by Rep. D. French Slaughter Jr., R-Va., that he is leaving the House. And the special base-closing commission released a list of military bases it proposes to shut down. (See related story, p. 2)

Thomas Nomination. Bush's quick nomination last Monday of Clarence Thomas, a black federal appeals court judge in Washington, D.C., to be an associate justice on the Supreme Court was not completely unexpected. As a conservative Republican, Thomas has long been a favorite in GOP circles. The confirmation process may well be tough, however, and will focus on his record on the appeals court and on his tenure as chairman of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC).

If confirmed, Thomas, 43, would replace retiring Justice Thurgood Marshall and would become one of the youngest justices ever to join the court.

The Senate Judiciary Committee expects to begin confirmation hearings in September.

Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, ranking member of the committee, called Thomas a "highly qualified and capable" nominee.

But other panel members, including Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said they planned to press Thomas hard during the confirmation hearings on his views on abortion.

"I will not support yet another Reagan-Bush Supreme Court nominee who remains silent on a woman's right to choose and then ascends to the court to weaken that right," Metzenbaum said.

The confirmation process is also likely to heat up over Thomas' record as chairman of the EEOC, which some of his opponents say was marred by lax enforcement of anti-bias laws to protect the aged and minorities.

President Bush said he hoped the confirmation process would be over by Oct. 7, the day the Supreme Court returns for a new session.

Base Closings. President Bush said last week that it is "highly unlikely" he will reject the list of 25 proposed base closings drawn up by the special, independent base-closing commission.

As expected, the commission recommended the closure of several major

Toxic Waste Complicates Base Closures

Hazardous waste spills and dumps, which will require years of work and millions of dollars to clean up, could complicate plans to transfer into civilian hands many military bases now slated for closure.

Of the 25 bases recommended for closing last week by the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission, seven are on the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) priority list for cleanup of environmental contamination. These bases are plagued with problems ranging from leaking underground storage tanks and spilled jet fuel to the disposal of buried clothing used in chemical weapons tests.

The military has already estimated that cleaning up more than 1,800 U.S. military installations will cost $30 billion and take more than a decade.

The cleanup issue further complicates the already turbulent base-closing process, since federal law stipulates that contaminated sites cannot be turned over to civilians until fully restored.

Some bases targeted as environmentally hazardous cover huge tracts of territory while the amount of land actually contaminated is small. Communities hit hard economically by a base closure want to ensure that the unaffected portion of the land is converted to a productive purpose as quickly as possible.

Current law, however, may prohibit the transfer of any portion of the property on a base appearing on the Superfund National Priorities List — a list compiled by the EPA identifying 116 particularly polluted sites — although government lawyers, EPA officials, and state and local leaders are still investigating whether that is the case.

An environmental task force comprised of representatives from such agencies as the Departments of Defense and Justice, the General Services Administration, EPA, and state governments will meet July 17 to review the matter. Unless changes to the law are made, however, bases shut down in the next few years might not be turned over for civilian use for decades.

To prevent this possibility, Richard Ray, D-Ga., has introduced legislation (HR 2179) that would allow clean areas of a base to be used even though other portions of the base remain contaminated. Supporters of the bill say that the legislation is necessary to aid in the economic recovery of areas hurt by base closures and to prevent law suits by those unhappy with local plans for closed bases.

In addition, Gary Condit, D-Calif., has introduced a measure (HR 2197) that would bar the Pentagon from closing a base until at least 75 percent of its assessed environmental damage is cleaned up. The measure also stipulates that a base must be cleaned up completely no later than two years after it is shut down.

Following is a list of bases slated to be closed that have also been designated as Superfund sites. Also listed is the name of the member in whose district the base is located. Estimated cost and cleanup time have been provided by members' offices where not indicated.

- Fort Ord. Leon Panetta, D-Calif. Cleanup costs: $116.25 million to $357.5 million, estimated by the Fort Ord Community Task Force, organized by Panetta. Estimated cleanup time: 21 years. Main problems: dumping of toxic chemicals and fuel.

- Moffett Naval Air Station. Tom Campbell, R-Calif. Cleanup costs: $41 million to $50 million for study and $90 million for cleanup. Estimated cleanup time: 15 years. The Base Closure Commission recommended that the base be transferred to NASA, and Campbell supports the plan. NASA already has a facility there.

- Castle Air Force Base. Gary Condit, D-Calif. Cleanup costs: Pentagon estimate, $111 million; county environmental office, $200 million to $400 million. Estimated cleanup time: 26 years. Main problem: A toxic chemical has leaked into groundwater and is moving toward the town of Atwater, threatening its water supply.

- Loring Air Force Base. Olympia J. Snowe, R-Maine. Cleanup costs: Air Force estimate, $150 million; state environment officials, $300 million to $900 million. An aide to Snowe said Pentagon officials had quoted him $800 million. Estimated cleanup time: Decades. Main problem: There are 42 identified hazardous waste sites.

- Williams Air Force Base. John J. Rhodes III, R-Ariz. Cleanup costs: $15 million. Estimated cleanup time: 10-15 years. The base is located in a prime development area and there is significant interest in transferring the base to other users, including Arizona State University and McDonnell Douglas.

- Sacramento Army Depot. Robert T. Matsui, D-Calif. Cleanup costs: $65 million to $77 million. Estimated cleanup time: 8-13 years. Main problem: groundwater contamination.

- Fort Devens. Chester G. Atkins, D-Mass. Cleanup costs: $42.6 million. Estimated cleanup time: Anywhere from 1-30 years. Main problem: There are 54 identified hazardous waste sites, including buried clothes used in chemical weapons tests.

LAST WEEK from p. 1

Army posts, the Philadelphia Naval Shipyard and three strategic bomber and refueling bases in the Air Force.

The 25 bases recommended for closure, along with 43 slated to be realigned, were selected from a proposed list of closings released by the Defense Department on April 12.

The commission overturned the Pentagon's recommendations to close Fort McClellan, Ala.; Orlando Naval Training Center, Fla.; Whidbey Island Naval Air Station at Oak Harbor, Wash.; and Moody Air Force Base in Georgia.

Bush has until July 15 to either accept the list in full or reject it with recommended changes.

If rejected, the commission will have until Aug. 15 to draw up a revised list, which the president has until Sept. 1 to approve.

Once the president approves the recommendations, Congress will have 45 days to pass a resolution of disapproval, which Bush could veto. If Congress does not act, the bases will close.

The tight time restrictions mean that, if Bush approves the base closing commission's recommendations, Congress would have to pass a resolution before its summer recess, scheduled to begin Aug. 5.

The closings are required to accommodate a military budget that is expected to shrink by 25 percent over the next five years.

Slaughter Resignation. Virginia Republican Rep. D. French Slaughter announced he will resign from Congress because of health complications following a series of minor strokes that he suffered in the third week of June.

The resignation will be effective Nov. 5, 1991, according to his office.

Slaughter, a four-term congressman who represents an affluent district known for its horse-breeding industry, is a member of the Judiciary, Small Business and Science, Space and Technology committees.

He is the ranking GOP member of the Small Business Subcommittee on Procurement, Tourism and Rural Development.

Ewing Elected. Thomas W. Ewing, R-Ill., will be sworn in on Wednesday as the newest member of the House after winning a special election last Tuesday.

Ewing, a member of the state House, garnered about 66 percent of the vote to easily beat former Democratic state Rep. Gerald Bradley and keep the seat in GOP hands. Edward Madigan, R, resigned in March to become Agriculture secretary.

Ewing said Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., promised him a seat on the Agriculture Committee. He also hopes to land a spot on the Public Works and Transportation Committee. ■

Spending Bills Moving; But Problems Await

Congress has a shot this year at clearing all 13 regular appropriations bills by Oct. 1, the start of the new fiscal year. Making that deadline would be a rarity: It has been met only once in the past 30 years.

The House has set a brisk pace, passing 12 of the 13 bills by the June 30 deadline established by the budget law.

The one spending bill not taken up — for transportation programs — has been delayed because the chairman of the House Appropriations panel's Transportation Subcommittee, William Lehman, D-Fla., had a stroke in the spring and is slowly recuperating.

But the Senate has yet to pass any spending bills, although the Appropriations Committee has approved three — energy and water, legislative branch and Treasury, Postal Service.

In 1988 — the last time Congress cleared all 13 bills by Oct. 1 — the Senate Appropriations Committee had approved 11 of the measures by June 30.

Furthermore, some of these "must-pass" bills are likely to face rough weather ahead.

Four bills — Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education; District of Columbia; foreign operations and Defense — contain language that would liberalize current abortion policy and, as a result, are veto targets.

But abortion is not the only issue that could hold up the appropriations measures:

- The Senate is expected to oppose a quadrupling of fees for grazing animals on federal rangelands, which the House included when it passed the Interior appropriations bill (HR 2686) June 25. Many in the House view the current low fees as a subsidy for Western ranchers, but there is strong opposition in the Senate where Western members have more clout.

- The House and Senate are also likely to battle over how much to spend on the nation's space programs. A divided House on June 6 voted, 240-173, to continue funding for the space station Freedom, but funding for other space programs was left at fiscal 1991 levels.

Funding for the space station is included in a spending bill (HR 2519) for the Departments of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development and various independent agencies, including the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA).

The Senate is expected to look for ways to provide more money for NASA. But that would require cuts in domestic programs, such as housing or veterans' benefits.

- New starts for water projects by the Army Corps of Engineers are bound to cause debate when House and Senate negotiators try to reach an agreement on an energy and water spending bill (HR 2427).

Faced with a budget squeeze, the House did not include any new starts for water projects, a favorite among members because it sends federal dollars back to their districts.

Senate appropriators, given almost $500 million more to spend on the bill than their House counterparts, approved 14 new water projects at a fiscal 1992 cost of $28.2 million. Even if the House gets the additional money for the bill, members are likely to have different ideas than the Senate about which new water projects to fund.

- A fight over members' pay is possible when the Senate takes up the spending bill that funds its own operations. Senate leaders may offer amendments to the legislative branch bill (HR 2506) that would raise senators' salaries and at the same time bar them from accepting fees for speeches and writings. Those in favor of the honoraria ban want to attach it to a must-pass bill, such as an appropriations measure.

conditions.

Members will also consider legislation (H J Res 263) that would disapprove Bush's request.

NSF Authorization. Legislation that would reauthorize the National Science Foundation (NSF) for fiscal 1992 will be considered by the House on Thursday.

The measure (HR 2282) would authorize $2.7 billion for NSF, which funds research in all scientific disciplines and provides research grants to individual scientists at universities.

Advanced Computers. Members on Thursday will take up a bill (HR 656) that would establish a multi-agency federal program to assist in the development of high-speed super-computers.

Almost $2.9 billion would be authorized over the next five years to establish a federal program to promote private-sector and academic research on computer chips and other elements of advanced computer technology. About $389 million would be authorized for fiscal 1992.

Six agencies would share the money, with the National Science Foundation receiving the most, $1.5 billion. The National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Departments of Commerce, Energy and Defense would also participate.

Technology Loans. Commerce Department programs to boost research and development in advanced technology would be authorized under legislation (HR 1989) the House will consider on Thursday.

About $90 million for fiscal 1992 would be authorized for the Advanced Technology Program, a $54 million increase over current spending and President Bush's fiscal 1992 request.

Radio Spectrum. A bill (HR 531) that would free up scarce radio frequencies for commercial use will be considered by the House on Tuesday.

The bill would open up 200 megahertz of the government-held radio spectrum for private-sector use. Backers of the bill say it is needed to make room for such new technologies as high-definition television and microcell communications.

Striped Bass. A federal program to protect the Atlantic striped bass would be reauthorized under a bill (HR 2387) the House plans to take up on Tuesday.

The 1984 Atlantic Striped Bass Conservation Act would be renewed through fiscal 1994. The act allows the federal government to bar temporarily bass fishing in the coastal waters of states that do not comply with federal guidelines to protect the striped bass.

Drift Net Moratorium. On Tuesday, House members will also consider two resolutions that call for a moratorium on all large-scale drift net fishing.

Critics of drift net use say the large nets needlessly kill marine life such as sea birds and mammals.

H Res 182 would urge the European Community to ban the use of large-scale driftnets. H Con Res 113 would call on the president to seek an international ban on drift net fishing by June 1992, along the lines of a U.N. resolution approved last year.

Committee Action

Defense Authorization. The Senate Armed Services Committee on Wednesday and Thursday will begin marking up the fiscal 1992 defense authorization bill (S 1066). The markup will be closed.

Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., has been trying to shore up support for the B-2 bomber program over the past few weeks. Of the 20 senators on the panel, nine voted against B-2 production in 1990.

The House passed a $291 billion defense authorization measure (HR 2100) on May 22 that includes no funds for any additional B-2s beyond the 15 bombers already funded. The administration is requesting funding for 75 bombers.

Meetings & Events Today

Subcommittee markup of the bill begins today in the Defense Industry and Technology Subcommittee. Five other subcommittees will begin work tomorrow.

D.C. Appropriations. The Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on the District of Columbia on Wednesday will mark up the fiscal 1992 spending bill (HR 2699) for the District of Columbia.

The House-passed version would allow the District to use locally raised revenue to subsidize abortions for poor women.

Milk Supports. On Thursday, the House Agriculture Committee will mark up draft legislation that would increase government subsidies to dairy farmers and cap government purchases of surplus milk. The bill aims to help dairy farmers hurt by plunging milk prices.

Energy Bill. The House Energy and Commerce Subcommittee on Energy and Power plans to begin work on Wednesday on a draft bill that would set U.S. policy on energy production, conservation and fuel efficiency.

Action on the first day is expected to be dominated by statements by panel members. But lawmakers could begin work on sections dealing with natural gas, energy efficiency or the Strategic Petroleum Reserve, where oil is stored as insurance against a disruption of supply.

Black Lung. The House Education panel's Labor Standards Subcommittee on Thursday will mark up legislation (HR 1637) to assist more people with black lung disease.

The legislation would ease requirements for coal miners to be eligible for financial assistance under the Black Lung Benefits Act of 1969. Specifically, the bill would make benefits available to people without requiring extensive medical evidence of the disease. Currently, employers can require workers to undergo numerous medical exams before the workers are eligible for benefits.

Veterans' COLA. The House Veterans' Affairs Subcommittee on Compensation, Pension and Insurance on Wednesday will mark up legislation (HR 1046) that would provide disabled veterans with an automatic annual cost-of-living adjustment (COLA).

The Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee on June 26 approved similar legislation (S 775), which would provide disabled veterans with the same annual COLA that Social Security recipients get.

NOAA User Fees. The House Ways and Means panel on Wednesday will mark up provisions of a bill (HR 2130) reauthorizing the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration that would impose fees on services provided by NOAA. ■

MEETING WITH GOVERNOR GARDNER
AND OFFICIALS WITH WASHINGTON STATE SCHOOLS
FOR THE 21ST CENTURY

- Booth (Gardner) and Joel (Pritchard), I want to thank you for pulling this group together.
- I have heard a great deal from Lamar (Alexander), Roger (Porter), and others about your schools for the 21st Century.
- Today, we are establishing the new America schools development corporation to fund research and development for a new generation of schools.

- I am eager to get this briefing started so that I can learn firsthand what your experience has shown.
- Booth, why don't I turn this over to you.

MEETING WITH NEW AMERICAN SCHOOLS
DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION BOARD MEMBERS

- It's great to see so many friends here.
I am delighted that you have moved so quickly as you have to involve the private sector in New American Schools. It's been two and a half months since I announced the America 2000 strategy and already you have accomplished much.

-- I know how committed you are to improving American education. The crusade we are engaged in is historic -- the transformation of American education. This means reinvigorating American education...starting from scratch with fresh thinking and open minds. No questions should be off limits, no answers automatically assumed. We know there is no single solution for every school. We're interested in finding a variety of ways to improve our schools.

- Your leadership in establishing the New American Schools Development Corporation will forge another partnership between the education and corporate communities. By providing the resources for research and development teams, you will help communities create schools that will reach the national education goals, including world class standards in five core subjects.

- Our challenge amounts to nothing less than a revolution in American education. A battle for our future.

- I am very grateful that you are partners in this quest; I look forward to your report. You are off to a great start, and I am certain that your enthusiasm will persuade others to join you.

- And now I'll turn this over to Lamar, our dedicated and talented Secretary of Education...because what I'm here to do is learn more about this board and the plans you all have for it.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE

WASHINGTON

9112441

July 5, 1991

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

From: James A. Baker, III JAB

1. Lebanon: Cease-Fire in the South. The Lebanese government reached an agreement with the PLO on July 4 under which the PLO will dispose of all its medium and heavy weapons. The parties will also continue a dialogue on civil and social rights for Palestinians in Lebanon. This accord marks a major victory not only for the Lebanese government but also for Saudi Arabia, which brokered the Taif Agreement, and for our policies which supported its implementation. An agreement on civil rights for Palestinians would further normalize the situation and may contribute to an improved atmosphere for the peace process. In the meantime, we can expect the Lebanese to press for US help in getting the Israeli-backed Army of South Lebanon out of Jezzin, a symbolically important Christian village in south Lebanon that is outside Israel's self-declared security zone. (Ø)

2. Northern Ireland: Talks End. The British government on July 3 decided to halt the talks on Northern Ireland after two months largely devoted to procedural disputes. UK Secretary of State for Northern Ireland Brooke concluded that no agreement could be reached on the basic issue of restoring self-government in Northern Ireland. He also wanted to preempt a Unionist walk-out to protest the scheduled July 16 meeting of the Anglo-Irish Conference. Despite the difficulties, the parties in Northern Ireland agree that the talks have produced genuine dialogue, and both the British and Irish governments believe that the discussions can be resumed, although it may require agreeing again on procedures. (Ø)

3. Ethiopia: Addis Ababa Conference. The conference to form a transitional government ended today after five days of free and open debate. The parties agreed on distribution of seats in a transitional government, and on a charter of basic principles to guide the government. The charter commits to fundamental human rights and provides for ratification of a constitution and free elections within two-and-a-half years. A separate agreement with the provisional government in Eritrea postpones the referendum there, and establishes a de facto working relationship that avoids the question of Eritrean independence. (Ø)

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT BS
SUBJECT: Reply to Letter from Prime Minister Kaifu of Japan

Purpose

To respond to Prime Minister Kaifu's serious concern about the current state of our bilateral relations with China. Your letter underlines the commonality of U.S. and Japanese views and outlines your views of next steps in Sino-American relations, particularly with respect to MFN and proliferation.

Background

Prime Minister Kaifu shares your concern about the need for MFN and believes that the security of Asia is based upon a stable U.S.-China relationship. Japan maintains a long-term historical view toward China and sees constructive engagement as the only way to successfully influence Chinese policy.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter to Prime Minister Kaifu at Tab A.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT

SUBJECT: Response to President Mugabe of Zimbabwe re UNSYG Candidate

Purpose

To reply to President Mugabe's letter putting forth the candidacy of Zimbabwean Bernard Chidzero for the post of United Nations Secretary General.

Background

President Mugabe has sent you a letter (Tab B) via Vice President Quayle commending to you Zimbabwe's candidate for UNSYG, Bernard Chidzero. He is currently Finance Minister and has long experience in the UN system, including presiding over the Seventh Session of the UN Conference on Trade and Development and serving at the Assistant Secretary level. He is on the OAU short list of UNSYG candidates.

Your proposed response at Tab A is complimentary of Minister Chidzero but makes no commitment to support him. The response also acknowledges Zimbabwe's helpful handling of the UN Security Council Presidency during the Gulf War and notes that you will see him in Washington later this month.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter to President Mugabe at Tab A.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT
SUBJECT: Reply to President Ozal of Turkey on Follow-up to World Summit for Children

Purpose

To assure U.S. support and participation in children's vaccine development, as follow-up to the World Summit for Children.

Background

President Ozal has written to you about the importance of pursuing the Children's Vaccine Initiative (CVI), which he endorsed at the World Summit for Children last Fall. He notes some of the benefits of new vaccine development and Turkish interest in collaboration, and he urges strong U.S. support.

Your response compliments President Ozal on both Turkey's achievement of universal immunization coverage of infants in six vaccine-preventable diseases and his personal interest in further vaccine development. It outlines U.S. continuing support for development of a children's vaccine and ties it back to the overall goal of the World Summit for Children -- a better future for the world's children.

OPD and HHS have cleared the response at Tab A.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter to President Ozal at Tab A.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT
SUBJECT: Reply to Venezuelan President Perez

Purpose

To respond to President Perez' May 14 letter on strengthening the Organization of American States (OAS), and making additional points on El Salvador, Peru, and Suriname.

Background

President Perez wrote you in advance of the OAS General Assembly proposing some ideas on strengthening the OAS' ability to defend democracy in the hemisphere. We worked with the Venezuelans at the General Assembly, and produced an excellent resolution that will put the OAS squarely into any situation where there is a violent disruption of democratic rule in the hemisphere.

At State's request, we are also including several additional points for Perez on the situation in El Salvador, Peru and Suriname.

RECOMMENDATION

That you sign the letter to President Perez at Tab A.

MEMORANDUM FOR THE PRESIDENT

FROM: BRENT SCOWCROFT

SUBJECT: Congratulatory letter from President Lacalle of Uruguay on the signing of the "Rose Garden Agreement"

Purpose

To give President Lacalle a warm reply to his letter of June 18 on the trade and investment framework agreement.

Background

President Lacalle has been an enthusiastic supporter of the trade and investment framework agreement, and his letter reflects this. Your brief reply, which has been cleared with the State Department, conveys your sense of satisfaction over the signing of the "Rose Garden Agreement" and your determination to make the agreement work in practice.

WHAT A DIFFERENCE A PERCENT MAKES
 TWENTY FOUR LITTLE BILLION
 RISING UP TO A ZILLION
 WHAT A WAY TO MAKE HAY

*Danvers
 paper*

- (1) Given: It is desirable to bring inflation down on an orderly basis, and to keep it down. That is not at issue. What may be at issue is: How much real growth will be sought or allowed -- as inflation is being controlled.
- (2) Fact: All other things being equal, the Fed's control of money supply will -- over time -- be a significant determinant of the real GNP growth rate.
- (3) Self-fulfilling assumption: If the Fed assumes that the long-term sustainable real GNP growth rate is about 2% (as has been the tendency under Greenspan), this will prove to be self-fulfilling. That is, the associated conduct of monetary policy -- given an appropriate commitment to fighting inflation -- will produce money growth sufficient to sustain real GNP at only 2% (or less, if there are shocks to the system).
- (4) Fact: The Administration's policies are oriented toward (and predicated upon) a long-term average real GNP growth rate of a little over 3%. NOTE: The long-term average growth rate since W.W.II has been about 3.2%.
- (5) The one-percent difference: All other things being equal, a sustained 1% higher real GNP growth rate would amount to roughly the following in either lower federal deficits or higher resources available to spend on initiatives:

($ billion)
1992	1993	1994	1995	1996	5-year Total
20	40	65	90	120	335

NOTE: The first year total alone is larger than the entire "150" account. The five-year pattern of savings noted above would be sufficient to:

- (a) advance health insurance reform on a basis that could cover all those not now covered; and
- (b) promote stable, market-oriented democracy in Eastern Europe and Central America; and
- (c) contribute to the financing of another "Marshall Plan" for either:
 - (i) the Soviet Union; or
 - (ii) America! and
- (d) avoid another tax increase.

In short, a mere one percent could make the difference between undistinguished performance and dramatic achievement for the remainder of the Bush Presidency. Q.E.D.

- 1) Growth in the U. S. from January, 1989, to August, 1990, was 1.5%; from January, 1989, to January, 1991, it was even less...approximately 1%.

Many economists feel 2.75% to 3% is an achievable target which would allow GNP revenue growth to accommodate needed programs without resurgence of inflation.

What changes in FRB policies would be needed to insure 2.75% - 3% growth in GNP?

- 2) The M2 cone is currently set at 6.5% - 2.5%. Is this the right cone and, if so, where should the FRB actual target be within this cone.

- 3) Is the next blip up in the inflation figures going to be the cause for a tightening?

- 4) What relationship and responsibility should the FRB have to the S & L bailout and concerns about the state of the banking industry. Wouldn't a healthier growth scenario aid in pushing these problems through the system?

1. Chairman Greenspan's term as Federal Reserve Board Chairman expires August 11, 1991 (his term as Governor expires January 31, 1992). The Chairman's term runs for 4 years, and hence the new Chairman will serve through the summer of 1995.
2. The Fed's monetary policy has great impact on the economy. Obviously, the conduct of monetary policy depends heavily upon the Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. While far from the sole influence on the course of economic activity, monetary policy is a major determinant of output and employment in the short and medium term, and the primary determinant of inflation over the longer term. There is general agreement that monetary policy works only after a long lag (on average around three quarters), e.g., once a sustained tightening or easing of monetary policy begins, its effects show up several quarters later. The growth of the money supply is not only a necessary input to sustain economic growth, but can by itself, if slowed enough, as it has been for the last several years, guarantee a sluggishly growing economy (with inflation falling somewhat more rapidly than it otherwise would).
3. The state of the economy will strongly affect the political climate through both the economic condition of American households and businesses, and through its effect on government revenues, outlays, the budget deficit, and the resources available. Hence, the future course of monetary policy is immensely important to the success of your Presidency.
4. There is a general consensus that monetary policy achieved a greater degree of credibility during the 1980s than in the 1970s: inflation was much lower and a long economic expansion ensued; this credibility in principle makes it easier for the Fed to adjust to shocks to the economy, such as the recent oil price shock. Also, maintaining this credibility is important for future economic stability, e.g., keeping inflationary expectations in line.
5. The goal of monetary policy should be a credible and predictable expansion of the money supply at a rate sufficient to support solid economic expansion, while continuing to make gradual progress in reducing inflation. Some people, using the old Keynesian Phillips curve (inflation/unemployment or inflation/growth trade off) argue that lower inflation can only be had by continued substantial slack in the economy, with high unemployment. We reject this view. A reduction in expectations of inflation brought about by credible monetary policy (and fiscal policy, such as maintaining the credible budget agreement reached last year) will engender confidence that we will not "reinflate," which will reduce inflationary expectations, and long-term bond rates.

6. The rate of growth of the money supply over a sustained period of time (for example, a year) will heavily determine the course of economic growth. As can be seen from Chart 1, the Federal Reserve has generally been lowering its money growth target range. Moreover, it has allowed money to grow sluggishly toward the bottom of these ranges, and then has adjusted downward the level of the target to where the money supply ends the year--which recently has been well below the middle of the target range. This cumulatively has led to a substantial slowdown in the growth of money and credit, and this has been one of the major reasons for the slowdown in the economy, pictured in Chart 2. Cumulative economic growth in the first four years of your Administration could well turn out to be the lowest in any postwar first term.
7. Note that even if the oil shock had not occurred, the Fed's so-called soft landing strategy would have, at best, narrowly avoided a recession, and still put the country through a sustained period of very slow growth. The cumulative impact on the economy in terms of increased unemployment, lost output, missed investment opportunities, would have been almost the same as an average recession. In any event, the Fed's slow money expansion left no cushion in the event of a shock to the economy, such as the oil shock.
8. Differences between the Administration and the Federal Reserve, while important, have probably been less severe and strained than in most Administrations.
9. A detailed critique of monetary policy since the beginning of your Administration would include the following:

- a. Interest Rate Decisions:

The Fed inappropriately tightened by raising interest rates in early 1989, after a very substantial increase in 1988. Most if not all of the increase in 1988 was justified, as the economy had been booming, unemployment was reaching historical lows, capacity utilization was high, and there was some legitimate concern that an attempt to continue at that rate as the economy approached capacity might lead to an increase in inflationary expectations and accelerate inflation. Thus, the Fed should get credit for heading off an incipient increase in inflation in 1988. But they went too far and held rates too high for too long. We argued this with them in early 1989 when they misconstrued a temporary blip in the inflation numbers in the first two months of your Administration as a possible permanent increase in the underlying inflation rate. The Fed did not start to ease until mid 1989 when it was clear that the blip in inflation was temporary.

But early in 1990, the Fed decided to stop easing, and the Federal Funds rate remained essentially on a plateau until mid-October when easing began once again. This left the economy with virtually no elbow room should there be some additional external shock, such as from oil markets.

The Fed provided only a token response to the budget agreement and to the oil shock. Our own internal analyses--directly conveyed to them--showed that the Fed should have adjusted to the budget agreement by quickly reducing the Fed Funds rate 150 basis points. We suggested a similar response to the oil shock. However, more substantial easing did not begin until mid-November as it became clear the economy was in a recession.

To summarize, the tightening in early 1988 was clearly appropriate and probably prevented an increase in inflation. However, the subsequent easing was delayed several times--perhaps most harmfully in the Summer and Fall of 1990. When the easing finally came in November 1990 and early 1991, it should have been faster. By early August 1990, the sharp 18-month slowdown in the economy was clear, the oil shock was at hand, and money growth was low. The slowdown itself was virtually equivalent to a recession in terms of reductions in pressures on capacity.

b. Money Growth Decisions:

As mentioned above, another key measure of monetary policy is the money supply together with the money supply growth targets. M2 is the Fed's central money supply measure (see Chart 1). The Fed has gradually reduced the growth rate target for M2 during the last 3 years. This is in keeping with the goal of steadily reducing inflation. The mid-point for M2 growth is now 4.5 percent which would imply a long-run inflation rate of 1.5 percent and a 3 percent growth of potential GNP with no changes in M2 velocity. (It will take a while for inflation to get that low, so the Fed may have to be above its mid-point, unless velocity rises, to support reasonable growth over the short and medium term) Lowering of targets for 1991 was inappropriate, given the weakness in economic activity and the shortfall of M2 at the end of 1990. Money supply growth has generally been below the Fed's targets. This was especially true in late 1990 as the economy was in a recession. Slowing money growth is particularly inappropriate in such a period.

10. There are differences of opinion concerning the economy's growth potential. The long-term average annual real GNP growth rate has been about 3.2 percent in the post-war period. This reflected an average productivity growth rate of around 1.8 percent and an average growth of the effective number of workers of about 1.4 percent. At different times in the post-war period productivity grew more rapidly and the labor force more slowly. In the 1950s and 1960s, productivity growth was more rapid than the average, and the labor force grew slowly. In the 1970s and 1980s, the labor force and employment grew rapidly, whereas productivity growth was abysmal in the 1970s and rebounded only partially in the 1980s. A fundamental goal of national economic policy, and of your Administration's economic policy, is to enhance productivity growth. While the labor force is likely to be growing less rapidly in the future for demographic reasons, moving back to something like the average post-World War II productivity growth rate of 1.8 percent would allow the economy to grow at around 3 percent. The difference between a 3 percent growth rate (which will require adoption of the pro-growth tax, budget, trade and education policies your Administration has proposed) and the 2--2-1/2 percent growth that some believe is the economy's current long-run potential, is politically immense. It is the difference between arguing over division of a very sluggishly growing pie, and having more resources available to serve important private wants and public priorities. For example, a one percentage point increase in the growth rate (say from 2 to 3 percent) means about $25 billion more in deficit reduction or resources available at the same rate of deficit reduction for other purposes, this amount growing over time. It means that instead of a relatively successful economy and the popular backing, and resources, for some of the things you want to do most, in economic, foreign, defense, and domestic policy areas, the political process would focus on relatively stagnant living standards and distribution or fairness issues. In short, while it seems to be pretty modest, the difference between a solidly growing economy and a poorly or sluggishly growing economy is likely to impact enormously the success of your Presidency.

11. What can be expected from the Fed in the future? The Fed will be concerned about keeping inflation in check and reducing it further. While the costs of low and steady inflation in the 4 percent range are much less than the double digit wildly fluctuating inflation of the 1970s and early 1980s, it is still desirable to pursue a gradually declining inflation rate. Partly, this is because a stable inflation rate in the 4 percent range would eventually become viewed as a political floor with only one direction for inflation to go and that is up. This would worsen inflationary expectations, increase uncertainty about longer-term investments, and unnecessarily raise long-term interest rates. So it is appropriate for the Fed, regardless of the Chairman, to be committed to policies that produce greater price stability over the longer term. With Greenspan as Chairman, the Fed is also very unlikely to make major mistakes. He is a very solid, intelligent, and experienced person who is unlikely to panic in the face of any severe international disruption. However, it is also safe to say that his primary goal would be to get inflation down. He would obviously like to have the economy continue to grow, but it would be foolish to expect him to want anything other than inflation lower at the end of his second term than it was when he took office.

12. You can probably expect Greenspan to try to steer something of a balance between modest growth and extreme concern about any possibility or appearance of increased inflation. The central bank ought to be vigilant against increased inflation, but must avoid the "only way to get inflation down is to run a soft economy for an extended period of time or to have a recession," way of thinking.

Dear Barbara:

The other day I sent you a note enclosing an Associated Press clipping concerning John Sununu.

When thinking this weekend about my having written this, I realized I should have stressed my great regret that the Chief of Staff did not show better judgement and basic respect for the Presidency. Additionally, I was saddened and troubled by this unfortunate record on the part of Mr. Sununu, but frankly, I am far more interested in respect shown the Presidency.

Sincerely,

Walter

P.S. As you well know, power must be handled with the greatest of concern and used sparingly.

Dear Barbara:

I am enclosing an item that appeared on my Associated Press printer today which includes an alleged quote from Chief of Staff Sununu that I trust was not correct.

When one considers the generous reasonableness of the President's stated support for Mr. Sununu at this juncture, it would certainly be unseemly for him to be "stung that the President hasn't given him a rousing endorsement."

While I continue to hope that this was not properly attributable to the Chief of Staff, life does give us shocks and surprises from time to time.

Ever warmly,

WHITE HOUSE CHIEF OF STAFF JOHN SUNUNU REPORTEDLY IS CONCERNED THAT PRESIDENT BUSH HAS BEEN EMBARRASSED BY THE FUROR OVER HIS PERSONAL USE OF GOVERNMENT AIRCRAFT. BUT THE NEW YORK TIMES QUOTES PEOPLE WHO'VE TALKED WITH SUNUNU LATELY AS SAYING HE'S STUNG THAT THE PRESIDENT HASN'T GIVEN HIM A ROUSING ENDORSEMENT. BUSH HAS SAID HE WON'T FIRE SUNUNU. THE TIMES SAYS SUNUNU IS GOING TO SCALE BACK HIS TRAVEL TO TRY TO CALM THE FUROR.

President's Trip to Greece and Turkey

- Will be first visit of an American President to Greece and Turkey in 32 years.
- Want to stress our excellent relationship with Ozal and Mitsotakis and both governments--NATO allies.
- Look forward to discussing with both leaders how to improve our security ties and our economic relationships.
- These are important relationships for the U.S. and we want to make them even stronger as a result of my visit.

Aid to Greece and Turkey--7:10

- We are committed to the security of both Greece and Turkey.
 - We believe assistance levels we have requested are adequate to meet their respective needs which, of course, are different.
 - Our requested $350 FMS for Greece is intended to strengthen military forces of an important ally.
 - We have requested increased aid to Turkey--$700 million in FMS and ESF
 - Due to its increased responsibilities for security in Southwest Asia stemming from the Gulf crisis.
- (FYI: 7:10 has been imposed by Congress on successive administrations which have never accepted it as a basis for allocating aid to Greece and Turkey)

Cyprus

- The U.S. hopes for a comprehensive resolution to the Cyprus problem.
- We support the current efforts of the UN Secretary General to range an international conference on Cyprus this autumn for the parties directly concerned if sufficient progress is made this summer.
- We believe the status quo is unacceptable. Working with the UNSYG, we are ready to do anything we can to help move forward.
- This will be a major issue on my trip and I look forward to discussing it in depth with both the Greek and Turkish governments.

EMBASSY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
PARIS
June 17, 1991

THE AMBASSADOR

Dear Mr. President:

As I near completion of my second year as your representative in Paris, I would like to mention to you some side observations concerning the optics of U.S. diplomacy in France. Briefly and bluntly put, while we in this Mission welcome wholeheartedly official and Congressional delegations to international meetings and do our utmost to ensure that their business here is successfully carried out, it occurs to me more and more that the size of many of these delegations surpasses reasonable bounds. This makes them much too costly and, just as bad, harmful to the U.S. image abroad.

I recently conveyed to the State Department my views on one bloated U.S. delegation that outnumbered its nineteen foreign counterparts by one hundred percent.

The November 1990 CSCE Paris Summit stands as another shocker. Excluding your key staff and the press, over 480 U.S. government employees successfully argued their way on to your coattails. They rented 2,500 nights-worth of hotel rooms, hired nearly 150 vehicles (many chauffeur-driven) and ate over 5,000 meals, all at the taxpayers' expense.

This short list, from that CSCE summit, which excludes military aircraft, is a revealing example:

Hotel rental	$ 582,386.12
White House Communications	$ 482,630.00
State Department Overtime	$ 71,469.00
Expendable Items	$ 29,496.00
Vehicle Rental	$ 164,977.08
Telephones	$ 17,582.00
Commercial Air Fare (estimated)	$ 179,180.00
Per Diem	$ 311,708.00
TOTAL	$1,839,428.20

The President
The White House
Washington, D.C.

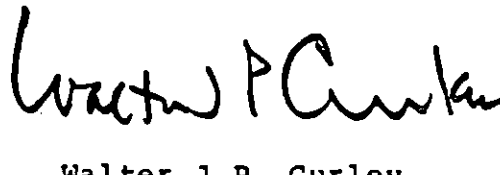

Perhaps of still greater concern is the impression often left by these battalion-sized delegations. When the critical mass of Americans passes a certain level, some officials appear to forget they are guests in a foreign country and toss manners -- and even civility -- to the winds. I recall one junior staffer who rudely insisted on being included in a meeting at the French Prime Minister's office. In the end, French guards had to physically restrain this young woman. In another case, Secret Service agents roughed up a (to them) unidentified Frenchman - then Prime Minister Rocard. During the 1989 Paris Summit, one of President Mitterrand's most senior advisors made a call on me to object officially to the rudeness of certain officials. There are, alas, many such incidents.

A ranking allied military man recently told me that, even at state funerals, gargantuan American delegations have been boorishly loud and impolite, behaving in what he claimed to be a manner bordering on imperial arrogance.

I know this behavior and lack of consideration run directly counter to your view of how America should conduct itself. Your own example has demonstrated that, while America has a responsibility to lead the international community, we should do so with due modesty and respect for others. However, my experience demonstrates the government as a whole is not getting that message.

Mr. President, I believe a forceful reminder from you now could encourage Washington delegations of all sorts to slim down and behave with propriety abroad. Smaller U.S. delegations would save the taxpayer money and enhance America's image overseas.

Respectfully yours,

MEMORANDUM FOR GOVERNOR JOHN H. SUNUNU

FROM: Carla A. Hills CAH

SUBJECT: USTR Availability at the London Economic Summit

As we discussed last week, I am very uncomfortable with the prospect that the President may not have his advisers with in-depth trade expertise close at hand at the London Summit.

We know that the Uruguay Round will be on the Summit agenda. The Dutch Trade Minister, Yvonne van Rooy, told me last week that the U.K. was pressing for the Round discussion to be the first item on the agenda, to ensure that it receives the attention of the Heads of State prior to Gorbachev's arrival.

Both van Rooy and my EC counterpart, Vice President Frans Andriessen, advised me last week that President Delors intends at the Summit, "to explore ways of bringing the GATT talks to a successful conclusion." Neither van Rooy nor Andriessen could elaborate on Delors' intentions, but we cannot rule out the possibility that he may make a proposal. If he does, I believe that it is crucial that USTR be on the scene so that we can avoid the confusion we faced at the Houston Summit.

You may recall that Clayton Yeutter and I were invited to the Houston Summit, but were not provided direct access to the conference site. When Prime Minister Thatcher tabled a proposal to break the deadlock on agriculture in the Round, no one with detailed knowledge of the negotiations was present and Clayton and I were summoned to the site. A couple of hours later, when Clayton and I were finally admitted to the conference site, damage had already been done: the U.K. language, which seemed innocuous, contained code words harmful to U.S. interests. My Deputy, Ambassador Katz and my Chief of Staff, Gary Edson, subsequently negotiated until 4 a.m. in an effort to walk us back from the U.K. draft. In the end, we minimized the damage, but quite honestly the outcome could have been better had the U.K. proposal been rejected when it was tabled.

This history makes me very uncomfortable at the prospect that USTR could be in Washington when the Uruguay Round is being discussed in London. The President has stated on several occasions that the Round is his top trade priority. That being so, we should be fully prepared to deal with any contingency that arises, helpful or harmful.

The Transformation of Vaclav Havel

PRAGUE—Vaclav Havel the dissident playwright would have laughed at the pinking of the Soviet tank parked in a Prague street as a war memorial. But Vaclav Havel the president had to denounce the playful painting of the tank by parliamentarians while delicate negotiations with Moscow were underway.

When Havel catapulted from street demonstrations to the presidential palace 18 months ago, he promised to shut off Czechoslovakia's arms exports. Havel also proposed the abolition of NATO and the Warsaw Pact. Today he quietly looks for new markets for arms sales and sends his foreign minister to Washington to explore joining the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

And it is hard to imagine Havel, the free spirit of the Velvet Revolution, cooling his heels in public on orders of the awesomely arrogant advance team of Vice President Dan Quayle. But I watched Havel do just that in the spa town of Bardejov 10 days ago.

Quayle's advance team, acting in his name although not necessarily with his approval, wrangled bitterly with local officials who refused to dig up the cobblestones in the middle of Bardejov's centuries-old town square so Quayle could be photographed planting two trees there. The Americans also pressed the mayor to order 5,000 schoolchildren to turn out on a rainy day to wave U.S. flags for Quayle. (About 1,000 did show up.)

"We used to have to do such things when the Russians were here," one Bardejov municipal official said. "But not now."

Security during the vice president's speech inside the town's church would be "run like a concentration camp," one Quayle press aide vowed to a shocked Bardejov volunteer group. The following day Havel and two visiting European dignitaries, the president of Hungary and the prime minister of Poland, had to enter the church and take their seats 20 minutes before Quayle appeared because of the "concentration camp" security arrangements.

Havel made no fuss. As president, he no longer has the power to ignore official foolishness, as he did when he was a mere dissident.

The transformation of Havel from poetic rebel into something approaching a conventional chief executive is not simply a story of office and responsibility forcing change and compromise on an individual. It is more complex than that, since Havel was never quite as naive and idealistic as he is often portrayed in the media. He is not shedding principles wholesale.

He is, however, discovering new realities and adjusting to them.

He has learned the meaning of the American adage that all politics is local, at least when a government's program is at stake. And he has learned how severely the collapse of the Soviet Union affects his nation and its options. The Soviet storm roaring on his doorstep has convinced Havel and his advisers that a NATO umbrella would be useful in a pinch.

Havel feels that his hands are tied on arms exports. Ending these sales would bring massive unemployment, which would exasperate the explosive nationalist sentiment already apparent in the eastern region of Slovakia, the home of many of the weapons plants. Havel is making progress in containing the separatist movement in Slovakia and does not want to risk new tensions there.

Arms production accounts for 8 percent of the nation's gross national product. Havel has turned a blind eye to a $200 million tank sale to Syria, which is going ahead despite U.S. objections. Discussions also continue with Iran on a new arms deal.

"We are learning that Americans and others don't object to arms sales but to the markets to which the sales are made," said one Havel adviser. "So we are desperately looking for new markets, for good guys who will buy our Soviet-style products."

The turn to NATO is less abrupt than it appears. Havel publicly supported the deployment of intermediate-range nuclear missiles to Europe in 1983 and praised NATO. Despite appearances to the contrary, he has never been a peacenik.

But last year "when the outcome of the revolutions in this region was so uncertain, we wanted to get rid of the bipolar system that divided Europe. That meant getting rid of NATO and the Warsaw Pact," says Martin Palous, deputy foreign minister and a Havel friend. The Havel government was caught by surprise by the swiftness of the Soviet collapse and of German unification.

"Now our priority is to find some stability, and NATO is the only structure that still works in a Pan-European context," adds Palous. Havel has used the new open endorsement of NATO "to make the point abroad and at home that we understand that we live in the real world." It also helps reposition Havel's more radical allies in the government toward the center for next year's parliamentary elections.

Power can be a liberating experience. George Bush has used his presidency to plunge into foreign affairs on a grand scale and is having a heck of a time. Havel's experience is the reverse. As leader of a small country with little influence abroad and gigantic problems at home, he is again a political prisoner.

I am deeply disturbed by the extensive media bashing of John Sununu over the past several weeks. It is obvious that they smell blood and believe by intensifying a public attack upon his activities, they will force his removal.

Frankly, I know how important John has been to your administration, and I am amazed by his ability to constantly stay on top of so many complex issues simultaneously. It would be extremely difficult to replace him with someone of equally high caliber.

While it appears John made some errors in judgment, I am certain that steps have already been taken to insure that these problems will not be repeated. It has become more and more obvious that there are some high level persons in the administration who would like to see him replaced. In my view, that would be a serious mistake.

I strongly urge you to ride this media storm out and retain John in the present role he serves so well.

President Washington Visits the White House - March 14th 1797

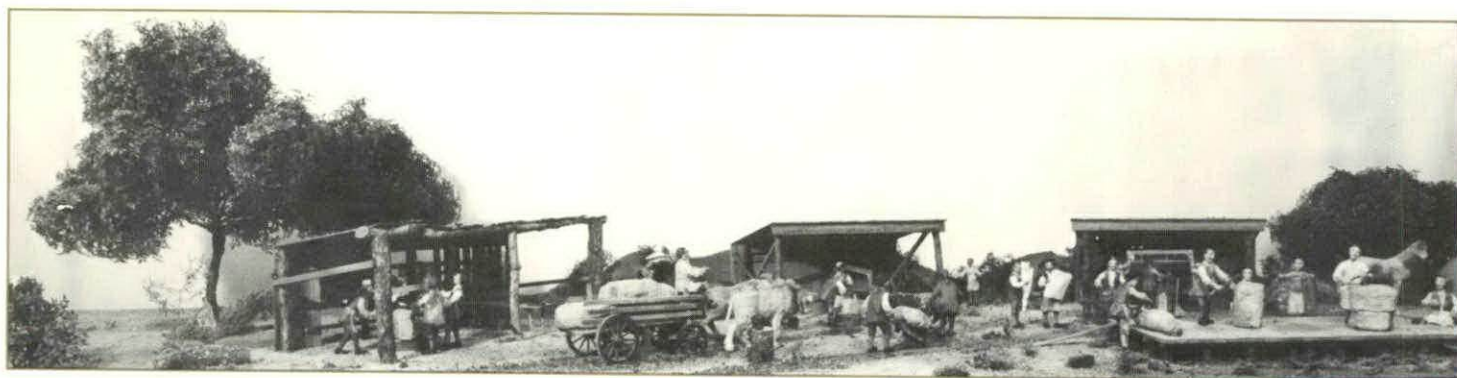

The Building of the President's House in Replica - to Celebrate the White House Bicentennial

George Washington and his entourage of coaches clattered to a stop in the slippery spring mud around a busy construction site near the Potomac River. The motley assemblage of stonemasons, carpenters, brickmasons and laborers dropped their tools and honored the retiring hero with a heartfelt 16-gun salute. It was March 14, 1797, and an aging Washington was pausing to inspect one of his fondest projects, the nearly completed President's House in the emerging new capital city of the Republic. The General must have smiled in his satisfaction that his successors would not live in the ornate palace some planners would have preferred, but in a stately and dignified mansion more appropriate for the elected leader of the modern world's first democracy.

In October 1992, the United States that General Washington forged in the clamor of the Revolution, and raised toward rowdy adolescence during eight years as President, celebrates the bicentennial of the laying of the cornerstone of "the President's House," that elegant and classic residence we know today as the White House.

As part of the White House 200th Birthday celebration, Artisans of many disciplines are re-creating that memorable March day in 1797. Much like the construction of the original house two centuries ago, the skills of a small army of artisans and craftspeople are coming together to sculpt and carve in incredible detail the bustle of construction around the rising stone building.

As the White House is Representative of the Building of our Democracy - The Diorama Celebrates the Common People - At Work.

The accent is on common people at work toward an uncommon achievement. At ground level, laborers tramp the churning mud to deliver lumber and freshmade brick. Stonecutters divide great hunks of limestone with moistened wire saws, dousing the wire with water and sand to cut redhot friction heat. At this stage, carpenters scamper up and down scaffolding to cap a roof on the great building. Scattered all around are the cooks, blacksmiths, teamsters, wheelwrights and others who support the years-long construction job. And amid the confusion, the chickens, hogs and cattle who will be next week's rations wait in pens or roam free around the site.

In bringing this incredible project to life in such minute detail, John Zweifel is no stranger to the President's House. Over the past 30 years, he and his wife Jan have created, maintained and continuously perfected the famous "White House in Miniature" which has toured all 50 states and countries around the world. Having worked with the cooperation of Presidents since John Kennedy, the Zweifels have opened their 60-foot White House to millions of Americans and others who could otherwise never visit the real mansion in Washington, D.C.

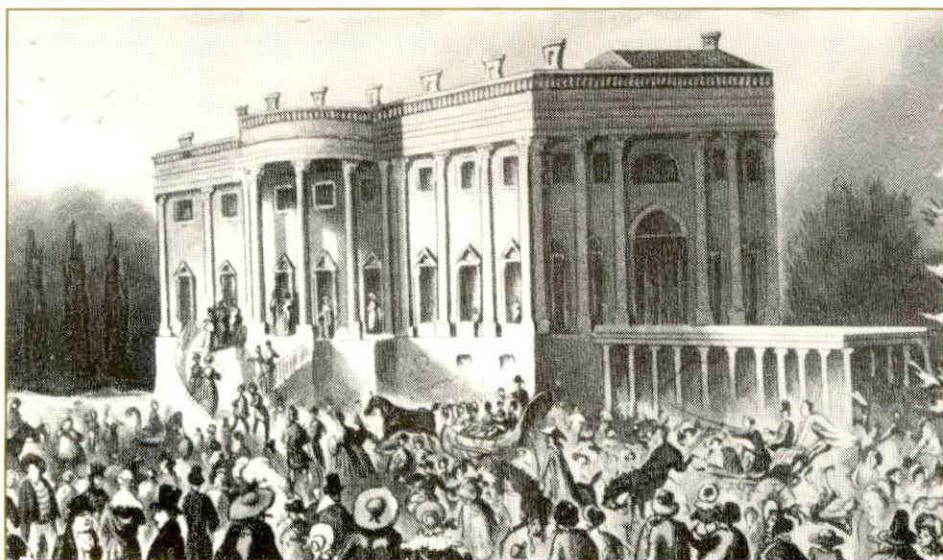

14 by 28 Foot Diorama

Depicts the Building of the Presidents House - with muscle Power and the same sort of tools that built the Colosseum in Rome.

Modern admirers of this work will be reminded that what was to become our beloved White House was built before the industrial revolution which harnessed synthetic energy, with muscle power and the same sort of tools which built the Colosseum in Rome 17 centuries before.

Using the scale of 3/4-inch-to-one foot, the 14' x 28' diorama focuses on dozens of documented vignettes which capture the tone and spirit of this early American construction crew. It is the fortune of the nation that contemporary eyewitnesses sketched and scribbled their impressions of this unique work site for posterity. The resulting diorama is as accurate as it is stirring in its depiction of this busy scene.

"The Building of the President's House

Celebrates all Americans that appreciate the Freedom and opportunities our country offers . . . its 200th Birthday is reminiscent of the struggle and trials in building the American Dream"

John Zweifel

"The diorama will enable Americans to have a greater appreciation of our founding fathers foresight in creating an entirely new national capital and for the difficulties they had to overcome as well as the only White House Ceremony George Washington ever attended. This "learning tool" will be of great interest to all of our citizens as long as this country exists," states a White House official.

In preparation for the White House Bicentennial, Zweifel is working directly with White House researchers, respected archivists and historians to reconstruct that epochal March day in 1797, when Washington gazes for the last time at the presidential residence he knows will be his personal legacy to unborn generations of Americans and their Presidents.

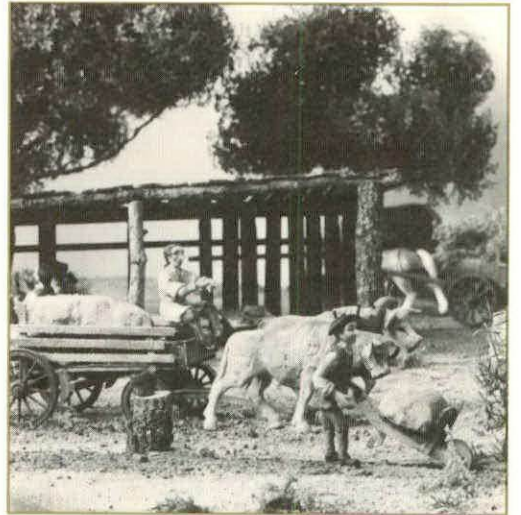

The "Building of the President's House" will go on display in Washington in 1992, to be experienced, studied and admired by hundreds of thousands of White House visitors, and for generations to come
