RECOMMENDED TELEPHONE CALL FOR THE PRESIDENT

TO: SENATOR JIM JEFFORDS (D-VT)

DATE: September 30, 1991

RECOMMENDED BY: Frederick D. McClure fm

PURPOSE: To encourage Senator Jeffords to support your nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

BACKGROUND: Senator Jeffords told Senator Jack Danforth (R-MO) on Friday that he (Jeffords) was truly undecided on the Thomas nomination. Jeffords is quoted in Sunday's New York Times as being uncomfortable supporting Thomas because (1) the vote was not close to unanimous in the Judiciary Committee and (2) more moderate liberals did not vote for Thomas. Jeffords is also concerned about whether Thomas would vote to overturn Roe v. Wade.

Consideration of the nomination is currently scheduled for Thursday and there is some talk of delay, however, our efforts are to complete Senate action so that Thomas can sit with the Court when it begins its new term next Monday.

KEY POINTS: See Attachment.

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS

- Jim, I'm making a few phone calls today to garner public support for my nominee to the Supreme Court, Judge Clarence Thomas.
- Now that the hearings are over, and the nomination is headed to the floor for Senate action this week, I wanted to encourage you to support Judge Thomas.
- I know you have some concerns about whether Thomas would vote to overturn Roe v. Wade. I want you to know that I haven't the slightest idea about where Thomas stands on that issue, and I didn't ask him.
- One thing I do know, however, Thomas is a man of integrity, and I believe him when he says that he does not have a pre-conceived agenda, and that includes the question of Roe v. Wade.
- I hope that you will be able to support Judge Thomas later this week when the nomination is considered by the full Senate.
- I want very much for him to be on the Court next Monday when they begin their next term.
- Can I count on you? And, if so, will you do so publicly before the vote?
- not need*

RECOMMENDED TELEPHONE CALL FOR THE PRESIDENT

TO: SENATOR CHUCK ROBB (D-VA)

DATE: September 30, 1991

RECOMMENDED BY: Frederick D. McClure

PURPOSE: To encourage Senator Robb to publicly support your nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

BACKGROUND: Senator Robb had a good visit with Judge Thomas during the courtesy call. He also introduced Thomas at the beginning of the confirmation hearings. Although he did not give a "total" endorsement, opting to wait upon completion of the hearings, it is my view that he is inclined to support Thomas. Robb, however, has not voiced his position since the completion of the hearings.

Consideration of the nomination is currently scheduled for Thursday and there is some talk of delay, however, our efforts are to complete Senate action so that Thomas can sit with the Court when it begins its new term next Monday.

✓ SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS

- Chuck, I'm making a few phone calls today to garner public support for my nominee to the Supreme Court, Judge Clarence Thomas.
- Now that the hearings are over, and the nomination is headed to the floor for Senate action this week, I wanted to find out if you will be able to publicly support Judge Thomas before full Senate consideration at the end of the week.
- I am concerned that some of your colleagues want to delay consideration of the nomination so as to have an opportunity to build up some opposition.
- I want very much for him to be on the Court next Monday when they begin their next term.
- I think that we will have enough votes to secure Thomas' confirmation. Your early public support, however, would be very useful in this effort.
- Can I count on you? And, if so, will you do so publicly before the vote?

RECOMMENDED TELEPHONE CALL FOR THE PRESIDENT

TO: SENATOR JIM EXON (D-NE)

DATE: September 30, 1991

RECOMMENDED BY: Frederick D. McClure fm

PURPOSE: To encourage Senator Exon to publicly support your nomination of Judge Clarence Thomas to be an Associate Justice of the Supreme Court.

BACKGROUND: Senator Exon had a good visit with Judge Thomas during the courtesy call. Indeed, Exon voiced initial support for Thomas during a press availability at the time. Thomas' wife is from Nebraska and her family has known Exon for quite some time. To my knowledge, Exon has not voiced his position since the completion of the hearings. A public statement on the floor prior to Senate consideration of the nomination would be helpful.

Consideration of the nomination is currently scheduled for Thursday and there is some talk of delay, however, our efforts are to complete Senate action so that Thomas can sit with the Court when it begins its new term next Monday.

KEY POINTS: See Attachment.

SUGGESTED TALKING POINTS

- Jim, I'm making a few phone calls today to garner public support for my nominee to the Supreme Court, Judge Clarence Thomas.
- I know that you and Thomas had a very good courtesy call visit. Maybe it's because of that Nebraska tie.
- Now that the hearings are over, and the nomination is headed to the floor for Senate action this week, I am concerned that some of your colleagues may want to delay the vote.
- I hope that your support for Judge Thomas remains strong. If you could make a public statement on the floor early this week, I believe it would be helpful in getting Thomas confirmed before the Court begins its new term next Monday.
- Do you think that you could make such a public statement?

U.S. EXPRESSES SATISFACTION WITH SOVIETS' INITIAL REACTION

Top Administration officials said Sunday they were encouraged by Moscow's reactions to President Bush's unilateral nuclear arms reduction initiative and did not expect instant reciprocity....

"We have every reason to believe they will respond affirmatively," Secretary Cheney said on "This Week With David Brinkley." "It'll take them time to absorb precisely what we've done and sit down and develop their own substantive response to it."...

Cheney said Bush's initiatives will produce "long-term savings," but in the short run, will involve added costs in "terminating contracts, moving systems around, destroying warheads, et cetera, that had not previously been expected."...

Sen. Nunn said on "Face The Nation" that most of the defense savings that are realized from the cuts will have to be used to counter growing deficits. (George Lardner, Washington Post, A6)

U.S. Officials Satisfied With Soviet Response To Arms Reduction Plan

Administration officials say they are satisfied with the Soviet response to President Bush's announcement that the U.S. is sharply cutting back its nuclear arsenal....

When President Reagan first announced the "Star Wars" concept he said the U.S. would make some of the new technology available to the Soviets to demonstrate that it was not intended to mask an offensive capability. But Secretary Cheney, appearing on "This Week With David Brinkley," indicated that pledge is no longer in effect.

Asked if Bush would carry forward that policy and share SDI technology with the Soviet Union or its key republics, Cheney answered "No," but he did not elaborate. (UPI)

U.S. ARMS CUTS REVERSIBLE IF MOSCOW FAILS TO FOLLOW SUIT

U.S. officials have made clear that President Bush's history-making nuclear arms cuts could be reversed if the Soviet Union failed to come up with its own reductions.

Secretary Cheney and Brent Scowcroft said they understood President Gorbachev's initial lukewarm response, but said Sunday they expected similar moves from Moscow.

"If they don't, then obviously there are certain steps we've taken we could reverse," Cheney said on "This Week With David Brinkley." Those included putting the U.S. bomber force back on alert and redeploying sea-based tactical nuclear systems, he said.... Sen. Nunn predicted that the Bush proposal would allow the Soviet Union to make dramatic cuts.

"I think they see the danger back home, and the beauty of the President's timing is that it gives the element of reciprocity to the Soviets and will, I think, allow time for them to reduce dramatically, if not completely, their entire nuclear force," he said on "Face The Nation." (Patricia Wilson, Reuter)

OFFICIALS SAY PROPOSALS WILL CUT ARMS, NOT COSTS

Administration officials said Sunday that President Bush's arms-reduction plan would not result in major budget savings that could boost domestic programs and could actually increase short-term costs.

By contrast, Administration and congressional leaders have insisted since the failed Soviet coup that the Soviets slash their military spending to stabilize their own domestic economy....

Secretary Cheney and National Security Adviser Scowcroft said Sunday the moves could increase military costs, and they defended Bush's decision not to cut the B-2 "stealth" bomber and SDI....

Scowcroft, appearing on "Meet The Press," said, "Five years out, I think there will be a peace dividend, (and) hopefully it will be sizable."

Henry Kendall, chairman of the Union of Concerned Scientists, said in an interview that there should be even deeper cuts in the nuclear arsenal to respond to the weakened Soviet threat.

"My colleagues and I emphasize that the B-2 bomber should go down the drain," Kendall said, adding that Bush's moves were a step in the right direction....

Unemployment benefits are "where we need to start spending funds, on human resources for our own people," Rep. Mavroules said. "If you are going to get rid of major nuclear programs, you don't need the B-2 bomber."...

In defending the B-2, Scowcroft said: "I think, first of all, that it is on the forefront of our technology. I think it has great applications, as I think we saw in the Gulf War, to conventional warfare, and we think it ought to be continued."

Cheney said the SDI program would continue to be needed in the future, particularly with unstable countries trying to develop nuclear weapons.

Administration Sees No Immediate Peace Dividend From Nuclear Cuts

Administration officials say there will be no peace dividend for the 1992 budget from President Bush's dramatic nuclear disarmament moves, but one influential senator suggests drastic cuts may be in order for the B-2 bomber.

Sen. Nunn said Sunday that the nation might need only half the 75 B-2 stealth planes that the Air Force wants....

The bomber's strategic role "has been diminished somewhat by the President's speech if we carry through on this action [of nuclear disarmament moves], and I think we have to re-examine the number of B-2s," Nunn said....

Sen. Mitchell said President Bush should now should "turn some of his attention homeward." He mentioned Democratic proposals to create jobs, cut poverty and reduce poor health....

Administration officials defended the Soviet response to Bush's initiative.

President Gorbachev welcomed the disarmament moves but offered no immediate reciprocal cuts.

"It's as if somebody had hit us with this cold within 24 hours, we would not prepare a substantive response and say, "'OK, we'll take down the following systems,'" said Secretary Cheney on "This Week With David Brinkley." "It'll take some time for them to work it. But I think they will."

POWELL: ACTION WILL NOT PUT NATION AT RISK

...When President Bush offered his dramatic arms cut program this weekend, Congress and experts followed President Gorbachev's lead: They're cautiously optimistic.

The consensus: Bush's proposal is "prudent," said Sen. D'Amato, "Not brash."

But members of Congress and some Soviet experts also worry that parts of Bush's plan may leave the nation vulnerable to a quick strike.

"As long as the Soviets have any weapons, there's a potential threat," said Arthur Hartman, ambassador to Moscow from 1981 to 1987....

Bush's arms cuts are no excuse to plunder the Pentagon budget, argued Sen. Bond. "The gulf proved that investing in superior technology and training saves American lives. We should not abandon that principle."

Nor should we stay up nights waiting for the Kremlin to match Bush's cuts, Sen. Nunn told "Face The Nation" Sunday.

"It's a little fast to be moving to take all of our bombers off of alert. With these kinds of stakes, I think you need insurance policies."

"You can be absolutely sure that we are in as strong a deterrent posture today as we were yesterday," said General Powell Saturday. "We're doing nothing that would put the nation at risk."

GREEN LIGHT TO CONGRESS
Members To Raid Pentagon

President Bush's historic decision to take a bite out of the U.S. nuclear arsenal inadvertently opened the door for Congress to make deeper cuts in his defense budget, congressional sources said Sunday.... "People were saying the Soviet threat was unraveling," a Senate defense aide said. "The President's sort of confirming that now. I think everything is just going to accelerate and intensify."...

Sen. Nunn said Bush stripped the Senate Armed Services Committee of much of its bargaining power when he announced the cancellation of some systems, like the rail-based MX missile and short-range attack missile.

Nunn candidly admitted that the Senate, which backed those systems against House opposition, planned to use them as bargaining chips in conference to win funding for programs like the B-2....

"So right now, the Senate conferees are not going to have the leverage we did, being absolutely frank," he said.

PRESIDENT DISARMS CRITICS ALONG WITH NUCLEAR BATTLEFIELDS

SEA ISLAND -- With an uncharacteristically bold stroke, President Bush has disarmed not only nuclear battlefields overseas but his political critics at home. For the coming re-election campaign, Bush has all but crowned himself the peace president, the leader who seized on momentous changes in the Soviet Union as an opportunity for equally dramatic cuts in nuclear arms....

While praising Bush, Democrats are trying to take the position of we-told-you-so. "We're pleased that the President has accepted the view we've been urging for years," said Sen. Mitchell.

"The President has gone only halfway," Rep. Bonior said. "Now the President must turn his attention from weapons of destruction to this destructive recession." (Terence Hunt, AP)

BUSH PLAN MAY PAY POLITICALLY

SEA ISLAND -- President Bush, long accused of lacking "vision," may have had one eye on re-election and the other on the history books when he offered sweeping plans to slash nuclear arms.

He reaffirmed his credentials as an undisputed world leader facing a field of 1992 Democratic presidential candidates short in foreign policy expertise. And he moved to persuade historians to judge him not as a Persian Gulf warrior, but as a global peacemaker. "It's been an axiom that Bush can be faulted for a lack of vision," says Mike McCurry, a former Democratic Party spokesman. "But this is pretty visionary."... Democratic consultant Brian Lunde concedes Democrats will have trouble focusing on the domestic agenda until Bush runs out of foreign policy cards to play or until the economy goes into a serious tailspin.... McCurry suggests Bush may have even inadvertently helped Democrats in 1992 by "clearing the way for a debate solely on domestic issues, because he's removing anything that could concern people in the international situation." (Richard Benedetto, USA Today, 4A)

CHINA PRAISES U.S. PLAN TO SCRAP NUCLEAR WEAPONS

BEIJING -- China Sunday praised a proposal by President Bush that Washington and Moscow negotiate the elimination of all their land-based ballistic missiles equipped with multiple nuclear warheads. The U.S. and the Soviet Union "have a special responsibility for nuclear disarmament" because they have the largest nuclear arsenals, a Foreign Ministry statement said.

NEW ZEALAND TO REVIEW SHIPS LAW AFTER BUSH INITIATIVE

WELLINGTON -- Prime Minister Bolger said Monday his government would examine whether to modify a law preventing nuclear-powered ships from entering the country's waters.

Bolger told a news conference that President Bush's decision to remove nuclear weapons from surface navy vessels had erased a problem that had frozen defense ties between the two countries since 1984.... "It's a question of safety.... I would be happy to have a non-nuclear, conventionally-powered U.S. vessel in New Zealand," Bolger said. (Reuter)

IMF BACKS SOVIET DEFENSE CUTS

The Soviet Union and Eastern Europe together could save $100 billion or more annually to apply to their desperate economic needs by making modest reductions in military spending, according to a senior IMF official.

A new IMF strategy proposing mutually agreed-upon global defense spending reductions will be formally unveiled at next month's joint annual meeting with the World Bank in Bangkok....

The broad outline of the IMF plan was prepared well before President Bush proposed major cuts in American and Soviet nuclear arsenals on Friday. IMF sources said Sunday that they regard Bush's initiative as "encouraging," although their proposals go significantly beyond Bush's emphasis on nuclear arsenals.

(Hobart Rowen, Washington Post, A13)

BUSH TO PRESS INITIATIVE WITH 4-POWER TALKS

SEA ISLAND -- President Bush is moving to hold a quick four-power nuclear summit ensure that Soviet and European short-range battlefield weapons also are taken out of easy reach.

It would probably be held in Rome in five weeks, according to an Administration official -- almost certainly before Thanksgiving -- to capitalize on the collapse of Soviet power and Bush's announcement Friday that he was reducing the U.S. nuclear arsenal.... It is conceivable the summit talks by Soviet, French, British and U.S. leaders could be staged as early as the first week of November. The official said such a meeting would be the Administration response to President Gorbachev's request Saturday for a forum to clarify French and British intentions and pursue the Bush proposals.

MULRONEY CALLS OF 'KICK-START' TO SOVIET ECONOMIES

STANFORD, Calif. -- Prime Minister Mulroney says turmoil in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union should serve as a wakeup call to the West for increased economic aid.

Citing recent clashes in the Soviet republics of Georgia and Armenia and in Romania, Mulroney Sunday told an audience at Stanford University the recent democratic gains in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe are on shaky economic ground and could bring age-old disputes to the surface....

Mulroney hinted that the United States' economic role in the emerging nations, particularly within the independent republics of the Soviet Union, must grow substantially.... Mulroney also challenged the other so-called G-7 member countries to follow his nation's lead and relax trade restrictions with the new countries. He said Canada was ready to go further and offer zero tariffs to the nations, "so long as those countries continue their progress toward democracy and free economies."... While Mulroney was critical of the U.S. over its role in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe, he saluted the Bush Administration for its recently announced plans to reduce the U.S. nuclear arsenal. "The government of Canada warmly and strongly supports this truly enlightened leadership by President Bush," he said, calling for the Soviets to "reciprocate immediately."

Mulroney Urges West To Give Soviet Republics 'Kick Start'

PALO ALTO -- Prime Minister Mulroney urged Western nations Sunday to give the republics of the Soviet Union a "kick start" to ensure their development as democracies.

He urged the West to invite the newly created republics to join Western organizations and to increase dramatically the amount of available aid....

Mulroney said the G-7, and the U.S. in particular, have a responsibility to help the countries of central Europe, the Baltics, Russia, Ukraine and the other republics. He noted that these countries are rich in natural resources and human capital and lack only "a system of values and government" that would allow capitalism and democracy to thrive.

"Change the system and values and their prospects change, too, for the better," he said. "Neither charity nor check-book diplomacy is a valid option. Only creative economic and political partnership will work." (Murray Campbell, Toronto Globe and Mail)

AQUINO ACKNOWLEDGES BASE TREATY DEFEATED

MANILA -- President Aquino on Sunday acknowledged for the first time that a new lease for a U.S. naval base had been defeated, and said she would focus on arranging an "orderly withdrawal."

Aquino urged the Senate Sunday to come up with a reasonable schedule for the Americans to vacate the base. (Robert Reid, AP)

SHAMIR: COMPROMISE POSSIBLE

JERUSALEM -- Prime Minister Shamir hinted Sunday at compromise to bring about Middle East peace talks, but continued criticizing the U.S., saying it no longer is impartial.

Shamir's senior aide Yossi Ben-Aharon went further, calling Washington "prejudiced" since President Bush asked Congress to postpone vital loan guarantees to Israel until after the proposed talks get started....

Shamir said he believed a U.S.-Soviet sponsored peace conference would be held.

Asked by the newspaper Davar if the U.S. could be impartial, he said: "I have many doubts if it will be able to fulfill this task because of its recent behavior, but there is no better candidate."...

Shamir said Sunday if the Arabs expect negotiations to be "a kind of court -- attended...to get what they deserve, according to one or another U.N. decision -- they are completely mistaken."...

He did not rule out compromise, saying: "It depends what we are talking about."

Also Sunday, Sarah Doron, leader of the ruling Likud Party's parliamentary faction, said the party was ready to consider moving up elections.

Shamir critics see his mere discussion of early elections as a threat that could torpedo peace talks.

The danger: The hard-line rightist groups that give Shamir his ruling coalition could walk out on him, saying he's already given in too much on the peace talks.

RADICALS THREATEN TO ATTACK ISRAEL

BEIRUT -- Two Middle East extremist groups are threatening to attack Israel and U.S. interests in retaliation for the current regional peace process. The threats by the Iranian-backed Hezbollah group and Ahmed Jibril's Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine General Command came Sunday after a meeting between Jibril and Seyyed Abbas Al Musawi, Hezbollah's secretary-general.

"International efforts and the resolutions that were taken in Algeria aim at liquidating the cause of the Palestinian people," Jibril said. "We've just discussed means to confront these conspiracies." (Rian Kah, UPI)

JIBRIL URGES INCLUSION OF PALESTINIAN DETAINEES IN SWAP DEAL

BEIRUT -- A radical Palestinian guerrilla leader appealed Sunday for pro-Iranian kidnappers to demand that thousands of Palestinian detainees be included in any prisoners-for-hostages swap with Israel. Ahmed Jibril, leader of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine-General Command, made the plea after a meeting with Sheik Abbas Musawi, head of Hezbollah.

Musawi carefully avoided any reference to the hostages during a joint news conference with Jibril, casting doubt on the seriousness of Jibril's proposals.... "There are 19,000 Palestinians as good as hostages because they were taken to prisons in Israel from their homes without any guilt," Jibril said. "These innocent Palestinians, along with dozens of innocent Lebanese captured from their homes in south Lebanon, should be traded for the Western hostages held in Lebanon." (Rima Salameh, AP)

IRAQIS FINALLY LET TEAM SEE SITES

BAGHDAD -- U.N. inspectors visited nuclear sites around Baghdad unhindered Sunday after cataloguing documents that a senior U.S. official said reveals a far more ambitious Iraqi nuclear program than had been suspected....

Washington said during last week's parking-lot siege in Baghdad and the standoff over helicopter overflights that it required no new resolution by the U.N. to enforce U.N. cease-fire terms with military force. But Arab diplomatic sources say King Fahd has rejected any such action that does not have world approval similar to that given Operation Desert Storm.

"King Fahd would not allow any fresh military action against Saddam Hussein without a clear resolution from the U.N. Security Council and sufficient Arab and Islamic backing," said one Riyadh-based Arab diplomat. (Combined Dispatches, Washington Times, A1)

U.N. NUCLEAR TEAM LEAVES BAGHDAD

BAGHDAD -- A U.N. nuclear weapons inspection team which spent four days confined in a Baghdad parking lot left Baghdad Monday.

Team leader David Kay said the decision to pull out of Iraq was made primarily because of stretched U.N. logistics in Baghdad, but also because the team was behind schedule after its confinement. Asked if the group had found conclusive evidence of a clandestine weapons program, Kay said: "I think so, yes."

(Peter Gregson, Reuter)

U.N. TO HUNT SCUDS MISSED IN GULF WAR

U.N. helicopters are to conduct inspection flights over Iraq Tuesday, seeking Scud missiles that may have survived Desert Storm bombings.

They will be the first since Iraq agreed to allow unrestricted access to Iraqi air space. Baghdad's earlier refusal to abide by this term of the Gulf War cease-fire had provoked warnings from President Bush.

And that threat now has prompted Saudi leaders to insist on a U.N. mandate for any new action against Iraq, AP reported.

JUDGE IN JESUITS CASE TO FLEE EL SALVADOR

Exit To Follow Sentencing Of 2

Convicted Army Officers, Sources Say

SAN SALVADOR -- The judge who announced the conviction of two Salvadoran army officers on murder of charges in the 1989 slayings of six priests and two women plans to leave the country after he hands down a sentence, according to sources here.

Judge Ricardo Zimora has presided over the high-profile investigation and trial of nine Salvadoran soldiers since January 1990. In an unprecedented verdict, the jury convicted a Salvadoran colonel and a lieutenant in the case but cleared seven lower-ranking soldiers accused of carrying out the colonel's orders....

While Rep. Moakley and human-rights monitors criticized the verdict as sending a mixed message, Bush Administration officials Sunday called it a breakthrough for Salvadoran justice and an end to military impunity.

"You can't keep moving the goal posts for El Salvador and trivialize what happened here," said a senior Administration official. Guillermo Benavides "was the only colonel on trial. The fact that he was convicted is very significant."

NATIONAL NEWS

FIRST REPORT CARD SINCE EDUCATION SUMMIT SHOWS LITTLE PROGRESS

Student achievement in reading, writing, math and science is no better today than it was 20 years ago, with less than one in five pupils considered competent in math, reports released Monday said.

President Bush and the nation's governors gathered in Charlottesville, Va., in 1989 and mapped out an ambitious set of educational goals to be met by the year 2000.

Three separate reports on student performance, released on the summit's second anniversary, reveal the goals will not be easily attained and could become fodder for Democratic presidential candidates seeking to show Bush has not become the promised "education President."...

The National Educational Goals Panel issued its first annual "Report Card," which, in general, showed little progress has been made toward reaching the goals it had set.

The National Assessment of Educational Progress issued trend data showing students in grades four, eight and 12 are performing at levels achieved 20 years ago.

And the National Assessment Governing Board released results of a math test revealing less than 20 percent of children in grades four, eight and 12 are reaching "proficient" levels.

"These data tell us today's children read about as well and know as much math and science as their parents did in 1970, but five out of six eighth graders do not know what they should about math," said Secretary Alexander. "This is our best estimate yet of the size of America's skills and knowledge gap in math, and it is huge."

The report card said the bright spots were an increase in the high school completion rate and reduction in student drug use but that these gains "pale" in comparison with the numerous educational deficits....

John Lindley, principal and member of the National Assessment Governing Board, blamed lack of parental involvement as a major reason for stalled educational progress, but he called President Bush's educational reform steps a "breath of fresh air."

Report Shows 'Some' Progress Towards Education Goals

The nation and individual states are making some progress toward the six national education goals but the gains pale in comparison to educational shortcomings, a report said Monday....

"This report shows that we are making progress in some areas," said the goals report [produced by the National Education Goals Panel]. "Schools are educating increasing numbers of diverse students, and more of those students have acquired minimum skills than ever before in the nation's history."

"But these accomplishments fall far short of what is needed to secure a free and prosperous future," the report added.

KERREY ENTERS 1992 RACE WITH A CALL FOR 'BETTER, BOLDER LEADERSHIP

LINCOLN -- Sen. Bob Kerrey entered the 1992 presidential race Monday offering himself as a bold new leader eager to reverse a decade of economic decline and "to lead America's fearless, restless voyage of generational progress."...

While saluting President Bush's leadership in reducing superpower tensions, Kerrey labeled Bush a member of a Cold War generation ill suited to lead the nation into a new century, at a time its greatest enemies are neglect of education, health care and other problems at home and its greatest enemies abroad are economic competitors....

Of the Reagan-Bush years, Kerrey offered this bitter indictment:

"They invoked morality but winked at greed. They criticized the public sector but then robbed it blind. They spoke of balanced budgets but never submitted one. They railed against taxes but raised them on the middle class. They called for civil rights but practiced racial politics. They wrapped their cause in motherhood but tried to strip motherhood of choice or meaningful opportunities." (To Be Released at 11 A.M. EDT, John King, AP)

BUSH HEADS FOR FLORIDA AFTER WEEKEND IN GEORGIA

SEA ISLAND -- President Bush wrapped up a quiet weekend with his wife Monday, heading out for a campaign-style swing through Florida and Louisiana on their way home to Washington....

The jam packed travel schedule was reminiscent of Bush campaigns of the past, complete with quick stops in several states before heading back to Washington. And though the President has yet to kick off a formal re-election campaign, his schedule of hopping on and off of planes is looking increasingly like that of a candidate. (UPI)

AIDS ACTIVISTS PLAN STRATEGY, DEMONSTRATORS

Members of the AIDS activist group ACT-UP gathered in Washington this weekend to confer about treatments for the disease and on ways to stir politicians into action....

"We have to focus on the one person capable of being forceful on this issue," said Robert Warnock, a spokesman for ACT-UP's Washington, D.C. chapter, noting President Bush's ability to rally public support for other issues such as the Gulf War.

SUNUNU SEES VETO UPHELD ON JOBLESS BILL

Senate Republicans will preserve President Bush's upcoming veto of a $6.4 billion measure providing extended unemployment benefits because of the recession, John Sununu said Sunday.

Sununu said on "Face The Nation," that at least four Republicans who originally voted for the measure would reverse themselves, thereby continuing Bush's unbroken string of 22 successful vetoes. (Major Garrett, Washington Times, A3)

FORMER ANALYST'S TESTIMONY COULD BE CRUCIAL FOR GATES
Hill Hearing Tuesday To Review CIA Tenure

...On Tuesday, Melvin Goodman, a division chief in Soviet affairs at the CIA, is expected to be the first witness before the Senate intelligence committee in a day that some sources believe could seriously erode the panel's support for Gates's nomination.

Goodman already has told the committee in closed session that intelligence analysis at the agency was "systematically politicized" and corrupted in the 1980s under Gates and William Casey. Two other analysts are expected to support his views at the publicly televised sessions.

575 POINTS OF LIGHT AND COUNTING: AN ISSUE OF GLITTER VS. SUBSTANCE

It is a daily ritual for the White House press office, whether in Washington or traveling with President Bush in London, Moscow or Los Angeles -- to publish a press release announcing the "Daily Point of Light" that designates a volunteer organization or worker for official recognition....

To Administration critics the program is more public relations than substance, a cover for the federal government's failure to address the problems of hunger, homelessness, drug abuse and education. The approach, they say, is unrealistic in a country where there are more people living in the streets than in the uniform of many nations' standing armies.

Even some recipients question its value. "'Points of Light' can't substitute for a real domestic policy," says Gretchen Buchenholz, executive director of the Association to Benefit Children in New York whose project to care for drug-addicted and AIDS-infected babies became Daily Point of Light No. 261 last September....

The honor [of being officially recognized in the DPOL program], she says, gives her "the credibility to admonish the President of not doing something to help American children."

C. Gregg Petersmeyer, director of the White House Office of National Service and the driving force behind Points of Light, sets out a relatively modest goal for the program. "We don't claim that any of the Points of Light that have been selected are the best of their kind in the country," he says. "They are simply doing the kind of work that deserves to be recognized and honored.... And if others did the same thing, it would make a big difference in the life of someone else."

NUCLEAR DISARMAMENT

ABC's Carole Simpson: The world is still welcoming President Bush's surprise announcement saying the U.S. will unilaterally reduce its nuclear arsenal and challenging the Soviet Union to do the same. The President's men were out in force today to say the new policy isn't written in stone and could disappear entirely if the Soviets don't respond in kind.

ABC's Ann Compton: President Bush took the weekend off, satisfied, his aides said, that his surprise decision to destroy some nuclear weapons and to take others off alert got an initial thumbs-up from Mikhail Gorbachev.

(TV coverage: President Bush playing golf.)

(Gov. Sununu: "We're very pleased that his response in terms of general approach and general principle was very, very positive. And it is in line with what the President expected -- very positive.")

But it will take time, Administration officials said, for the Soviets to match with cuts of their own. And the U.S. decision could be reversed if Soviets don't play ball.

(Secretary Cheney: "If they don't, then obviously there's certain steps we've taken we could reverse. We could put the bomber force back on alert, we can redeploy our sea-based tactical nuclear systems. But we have every reason to believe they will respond affirmatively.")

The Bush Administration is braced for criticism at home, because the nuclear cuts will not save money right away.

(Gen. Scowcroft: "It costs money to bring these weapons home. You have to bring them home very carefully. It costs money to deactivate units."

R.W. Apple: "General, five years out, are we going to have a big peace dividend?"

Scowcroft: "Five years out, I think there will be a peace dividend. I honestly don't know what the size will be.")

The Soviets are desperate for a peace dividend, as well, and President Bush is gambling this is the perfect moment to lock in their support. This may also be the last moment in which the central Soviet government still has enough control over the thousands of nuclear weapons far from Moscow. (ABC-Lead)

ABC's Bob Zelnick reports officials in Moscow say President Gorbachev recognizes the historic nature of the Bush proposals. But it may take a while for him to respond beyond yesterday's statement. Kremlin officials say key military advisers are prepared to endorse Bush's call.

(Sergei Rogov, USA-Canada Institute: "Complete elimination of tactical nuclear warheads is a major step toward the goal of demilitarizing major parts of our country.")

According to Gorbachev aides, the Soviets are willing to negotiate an end to land-based ICBMs with multiple warheads.

Zelnick continues:

But they'll insist that the U.S. discuss similar restrictions on missiles launched from submarines.

(Spokesman Malashenko: "Much greater share of the U.S. strategic warheads are deployed on sea-launched ballistic missiles, so it creates a kind of asymmetry.")

On SDI, the Soviets say they'll insist that any system deployed by the U.S. defend only against accidental or Third World launches. The Soviets will raise other issues, such as their desire to include British and French nuclear systems in the reductions. But whatever their reservations, Kremlin leaders seem determined to join the U.S. in ending the nuclear threat. (ABC-2)

ABC's Steve Shepard reports on the stand-down by U.S. forces.

(Col. Michael Loughran: "At 12:30, I told them. And there was really no cheering, let's put it that way. There was probably a sense of quiet elation, satisfaction in a job well done for all those 30 years.") (ABC-3)

IRAQ/UN INSPECTORS

Simpson reports that according to Newsweek, UN inspectors were transmitting the contents of documents by satellite to Washington while they were being detained in Baghdad. (ABC-4)

EDUCATION

Simpson reports the President's National Education Goals Panel will release its first report card tomorrow. Gov. Romer today said the report will be a sobering one because, in his words, we're not doing well. Particularly distressing are American students' performance in math. (ABC-7)

EL SALVADOR

ABC's Kathleen DeLaski reports a jury convicted two army officers of human-rights abuses in the deaths of six Jesuit priests, a housekeeper and her daughter. But seven other soldiers were acquitted, including those accused of pulling the triggers. International observers still suspect a coverup.

(Jim McGovern, congressional aide: "These that are known that may implicate higher-ups need to be investigated fully.")

Human-rights activists say the convictions may have been a show trial to convince President Bush to release aid. They also question whether the two convicted men will really be made to answer for their crimes. El Salvador's president has not ruled out the possibility that he will pardon the men. (ABC-5)

ABC -- THIS WEEK WITH DAVID BRINKLEY

Moderator: David Brinkley. Panel: George Will, Sam Donaldson.
Guests: Secretary Cheney, Secretary Alexander, Gov. Romer.

On nuclear disarmament: With Secretary Cheney.

Will: What if [the Soviets] don't [reciprocate]?

Cheney: If they don't, then obviously there are certain steps we've taken we could reverse. We can put the bomber force back on alert. We can redeploy our sea-based tactical nuclear systems. But we have every reason to believe they will respond affirmatively....

Will: ...Should we police the development and spread of ICBMs the way we're policing the capacity in Iraq today? And where does SDI stand?

Cheney: We clearly are policing the situation in Iraq today.... You want to aggressively pursue your non-proliferation policy. We've got to find ways to make the international inspection regimes more effective than they've been in the past.... SDI, I think, is more important than it's ever been because we have to anticipate that the world 15 or 20 years from now will be one in which there's been a proliferation not only of nuclear weapons, but also the means to deliver them....

Donaldson: There are no savings here, are there?

Cheney: ...The most recent initiatives will produce long-term savings. In the short term, over the next few months or in fiscal year '92, there are added costs with terminating contracts, moving systems around, destroying warheads, etc., that had not previously been expected....

Will: We must maintain, you seem to be saying, a capability to conduct a Desert Storm.... Is that true?

Cheney: Yes. I would say that the basic underlying assumptions by which we size our forces today is the need to be able to prevail in a regional conflict like Desert Storm.

Donaldson: Does President Bush carry forward that policy that whatever technology we develop, he would make available to the republics, to Russia, to whatever exists of the old Soviet Union?

Cheney: No.

On education: With Gov. Romer.

Romer: We're not doing well. It's a sobering report [of the National Education Goals Panel]....

Will: How can you be sure that you even know how badly we're doing?

-more-

Romer: You can't.... We need [national testing] for each student in the eighth grade and the fourth grade.... In fact, we've got an illusion out there that we're doing a lot better than we are.

Will: Isn't it going to be...impossible to devise a test that won't become a seething, distracting battleground over whether or not the test is fair?

Romer: No, I think that can be solved.... We ought to arrive at national standards in math, in science, in writing and reading, history, geography. And then we can have clusters of states take different approaches to tests. My own call of it would have five or six or seven basic tests of fourth-grade math and then calibrate them to each other....

Donaldson: A lot of people say the funding for this must continue to be done in a local and state level. I take it you don't agree.

Romer: Well, no. The funding basically needs to be at a local and state level. But look, we've got a real problem because the President often says, "What we need is more results and not more resources." I don't think that's an adequate statement....

Will: The President does argue, and lots of people argue, that there simply is no graph correlating increased spending on education and better results.

Romer: That's not a really accurate or fair analysis.... The problem is not just the institutional problems with schools. It's a societal problem....

On education: With Secretary Alexander.

Donaldson: Where are we going to get the money to provide for quality education?

Alexander: The money comes right out of one place and, that's taxpayers' pockets. And I think what taxpayers are saying is, "We've put a lot of money into education and we've only seen marginal results."... I think this big, rich country will spend all the money it needs for education if we radically change what we're doing....

Donaldson: How can you [improve schools] without spending money?

Alexander: You cannot do it without spending more money, and of course we are. We've gone from $160 billion in spending in 1980 to $405 billion in 1990....

Donaldson: If the system doesn't work, what do you say about the children?

Alexander: The first thing we're doing is spending more money everywhere in America.... It is enough in the same kind of system if, at the same time, we're starting over and creating a new educational system that will help....

Will: Some accrediting institutions have said that it is their right and power to insist on certain diversity standards.

Alexander: ...I don't like that.... I don't think we need a central group defining whether a Jewish theological seminary needs five Presbyterians on its board.

POLITICAL DISCUSSION

On the Thomas nomination: Cokie Roberts joins the panel.

Will: ...The fact that the committee voted 7-7...it is welcome evidence that Thomas' tactic, which was groveling and dissimulation, and somewhat disingenuous in his answers, did work. So maybe they ought to go back to just going up and arguing with these people and having a fight for ideas, which is what politics should be about.

Donaldson: ...These Administration tactics for both these hearings may have backfired to some extent, but they placed the emphasis on how you appeared when you were there for your confirmation....

Roberts: ...If they don't like the way the confirmation hearings went and if they don't like the nominee, then they have to have the political guts to vote against the nominee....

Donaldson: ...You don't turn someone down just because you don't like the process. Clearly, he is not [qualified]....

On the Gates nomination:

Donaldson: In the intelligence agency, if politics becomes the way you determine whether the Soviet Union is 10 feet tall or not, we don't want [Gates] being the CIA director.... Even if we wanted to spend billions on Star Wars, you had to have that kind of intelligence, and if Gates would go along with it, even though information suggested to the contrary, then he's not fit to head the CIA.

On unemployment benefits:

Donaldson: I think the President is ill-advised to want to veto it. I think that we're still in a recession.... I think it's a perfectly reasonable thing to do to extend it. But, again, this is the kind of politics that everyone in Washington understands.

Will: What are we talking about -- $6 billion? Please. The President comes out and says: I have to veto this because it's a budget buster.... Give me a better reason than the fact that this is going to bust a budget that is busted to smithereens to begin with.

Roberts: What he can do is say: There go those Democrats again, trying to tax, tax, spend, spend. And even though people are sympathetic to unemployed people, there are more employed people than there are unemployed people, more people worried about paying higher taxes than worried about other people.

NBC -- MEET THE PRESS

Moderator: Garrick Utley. Panel: Robert Novak, R.W. Apple.
Guest: Gen. Scowcroft.

On nuclear disarmament:

Novak: Several of the Administration sources say that they were very disappointed in President Gorbachev's response.... Are you still trying to prop President Gorbachev up in a very shaky position?

Scowcroft: No, not at all.... I was aware of the conversations that the President had both with President Gorbachev and President Yeltsin, and I can tell you their response was enthusiastic....

Apple: [Submarine-based missiles are] the principal strategic weapon of the U.S. Aren't we proposing something that they can't possibly accept?

Scowcroft: No, I don't think so at all. First of all, the Soviets have a very powerful sea-launched ballistic missile armed. There's no question about that. And what we're saying is: Let's deal first with the weapons that are most destabilizing....

Apple: Why do we need a B-2?

Scowcroft: I think, first of all, that it is on the forefront of our technology. I think it has great applications...to conventional warfare, and we think it ought to be continued.

Novak: There was a debate among the generals, wasn't there...and opposition by several generals?

Scowcroft: Not that I'm aware of. But I think, if you notice, the President did say that we will have discussions with the Soviet Union about the whole problem of withdrawal, of storage and of dismantling these weapons.

Novak: Is the fact that the Administration just last week was unsuccessfully opposing a move in the Senate to remove funding for the rail-based intercontinental missile, and then suddenly we have eliminated that. Does that indicate it was a precipitous decision, or were you just dissembling when you were asking the Senate to provide money for a weapons system that you're now eliminating?

Scowcroft: It was not dissembling.

Novak: Then you changed your mind very quickly.

Scowcroft: ...Oh, I know. Excuse me, I see what you mean. Yes, that was in the plan when we did not pull it from the President's budget submission, as with a number of other things.

Novak: Isn't that kind of peculiar that you're asking people to vote for something that you plan to remove?

-more-

Scowcroft: This was a complicated process of completion. It was important, we thought, to preserve the security of what it was we were planning until we had it ready...and that forced certain kinds of accommodations.

On Iraq:

Novak: Is the immediate danger of a renewed war in the Gulf...over right now?

Scowcroft: Well, I don't think that was ever a prospect. I think the real problem is Saddam Hussein is testing us....

Apple: This stuff came from someplace, obviously.... What does that say about our success in controlling nuclear proliferation?

Scowcroft: I think we have been less successful than we thought, and the President last summer introduced some new anti-proliferation proposals to track the kind of precursor elements....

On Israel:

Novak: Can you clear up whether President Bush is making his ultimate approval of the $10 billion loan guarantee for Israel dependent on what they do on settlements?

Scowcroft: No. There is no conditionality to it.

On the Soviet Union:

Scowcroft: I think this winter is going to be, I expect, worse than last winter....

Novak: So we're going to send them some food, put bluntly?

Scowcroft: I think we probably will, yes.

POLITICAL DISCUSSION

On nuclear disarmament:

Apple: It looks to me as if [Bush has] been putting his vision in the bank all these months, and finally he took it all out and put it on television. I think he was genuinely stirred by what happened in Moscow this summer, by the threats that it implied, and by the astonishing, almost unbelievable return of Gorbachev.... It really was an astonishingly bold step for a man like Bush, the great incrementalist, to take.

Novak: The Democrats were really caught off balance by it.... [Bush] suddenly pre-empts them with this sweeping thing in the international arena, and what the Democrats are going to be doing now is saying yes, there has to be savings, Scowcroft is wrong, and you've got to put that savings into domestic affairs.

CBS -- FACE THE NATION

Moderator: Bob Schieffer. Guests: Gov. Sununu, Sen. Nunn.

On the economy: With Gov. Sununu.

Schieffer: When is the Administration going to focus on the recession?

Sununu: There's a full agenda that the President sent to Congress, and Congress has failed to act on it.... He asked Congress to act within a hundred days, for example, on the highway bill.... They're still diddling on it. The growth package that the President put together with Sen. Gramm and Rep. Gingrich that the Senate had a chance to vote on, the Democrats unanimously voted against.

On unemployment benefits:

Sununu: It's ironic that the Democrats want to put the unemployment benefits forward, and yet voted against a package whose major difference was one in which it was financially sound and paid for under the budget agreement. If they want one that will be signed, why didn't they pass the Dole amendment?

On civil rights:

Sununu: ...We will continue to work with Sen. Danforth, trying to find a compromise. We thought we had a compromise. We had language that the Senator accepted, and we thought that was the agreement.... We accept the fact that those eight words are important to Sen. Danforth and others. We don't think it's the catalyst, but the President is willing to put those same eight words in the equivalent position in his bill....

Schieffer: Is this a wedge issue?

Sununu: I believe in issues and I think a lot of folks believe in issues that differentiate, but this is not in that category. And the easy way to demonstrate that it's not in that category is to amend....

On nuclear disarmament: With Sen. Nunn.

Nunn: ...The beauty of the President's timing on his proposal is that it gives the element of reciprocity to the Soviets and will, I think, allow them to reduce dramatically, if not completely -- and I hope completely -- their entire tactical nuclear force.

Schieffer: What's your reaction now, two days after?

Nunn: I'm still very positive.... I also believe that is psychologically going to help in the Soviet Union with the military, because they have felt a reluctance on the part of the U.S. to ever discuss doing away with any sea-based nuclear weapons....

Schieffer: Do you have any reservations about this?

Nunn: I have reservations about the question about the bombers going off alert completely. I think we certainly ought to downscale the alert forces.... And I'll be asking hard questions about doing away with any element of mobility with our small missiles.... The real question is whether you need the B-1 at all now.... The only other alternative, it seems to me, is to find a new mission for the B-1, perhaps use it for sea control....

Schieffer: Do you really think, after the President made this announcement, that there is a need for 75 B-2 bombers?

Nunn: ...I think the conventional role for the B-2...is, if anything, growing more important as the world changes.... But the strategic role has been diminished somewhat by the President's speech if we carry through on this action.... I don't think we can afford 75.... My guess is it'll be somewhere in the range of half of that....

Schieffer: Would you need that many carriers?

Nunn: I believe the carrier role will not be nuclear in the future.... But the question of how many carriers we need depends on the regional conflicts around the world. I think the Navy's going to have to take another whole look at the role of carriers....

Schieffer: This speech has really changed things, hasn't it?

Nunn: It's changed things because, interestingly enough, a lot of things we had in our defense bill -- the SRAM I, the SRAM II, the MX mobility part of that -- these things the President is now saying we do not need. Frankly, we were going to have to give away a number of those in conference anyway, but it was going to be given away in the context of having the House move more towards the Senate position on the B-2 and on the SDI accidental-launch system. So right now, the Senate conferees are not going to have the leverage we did, being absolutely frank, and a number of people who voted and have threatened to withdraw their support for the B-2, some Republicans -- if the President wasn't locked into the MX and if the President wasn't locked into their version of SDI -- they're going to have a whole re-examination to do. But the outcome of the conference is going to clearly be affected by this....

Schieffer: The President says there's going to be no short-term savings in all this.

Nunn: He may not intend savings, but the dynamics of conference is something that he might not have taken into account. I think there will be some savings come out of this. I do think those who believe we're going to be able to declare a peace dividend and have a huge amount of money for domestic purposes are not looking at the fiscal picture of the country. Most of the defense savings are going to have to go to try to meet the deficit....

THE McLAUGHLIN GROUP

Moderator: John McLaughlin. Panel: Arnaud de Borchgrave, Fred Barnes, Jack Germond, Eleanor Clift.

On nuclear disarmament:

McLaughlin: If you were [Secretary Cheney], would you predominantly applaud the Bush proposal, or would you predominantly fault it?

De Borchgrave: ...I'd stand up and applaud. After all, what [Bush] has done is kill much of our overkill capability, which is long overdue. He's cut through the bureaucratic inertia that kept all these short-range nuclear weapons in Europe....

Barnes: ...I'd be upset for this reason: Not because any of the particulars -- and there are some pretty important particulars in the proposal -- are that bad...but because it's bound to spur the momentum for more sweeping defense cuts.... It just means you need stronger and better equipped conventional forces, and we're probably not going to get that.

Germond: ...We're so used to Bush not reacting -- to being a passive bystander to what's been going on in Eastern Europe -- that this is a stunning change.

Clift: For the first time, he looks like he's not living in the past, like he's at least open to new opportunities. But this is exploiting the inevitable.... I think it staves off the rush on the Hill to cut the defense budget further....

McLaughlin: Are we saying that this is the President's method of flushing out of the nuclear deterrence system those systems that are the most unstable?

Clift: There's one surprise in this whole package. Most of it is in the fine print of NATO. But what the President did was give Gorbachev and Yeltsin a huge concession, and that is naval arms control....

Barnes: There were a lot of concessions in there. Bush reversed himself on the MX, he did on MRV missiles, he did on tactical weapons.... I think it would have been a good idea to leave at least a token force [in Europe].... Nuclear weapons have been a wonderful thing. They have created stability....

On Iraq:

McLaughlin: Is there enough provocation for Bush to use military force against Iraq now?

Germond: The fact of the matter is, this situation has been overblown all along.... Saddam Hussein is like a 4-year-old boy with a mustache....

Barnes: ...There are going to be more invasive inspections, demands for material, to go places Saddam's not going to want the let the inspectors go. The U.S. is going to insist because there's an effort here to trample on Iraqi sovereignty, embarrass Saddam and show the Iraqi people that they're going to live in a pariah nation so long as Saddam stays in power.

Clift: The danger is if Saddam keeps needling Bush and finally gets under his skin. And as we get closer to the '92 election, Saddam is a reminder that Bush didn't finish the job. And I worry about a personality tantrum on the part of the President.

Barnes: Eleanor, you can't keep milking that ridiculous cow about how Bush is doing all this stuff just for politics....

On the Thomas nomination:

Germond: What's interesting about [the 7-7 vote] is it reflects what happened in the hearings in a very interesting way. Sen. Heflin started out impressed by Clarence Thomas when he met with him during the courtesy-call period, prepared to vote for him....

Clift: The senators on the committee felt they were had, and they were.

De Borchgrave: ...The general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board said on Friday that all the guys who testified against Thomas didn't even know him. I've known him for 10 years. He's not a right-wing ideologue.

PREDICTIONS

De Borchgrave: With the tacit approval of the Russian government, a Cuba democracy act is now working its way through Congress, patterned after the South African sanctions act and designed to bring about the peaceful removal of Fidel Castro within the next six months.

Barnes: ...Yugoslavia is going to break up. And secondly, Sen. Specter will have a strong primary opponent: state Rep. Steven Friend [phonetic], a strong foe of abortion. I don't think Specter's chances are that much better than 50-50.

Germond: A new change in the Democratic primary schedule. Hot spot will be South Dakota, where the two Midwest liberals -- Harkin and Kerrey -- will face off.

Clift: Gorbachev and Yeltsin will get in a bidding war over who can cut more nuclear weapons, and Yeltsin will win.

McLaughlin: The prime minister of France will submit her resignation within 90 days and she will be replaced by...the president of the European Commission.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Moderator: Gordon Peterson. Panel: Charles Krauthammer, Carl Rowan, Strobe Talbott, Juan Williams.

On the Thomas nomination:

Peterson: Is [the 7-7 vote] a symbolic gesture by the Democrats, or do they have enough strong arguments in the full Senate to reject Thomas.

Rowan: No, it's not symbolic, but it sets the stage for one heck of a mean fight on the floor of the Senate.

Talbott: Nothing to do now but hope that this man turns out to be a better justice than he's been a nominee.

Williams: I don't think there's any doubt that he withheld [an affirmative-action opinion] because he understood that it could complicate the arguments.... On the other hand, there's no secret here in terms of what Thomas' opinions and positions have been, and they did come out to an extent in the hearings. And I think that many of the people who will bring that up now are really just looking for a hook to try to get something going.... I think some of the Senate Democrats...were under pressure in their homestate. That same pressure will not be brought to bear when you get to the larger body....

Talbott: This revelation in Legal Times is, of course, totally consistent with the strategy that...his handlers in the White House have been using all along, which is to take somebody with a fairly rich and controversial record and erase that record as much as possible, so what the Senate ends up voting on is a tabula rasa.

Krauthammer: ...Affirmative action is the hardest thing for a white liberal to go after a black conservative on. And they didn't do it in committee, and they're not going to do it on the floor.... I don't see this scenario of even a delay creating a groundswell of opposition to Thomas....

Williams: ...I think in many ways this vote was sent [as a] message to Bush. He was the recipient and the message was: You are packing the court with conservative right-wingers and we are concerned about it. You didn't consult us, you're not talking to us in the Senate and we want a real hearing....

On the Gates nomination:

Talbott: What's happened in the Gates matter is a little bit parallel to what's happened in the Thomas hearings. That is, what looked a week or so ago like a virtual shoo-in no longer seems to be quite that certain. But as with the Thomas case, the smart money is betting that Gates will get through.... It's now apparent that he knew a lot more than he admitted.... A lot more, if not damning, then at least troublesome information has come out, but it's not going to keep him from being confirmed....

Rowan: ...I regard [charges that Gates stilted intelligence] as every bit as serious as this selective amnesia he's thrown.

Krauthammer: ...I'm not sure how many of us remember what we said on October the 1st, 1987. And on that issue of fudging, one man's slant is another man's analysis....

On nuclear disarmament:

Williams: It has a little bit of a budget message in it. The budget message is that as Congress goes about cutting the MX and others, that the Congress can't do it, that the Administration is busy with the missiles program and needs money and is going to spend that money as it sees fit. And they're going to take the lead, not allow the Congress to determine what happens to money that comes back from the so-called peace dividend.

Krauthammer: There's a real clever...no-so-hidden agenda in the President's proposal. He goes after, in particular, two classes of weapons.... So by going after them, it's a way of reducing the Soviets to essentially destroying [or] eliminating these and essentially end up with all of their nukes in Russia, which of course would be the safest possible outcome....

Talbott: ...To have the U.S. really drastically cutting its own nuclear arsenal is going to give the U.S. more political -- and you might even say moral -- leverage in trying to get other countries, particularly in the Third World, to not acquire nuclear weapons....

On Iraq:

Krauthammer: If [Saddam] is so stupid, why is he so rich, and also, why is he alive? He may have lost a war, but we didn't press it all the way.... I suspect that unless we are prepared to launch punitive air strikes, we are not going to stop this guy in the short or the long run....

On AIDS:

Krauthammer: ...To say that AIDS is somehow being neglected by the government, I find utterly incomprehensible.

Williams: ...This government has no plan, no structured plan to go after AIDS. We restrict people from taking medicine when it's in the experimental stage. That seems to me to be counter-intuitive.

CONGRESSIONAL MONITOR

Monday, September 30, 1991

Volume 27, Number 147

Last Week in Congress

Lawmakers made progress on fiscal 1992 spending bills and moved a step closer to a confrontation with President Bush on an unemployment benefits measure during a busy week on Capitol Hill.

With only a handful of the 13 appropriations bills completed as the new fiscal year approached, Congress cleared a stopgap measure, called a continuing resolution, to keep the federal government operating through Oct. 29.

The Senate Judiciary Committee last week split, 7-7, over the nomination of Clarence Thomas to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court, sending the nomination on to the full Senate with no recommendation.

In an effort to break a logjam between Congress and the Bush administration over civil rights legislation, Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., offered a compromise bill.

But the Bush administration rejected the proposal, which would have used equal employment language similar to that in the 1990 Americans With Disabilities Act, which prohibits discrimination against the disabled.

Appropriations

Lawmakers cleared a short-term continuing resolution and made progress on some of the 11 remaining regular fiscal 1992 appropriations bills.

• Continuing Resolution. A bill (H J Res 332) that would keep unfunded federal agencies and programs operating from Oct. 1 through Oct. 29 cleared Congress and was sent to the president.

Under the stopgap bill, funding would be at the lowest of three levels: the amount appropriated for fiscal 1991, the amount in the fiscal 1992 House-passed bill, or the amount in the Senate-passed measure.

The House went along with a Senate proposal to extend the measure to Oct. 29, after initially voting to continue funding only through Oct. 17.

• District of Columbia. Congress

cleared a fiscal 1992 spending bill (HR 3291) for the District of Columbia, after the Senate dropped its insistence that the measure allocate $50 million over four years for the George Washington University hospital.

Nearly $700 million in federal funds would be provided for the city, a $48.5 million increase over fiscal 1991. The bill also would approve the spending of $3.9 billion in locally raised revenues.

President Bush vetoed an earlier version of the bill (HR 2699) because it would have permitted the use of local funds for abortions. That provision was removed from HR 3291.

• Veterans, Housing, Space. House and Senate negotiators agreed to provide about $2 billion in fiscal 1992 for work on the proposed space station Freedom, saving the project for at least another year in the face of growing congressional concern about its cost.

The funds would be included in the $80.95 billion bill (HR 2519) for the Departments of Veterans Affairs (VA) and Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and various independent agencies, including the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The measure would provide $32.5 billion for the VA, $23.8 billion for HUD, $6.7 billion for the Environmental Protection Agency and about $14.3 billion for the space agency.

• Treasury, Postal Service. House and Senate negotiators reached an agreement on a nearly $20 billion bill (HR 2622) for the Treasury Department, the U.S. Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President and various independent agencies. The measure would provide $470 million for the Postal Service to provide lower mail rates to nonprofit groups and other organizations.

Senate conferees agreed to remove a provision that would have made it a federal

This Week

With the new fiscal year starting tomorrow, lawmakers on Capitol Hill will spend much of the week trying to wrap up action on fiscal 1992 spending bills. Ten appropriations bills have yet to clear, and House-Senate conferences and floor action could be scheduled on short notice this week.

Congress is expected to clear legislation this week that would provide extended benefits to the nation's unemployed that will probably lead to a showdown with President Bush.

It is possible that the Senate could vote late in the week on the nomination of Clarence Thomas to be an associate judge of the Supreme Court. The Judiciary Committee sent the nomination to the full Senate last Friday without a recommendation.

The Senate Ethics Committee may reach a decision this week on its two-year investigation of California Democrat Alan Cranston's relationship with savings and loan operator Charles H. Keating Jr.

New House Member. Arizona Democrat Ed Pastor will be sworn in this week — probably on Wednesday — to the state's 2nd District House seat. Pastor, who won a special election last week, will replace Morris K. Udall, D, who resigned his seat on May 4.

Floor Action

Appropriations Bills. The House-Senate compromise versions of two fiscal 1992 spending bills — for veterans, housing and several independent agencies including NASA (HR 2519) and for the Treasury Department, Postal Service and general government (HR 2622) — are ready for final action in both chambers.

Several other spending bills could reach the floor later this week if House and Senate negotiators can resolve differ-

Unemployment Benefits. On Tuesday both chambers will take up the conference report on legislation (S 1722) that would provide extended benefits to the nation's jobless.

Republican opponents will argue that the bill violates last year's budget agreement, as the bill includes no provisions to offset costs.

Under a House-Senate compromise worked out last week, the bill would provide workers who have exhausted their normal compensation with an additional seven to 20 weeks of benefits, depending on a state's unemployment rate.

President Bush has vowed to veto the measure.

Senate Floor Action

EPA Cabinet Status. The Senate today will begin consideration of legislation (S 533) to elevate the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to a Cabinet-level Department of the Environment.

Proponents say that elevating EPA to Cabinet status would give the agency more clout.

The bill would also create a Bureau of Environmental Statistics to compile, analyze and publish data on the nature, source and amounts of pollutants in the environment and their effect on the public.

Family Leave. On Tuesday, the Senate plans a cloture vote that would pave the way for floor debate on legislation (S 5) that would require employers to grant unpaid leave to parents of newborn or newly adopted children.

The measure would require most employers to grant up to 12 weeks of unpaid, job-protected leave for parents wanting to spend time with newborns, newly adopted children or seriously ill family members.

President Bush vetoed similar legislation last year.

Thomas Nomination. Last Friday, the Senate Judiciary Committee split, 7-7, sending the nomination of Clarence Thomas to the floor without a recommendation.

Thomas' supporters still predict he will win confirmation, but opponents were heartened by the split vote in committee and have vowed to press the fight.

Under Senate rules, the earliest Thomas' name could be taken up by the full Senate is Thursday. His Republican backers are pushing for a vote by the week's end.

But opponents, stirred up by the split vote, were urging Democratic senators to wait until after the Columbus Day recess for a floor vote, giving them more time to build a campaign against Thomas.

House Floor Action

Census Improvement. The House today will consider a bill (HR 3280) authorizing a study on how to improve the nation's decennial census of the population in 2000.

The measure would authorize the Commerce Department to contract with the National Academy of Sciences for a three-year study on census reform. The study would look at both traditional and future methods of census-taking.

Civil Rights Commission. The House today will consider a bill (HR 3350) to extend the authorization for the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights.

Drug Abuse. The House will also take up legislation (HR 3259) to authorize $53 million through fiscal 1994 for drug-abuse prevention programs specifically for youth gangs and runaway children.

Defense Production. The House later this week will take up a measure (HR 3039) that would reauthorize the Defense Production Act of 1950.

The act gives the federal government the authority to ensure defense production in wartime and military preparedness in times of peace.

The bill would authorize the act through fiscal 1994.

The measure would authorize about $200 million for loans and purchase guarantees to U.S. businesses that agree to supply the government with militarily significant goods and services.

Appropriations Conferences

As many as seven conference committees may convene this week to resolve differences in the following fiscal 1992 spending bills:

Agriculture. The measure (HR 2698) would provide nearly $53.1 billion to the Agriculture Department and for rural development and nutrition programs. It passed the House on June 26 and the Senate on July 30.

The Senate version contains about $550 million more than the House version and includes provisions to extend leases on wetlands and delay enforcement of tobacco export regulations.

Commerce, Justice, State. The bill (HR 2608) would provide $22.1 billion for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State and the federal judiciary. It passed the House on June 13 and the Senate on July 31.

The Senate version includes a controversial provision to require patients undergoing "invasive" medical procedures to submit to an AIDS virus test.

Interior. The House version of the $12.7 billion Interior spending bill (HR 2686) would raise the fees paid by ranchers who graze livestock on public lands.

The House bill also includes a provision to temporarily halt the issuance of hard-rock mining patents on public lands. The Senate narrowly defeated a similar amendment to its bill.

The Senate bill includes a provision that would prohibit the National Endowment for the Arts from funding "patently offensive" art projects.

The spending bill passed the House June 25 and the Senate on Sept. 19.

Labor-HHS. The measure (HR 2707) would provide $204 billion in fiscal 1992 funds for the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education. The House passed the bill on June 26, and the Senate approved it on Sept. 12.

The Senate version includes a provision to require notification of, or consent by, at least one parent before a minor can obtain an abortion at a clinic that receives federal family planning funds. The provision also includes a long list of exceptions to the requirement.

The measure includes language that would block enforcement of administration regulations forbidding abortion counseling in federally funded family planning clinics. The Senate added language to the bill that would permit federal funding of abortions in certain cases of rape and incest.

Military Construction. The House on May 30 passed an $8.5 billion fiscal 1992 military construction bill (HR 2426). The Senate passed the bill on Sept. 17.

There are few major differences in the bills. The Senate version includes more money for NATO infrastructure programs and more funds for the base closing and realignment program.

Transportation. The $14.4 billion spending bill (HR 2942) for transportation programs was passed by the House on July 24 and the Senate on Sept. 17.

The Senate version includes $387 million for special road projects, $182 million of which would go to the home state of the Senate Appropriations Committee Chairman, Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va.

Also, the House version would put a cap of $16.2 billion on highway program spending, lower than the $17.1 billion in the Senate version.

Defense. The $270 billion-plus fiscal 1992 defense spending bill (HR 2521) was passed by the House June 7 and the Senate on Sept. 26. The $270.4 billion Senate version would cancel the MX rail garrison project and provide $3.2 billion for continued production of the B-2 stealth bomber, but would not allow the funds to be used until at least next year depending on a review of problems with the radar-evading bomber.

The $270.6 billion House-passed bill includes $1.6 billion for the B-2 program but provides no money for additional bomber production. The House version also includes $260 million for the MX rail garrison system.

Senate Committee Action

Gates Nomination. The Senate Intelligence Committee on Tuesday will resume confirmation hearings on the nomination of Robert M. Gates to be director of the CIA.

Gates has been grilled by some committee members over the last two weeks on his possible role or advance knowledge of the Iran-contra affair when he was deputy director of the agency in 1986.

The committee is also considering some conflicting testimony from former CIA officials about how much information Gates may have known about the arms-for-hostages deal and subsequent diversion of profits to the Nicaraguan contras.

Gates said he was not fully informed of the secret deal by then-CIA director William J. Casey but acknowledged that he should have done more to investigate the matter.

Indian Rights. The Senate Indian Affairs Committee on Tuesday will mark up legislation (S 1720) that would extend the current $30 million-per-year authorization for a Navajo-Hopi relocation housing program through fiscal 1995.

The current authorization will run out at the end of fiscal 1991.

The program helps relocate an average of about 200 Indian families each year.

Film Preservation. The Senate Rules Committee on Tuesday will mark up legislation (S 1345) that would require the Library of Congress to set up procedures for development of a national film registry.

The bill would require the library to work with the National Film Preservation Board to institute a program to build up a national library of films considered important with respect to the culture of the nation. The library would be limited to choosing 25 films per year for the registry.

The House Judiciary Subcommittee on Intellectual Property and Judicial Administration will mark up companion legislation (HR 2372) tomorrow.

Air Museum. The Senate Rules Committee on Tuesday will mark up legislation (S 289) to authorize the Smithsonian Institution to plan and design an extension of the National Air and Space Museum at Washington Dulles International Airport in Virginia.

House Committee Action

Low-level Waste. The House Interior Committee on Wednesday will mark up legislation (HR 645) that would allow state and local governments to block the disposal of low-level nuclear wastes in landfills under their jurisdiction.

The bill would, in effect, nullify rules proposed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission that would relax restrictions on what types of low-level nuclear wastes can be disposed of in regular landfills.

Bill supporters say the proposed regulations would encourage illegal dumping of hazardous materials in neighborhood landfills.

Education Bill. The House Education and Labor Subcommittee on Post-Secondary Education on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday will mark up draft legislation that would reauthorize the Higher Education Act of 1965, which governs all financial aid to college, trade school and graduate students.

The measure as drafted by committee Chairman William D. Ford, D-Mich., features two controversial provisions: It would make Pell grants an entitlement, thus guaranteeing full funding for the program, and it would completely revamp the student loan program, eliminating direct loans from banks to students. Instead, the federal government would make the loans directly to students through universities.

Biodiversity. The House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee on Thursday will mark up legislation (HR 2082) that aims to preserve a healthy amount of biological diversity in the ecosystem.

The bill would amend the National Environmental Policy Act of 1970 to make sure that the impact on biological diversity is considered when environmental impact statements are prepared.

A Smithsonian Institution biodiversity center would also be created with an annual budget of $10 million.

Banking Bill. The House Banking Subcommittee on Financial Institutions Supervision on Wednesday and Thursday will mark up draft legislation to refinance the Resolution Trust Corporation (RTC), which administers the government bailout of failed savings and loans.

The legislation may also seek to restructure the management of the RTC, which is currently overseen by boards of both the RTC and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

The administration is requesting $80 billion for the continued bailout.

Subcommittee Chairman Frank Annunzio, D-Ill., has said he intends to link any additional funding for the RTC with a thorough government audit of the agency.

VA Drug Prices. The House Veterans Affairs Hospital and Health Care Subcommittee on Wednesday will mark up a bill (HR 2890) that would establish limits on the prices of drugs purchased by the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA).

The bill was drafted in response to reports that the VA was being charged significantly higher prices for prescription drugs than other customers.

Export Administration. The House Foreign Affairs Subcommittee on International Economic Policy and Trade on Tuesday will mark up draft legislation reauthorizing the 1979 Export Administration Act.

The president vetoed similar legislation last year, saying that provisions requiring strict sanctions on countries found to be exporting chemical and biological weapons would restrict the executive branch's ability to conduct foreign policy.

Patents and Trademarks. The House Judiciary Subcommittee on Intellectual Property and Judicial Administration on Tuesday will mark up draft legislation to reauthorize the Patent and Trademark Office. The office, part of the Commerce Department, grants patents, registers trademarks and provides patent and trademark information.

California Parks. The House Interior Subcommittee on General Oversight and California Desert Lands on Tuesday will mark up legislation (HR 2929) to establish three parks in California.

The bill would establish the Death Valley, Joshua Tree and Mojave National Parks. ■ crime for health-care workers who have AIDS to perform surgery without informing the patient they have the virus.

• Defense. The Senate passed a $270.4 billion defense spending bill (HR 2521) for fiscal 1992.

By a 51-48 vote, the Senate rejected an attempt to halt further funding of the B-2 stealth bomber. Under the measure, $3.2 billion would be provided for production of four more bombers, as sought by Bush, but the funds could not be spent until the Senate voted again next spring to allow the expenditure.

Senators narrowly defeated an attempt to cut funding for the Strategic Defense Initiative.

And, lawmakers voted 67-33 to reject Bush's request to use $225 million for completion of an MX missile rail system.

Senate Floor Action

Unemployment Benefits. The Senate on Friday debated a compromise worked out with the House on a $6.4 billion measure (S 1722) to provide up to 20 additional weeks of compensation to workers whose unemployment benefits have been exhausted. But a vote on the measure was delayed until tomorrow.

Under the bill, seven to 20 weeks of extra benefits would be provided, depending on the unemployment rate in a worker's state. The House went along with the Senate in agreeing to make the changes in the unemployment system temporary, rather than permanent.

NASA Authorization. The Senate on Friday passed, by voice vote, legislation (HR 1988) that would authorize funding for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) at $15.3 billion in fiscal 1992, or $496 million less than was requested by the president.

The bill would also authorize $50 million for an unmanned launch vehicle project, far less than the $175 million requested by the president.

Nutrition Programs. The Senate on Friday also passed legislation (S 1742) that would make grants available to state programs designed to increase the availability of fresh farm produce to people who are nutritionally at risk.

Copyrights. The Senate, by voice vote, also approved a bipartisan bill (S 1035) to clarify the fair use of copyright laws with regard to news organizations.

Bill supporters say recent court decisions have raised questions as to whether one news organization could publish information, such as a leaked transcript of a book, before the news organization which holds the copyright has published a story on it.

Government Securities. Senators passed legislation (S 1699) that aims to crack down on violations of securities laws that have been uncovered in the Salomon Brothers trading scandal.

The measure would specifically prohibit firms from making false or misleading statements when bidding for government securities. Salomon officials revealed in August that the firm had made fraudulent bids for government bonds.

Indian Jurisdiction. Legislation (HR 972) that would give back to Indian tribes the authority to exercise limited criminal jurisdiction over all Indians within their territorial limits passed the Senate. On Thursday, House and Senate negotiators met on the bill but were unable to resolve their differences, including the definition of the word "Indian."

The measure would have the effect of overturning a 1990 Supreme Court decision that ruled that while a tribe had such jurisdiction over its own members, it had no legal authority over Indians from other tribes.

Civil Rights Commission. The Senate passed a bill (S 1754) to reauthorize the U.S. Civil Rights Commission through fiscal 1995.

House Floor Action

FCC User Fees. New fees would be imposed on broadcasters and other users of Federal Communications Commission (FCC) services under a bill (HR 1674) passed by the House last week.

The fees would range from a low of $10 for ship marine stations to a high of $5,000 for long-distance telephone carriers and are meant to offset agency operations.

The measure would authorize $134 million for the FCC for fiscal 1992 and $164 million for fiscal 1993.

Government Corporations. The House passed legislation (HR 2900) to boost federal oversight of the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae) and the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Association (Freddie Mac).

An office would be established within the Department of Housing and Urban Development to oversee the government-sponsored enterprises.

Rail Safety. Legislation (HR 2607) passed by the House would require railroads to report any safety defect discovered and the action taken to correct it to the Federal Railroad Administration within 30 days.

The measure would also authorize $107 million for fiscal 1992-93 for federal railroad safety programs. In addition, $75 million would be authorized through fiscal 1994 to aid local freight railroads.

Truth-In-Savings. Another measure (HR 2654) passed by the House would require banks and thrifts to state clearly and uniformly the terms and fees on deposit accounts.

Banks, thrifts and credit unions would be required to disclose the annual percentage yield, the minimum balance required to receive that rate and the annual rate of simple interest.

Lumbee Indians. The Lumbee Tribe of Cheraw Indians of North Carolina would receive federal recognition under a bill (HR 1426) passed by the House.

The measure would give the tribe access to up to $120 million in federal benefits annually and grant the tribe protection under federal Indian laws.

Confirmation Hearings

Thomas Nomination. A divided Senate Judiciary Committee decided to send Clarence Thomas' nomination to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court to the Senate floor without a recommendation.

On Friday, the panel tied, 7-7, on a motion to recommend Senate confirmation. The panel then sent the nomination to the full Senate with no recommendation.

Committee Chairman Joseph R. Biden Jr., D-Del., said that Thomas failed to convince him that he would protect individuals' right to privacy. Biden joined six other Democrats on the panel in opposing Thomas. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., was the only Democrat to vote for Thomas' confirmation.

CIA Director. CIA analyst Charles E. Allen told the Senate Intelligence Committee last week that he had presented evidence to Robert M. Gates in 1986 that Allen said showed that money from Iranian arms sales was being diverted to the Nicaraguan contra rebels.

The panel is considering Gates' nomination to be director of the CIA.

Gates has said that he viewed the reports by Allen as "extraordinarily flimsy" and did not give them a high priority.

Questioning last week by the 15-member panel indicated that a majority favor confirming Gates. But two panel Democrats — Bill Bradley, D-N.J., and Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio — said they may vote against Gates because they suspect that he misled Congress about his knowledge of the Iran-contra affair.

FDIC Chairman. William Taylor, the president's choice to run the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC), received a warm welcome from the Senate Banking Committee. Panel members praised him for his long career as a bank regulator at the Federal Reserve.

If confirmed, Taylor will be in charge of restructuring the government's bankrupt deposit insurance funds as well as salvaging hundreds of failed banks and savings and loan associations.

Taylor would replace L. William Seidman, who is leaving the FDIC Oct. 21.

Currency Comptroller. In contrast, the confirmation of Robert C. Clarke, who has been renominated to be comptroller of the currency, the top regulator for federally chartered banks, is in doubt because of questions about his performance and personal finances.

Democrats say lax oversight by Clarke has led to record bank failures.

After opening statements last week from Senate Banking Committee members and Clarke, only a few questions were asked before the hearing was adjourned. Chairman Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., would not commit to a vote on the nomination this year. He said more hearings would be held.

Committee Action

Crime Bill. The House Judiciary Committee last week approved a $1.1 billion comprehensive anti-crime bill (HR 3371), after turning back a number of Republican amendments that would have expanded the use of the federal death penalty. The panel also rejected a Democratic amendment that would have replaced all the death penalty provisions with life imprisonment.

The committee left language in the bill that would ban the commercial sale of 13 types of domestically produced assault weapons. Those opposed to the provisions said they would wait until floor debate to try to remove them.

An amendment that would have drastically cut back the ability of death row inmates to file appeals to stay their scheduled executions was rejected. Democrats opposing the amendment argued that the bill already includes a one-year limit on filing a habeas corpus petition in federal court.

Banking Bill. Three House committees — Energy and Commerce, Ways and Means, and Agriculture — approved a bill (HR 6) last week that would loosen some regulations prohibiting banks from entering other areas of the financial services industry.

The Banking Committee has already approved its version of the measure.

• Energy. During work by the Energy Committee, members approved, by voice vote, an amendment that would relax one "fire wall" in the Banking panel's version of the bill that would prohibit a bank from linking its lending to securities underwriting by an affiliated brokerage firm.

Instead of a flat prohibition on the practice, the committee adopted a compromise that would require banks and affiliated brokerage firms to supply the Federal Reserve and the Securities and Exchange Commission with documentation proving their lending and underwriting activities were not linked improperly.

• Ways and Means. Ways and Means Committee members agreed to an amendment that would allow the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) to borrow funds from private sector banks to shore up the Bank Insurance Fund — under two conditions.

First, the borrowing would count against a $30 billion limit on borrowing from the Treasury, and second, interest rates on the borrowed money could not be higher than current market yields on Treasury bonds.

• Agriculture. The House Agriculture Committee approved, 11-10, a controversial amendment by Glenn English, D-Okla., that would require bank regulators to close an interstate bank branch if loans made by the branch amounted to less than half of the average amount of deposits made by bank branch customers.

English said the requirement would help ensure that large interstate banks do not siphon off money from local customers.

GSE Restrictions. The House Ways and Means Committee approved legislation (HR 3365) that would make it harder for new government-sponsored enterprises to receive loans from the Treasury Department.

The bill, sponsored by committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., would prohibit the Treasury Department from making loans to new government-sponsored firms unless the loans have been approved in advance in an appropriations bill.

Czech, Hungarian MFN. The Ways and Means Committee also approved a bill (HR 1724) that would authorize the president to extend most-favored-nation (MFN) trading status — which provides for low, normal tariff rates — to Czechoslovakia and Hungary on an unconditional basis.

Generic Drugs. A measure (HR 2454) aimed at giving the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) sweeping new powers to police the scandal-ridden generic drug industry was approved by the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

The bill would give HHS the authority to impose fines of up to $1 million on drug companies that cheat on their applications or engage in other fraudulent practices with regard to the drug approval process. HHS could also rescind drug approvals and refuse to approve applications from those having cheated in the past.

Lab Certification. The House Energy and Commerce Committee also approved a bill (HR 33) that would establish uniform standards for certifying laboratories that test urine samples for evidence of drugs. The bill would bar employers from taking disciplinary action against their employees until a positive drug test is confirmed by a second test.

Biological Weapons. The House Foreign Affairs Committee approved legislation (HR 3409) that would require the president to impose strict trade sanctions on countries that trade, produce or stockpile chemical weapons, or use such weapons on their own people. The bill would provide the president with the authority to waive the sanctions for national security reasons.

A House-Senate conference on the fiscal 1992-93 State Department reauthorization bill (HR 1415) is deadlocked over similar sanctions language, which is one reason the Foreign Affairs Committee took up the bill quickly.

Job Training. The House Education and Labor Committee approved a bill (HR 3033) last week that would revise programs under the Job Training Partnership Act to direct more of the funds to training needy people.

The measure would also focus funds only on programs that have proven to be successful. Funding would not be renewed for employers who showed a pattern of failing to retain program participants.

Census Improvement. The House Post Office and Civil Service Committee approved legislation (HR 3280) that seeks to improve the accuracy of the 2000 census.

The bill would require the Commerce Department to enter into a contract with the National Academy of Sciences to conduct a three-year study on how the next population count can be made more accurate.

Kansas National Park. The House Interior Committee approved a bill (HR 2369) that would create an 11,000-acre park to preserve some of the tallgrass prairie land in the Flint Hills of Kansas.

The bill faces opposition in Kansas, where many ranchers and farmers think they can do a better job of preserving the prairie than any government agency.

Alyeska Subpoenas. The Interior Committee also voted to subpoena documents from the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. The panel wants Alyeska and its security contractor, Wackenhut Corp., to provide additional information that the company claims is privileged.

The panel is trying to untangle the company's elaborate undercover operation that sought to find out who was leaking information about alleged environmental abuses at the trans-Alaska oil pipeline.

Drought Relief. The Senate Energy Committee approved a bill (HR 355) that would give the federal government greater power to use its resources to ease a five-year drought in the West.

The bill would lift a long-standing ban against diverting water from federal projects designed mostly to provide water for irrigation and would allow the government more flexibility in moving water where it is most needed. ■

Correction. In the Sept. 27 issue of the Monitor, it was incorrectly reported that Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., had come out in opposition to the confirmation of Clarence Thomas to be a Supreme Court justice. Packwood has not announced his position.
